Young 'doc' helped bring horses to Europe after WWII

By Ron Hayes

What do you do with a Victory ship after the victory has been won?

On Dec. 31, 1946, one of those former World War II cargo carriers, the SS Saginaw, left Newport News, Va., to cross the Atlantic.

On board were 960 horses, 30 cowboys and a very young veterinarian named Harold Burton.

A Victory ship that had once waged war was bound for Europe once again, to wage peace.

Three years earlier, 44 countries, led by the U.S., had created the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration to aid people liberated from the Axis powers.

Burton

"I had my Army discharge papers and I had a diploma from the University of Pennsylvania School of Veterinary Medicine," Burton remembers. "I had just turned 25 and I was broke and this was an opportunity to make $23 a day."

Towns agree to split cost of fire district study

By Dan Moffett

Five coastal municipalities have joined to pay for a study to explore the feasibility of forming a barrier island fire district.

The first formal vote on the idea came on Nov. 13 in Gulf Stream, when the Town Commission unanimously approved putting up $39,000 to hire Matrix Consulting Group of Keller, Texas, the low bidder among four companies that submitted study proposals.

The other four towns in the group have agreed to share in the expense: Gulf Stream, after reimbursements from its neighbors, hopes to end up paying $9,677, as will Manalapan and Ocean Ridge.

Briny Breezes and South Palm Beach will contribute $5,000 each. Highland Beach, which was considering participating, has decided to pull out and continue

Is a renaissance in the making for Artists Alley?

By Rich Pollack

The artists who remain in Artists Alley are waiting.

With their galleries and studios open for the monthly Third Thursday event that in the past drew many visitors, artists who have not left — due to higher rents — are waiting for customers.

They're also waiting for news from Delray Beach's Community Redevelopment Agency — meeting just across town at City Hall — to hear if it will move forward with stalled plans to transform a nearby 15,000-square-foot warehouse at the south end of the district into an arts incubator.

And they're waiting to see if an ambitious private/public venture, unveiled that same night before the CRA board, will transform the small colony, adding lofts and studio space for artists as well as a 250-seat performance space, townhomes, restaurants and retail space.

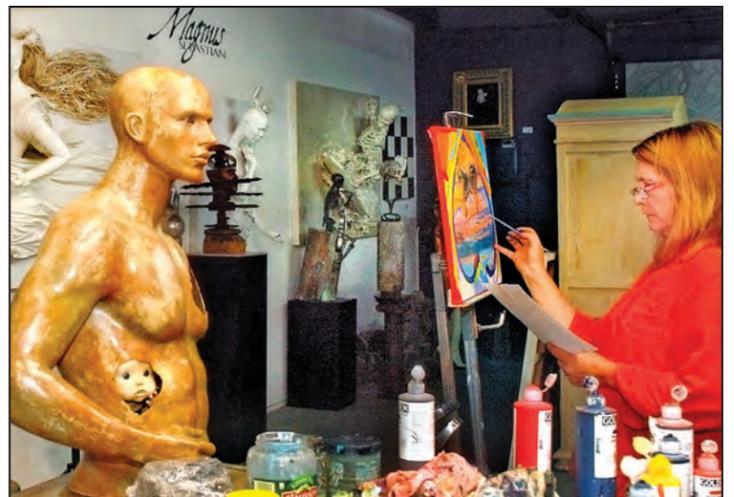

That idea for the proposed multi-use art-centric project — dubbed Artist Alley — was conceived by attorney Joe White, who purchased the row of one-bay warehouses for $4.5 million in a June bankruptcy proceeding.

But subsequent rent increases — doubling in some cases — spawned a migration of several artists away from the colony, which in its heyday was home for as many as 30 artists and sculptors.

White says his goal is not to drive artists away but rather to transform the area into a vibrant arts destination that will bring more customers. In the short term, he's already made improvements to the parking lot surface and he's working to enhance safety

Editor's Note

Happy Holidays!
Let's make an effort to be nice

The media often catch a bad rap for giving excess attention to all things outrageous. How else do you explain the Kardashians and the current fascination with every utterance of the 2016 presidential candidates?

Blame it on the 24/7 news cycle. Blame it on society's need to be constantly connected. Blame it on most media companies' business model to deliver eyeballs to advertisers.

Social media have only accelerated the mass media mentality. As we shake our fists at the television or computer screens, it's important to keep these things in mind.

This past Thanksgiving, I was thankful The Coastal Star has taken a different approach. By design we circulate a set number of newspapers each month and, because of our frequency, we don't feel the desire to chase ambulances or celebrities. We focus on providing local news, information and advertising to a select community of readers: the best in Palm Beach County, in my opinion.

We also take the liberty of not reporting on events that we determine are self-serving, defamatory or repugnant. That doesn't mean we won't report on sensitive issues or dig deeply into alleged wrongdoing. We will. It just means that personal attacks done in public settings are not necessarily what we consider news.

Sadly, 2015 offered numerous examples of dirty play in our coastal towns.

This December — as holiday stress works its way into our psyches — my hope is we can avoid personal attacks and covert maneuverings to address our coastal concerns in open and fair public forums.

My mother always said, "if you can't say anything nice, don't say it." Imagine how pleasant the holidays could be if we all took this to heart.

The Kitchen Elf brings food to Christmas tree volunteers in Delray

By Lucy Lazarony

For Al Hincken, Christmas begins in October.

For the past 11 years, Hincken has visited downtown Delray Beach restaurants each October asking for food to feed the volunteers and workers assembling the 100-foot Christmas tree in Old School Square.

He returns in November to pick up the food from each restaurant for as many as 40 people.

He wears a chef cap proclaiming himself "The Kitchen Elf" and an apron celebrating Delray's Christmas tree.

"We try to make sure nobody goes hungry. It's always ladies first, the men volunteers and whoever's here," Hincken, 72, says.

He leaves at noon to pick up lunches, soon after school kids come by to help with the tree.

Students from Carver Middle School, Atlantic High School, Village Academy, American Heritage and St. Vincent Ferrer all stop by to help the busy volunteers.

Volunteers for the Delray Beach Marketing Cooperative check all 15,000 LED light bulbs on the Christmas tree and properly align more than 3,000 tree branches. Some volunteers climb the tree to place the branches.

Volunteers work weekdays on the tree and it takes about three weeks to complete, depending on the weather, according to Tiffany Mazer, operations manager for the Delray Beach Marketing Cooperative.

On a recent day the food delivery is from The Office, burgers and veggie burgers and fries for hungry volunteers. Hincken, who worked for Philadelphia Electric before retiring 21 years ago, walks with two volunteers to pick up and deliver the food.

After the meal, volunteers sign a thank-you note that Hincken delivers to the restaurant.

"I wait for the thank-you note. That's got to go back," Hincken says.

What prompted The Kitchen Elf to get started? Hincken, who had moved to Delray Beach from Philadelphia, six months before beginning to volunteer, noticed tree volunteers were hard to come by and they were paying for their own lunches.

So he began knocking on doors. "Food brings people together," he says. "People network and they build associations and friendships and they look forward to the next day," he said.

He does, too. "I wouldn't do it if I didn't like it. The pay's the same. It makes me happy."

Real cost of ivory is decimation of elephants

While on vacation I read the article in The Coastal Star about the collector of ivory. I am greatly offended that you would promote such a barbaric hobby and Mr. Weisblut should be ashamed as well.

The primary source of ivory is the African elephant. The numbers of these highly intelligent, gentle, family-oriented animals have been decimated by 80 percent within the last century. The cause of this is the harvesting of the tusks for the Chinese ivory trade.

After the elephant is ambushed and killed and the tusks are hacked off, the remains rot in the African sun. These massive beasts are killed simply to provide trinkets for collectors. The hunters receive less than a dollar a pound for their prize while Asians and Westerners pay thousands for an item to collect dust on a shelf.

Ninety-nine out of 100 people could not tell the difference between a carved piece of porcelain or high-grade plastic and ivory.

If collectors continue their horrendous pastime, the only place you will see an elephant is in a zoo or on TV.

If people do not like to see how their sausages or steaks are made, I can assure you that most would not want to observe the origins of ivory.

Hold iPic developer to promises

Delray Beach is changing and that is healthy. Change allows us to reaffirm what makes Delray special.

The most recent addition to our downtown is a proposed iPic movie theater. It has created much discussion and emotion. Although I voted against the project, I believe it is time to embrace iPic as it moves through the final approval process. It is also time to remember the promises made by the developer.

The city's Community Redevelopment Agency has agreed to sell unique downtown property it owns at substantially less than market value. In turn, the buyer has made verbal commitments to include:

- Build Class "A" office space along with the theater.
- Move its corporate headquarters to the new Delray project.
- Dedicate at least 90 parking spaces for public use only and ensure enforcement.
- Pay for an off-duty police officer to help direct traffic on Federal Highway.
- Ensure that vehicles servicing businesses on Atlantic Avenue are not blocked on the east-west alleyway.
- Agree not to compete with existing downtown restaurants.

I suggest that all of these promises be included in the final written agreements, and further suggest that penalties be applied if the promises are not kept. For example, the buyer might be tempted to flip the property for more money after the purchase from the CRA. In that case, a penalty might include an additional payment to the CRA.

Development can destroy the character of a city or it can strengthen it. Delray Beach officials have an opportunity to make sure our Village by the Sea is strengthened.

Improvements to beach promenade questioned, delayed

By Jane Smith

Delray Beach residents will have to wait at least a year to see promised improvements along the 1.25-mile promenade along the municipal beach.

The city had planned to use a design/build contract to fast-track the project, but those types of contracts are problematic, City Manager Don Cooper said.

Instead, the design and build contracts will be separate.

"We want to do it right, not necessarily fast," he told city commissioners at their Nov. 17 meeting.

The Beach Property Owners Association revealed its latest conceptual master plan that estimated the cost to be $3.4 million including $200,000 for contingencies.

Association members, including architect Bob Currie, had donated their time over the past seven years to hold public gatherings on what residents want at the beach.

Currie's plans, updated since the September gathering, focused on new benches, showers, lighting, garbage cans, solar-powered parking meters, bike racks and pathways for the linear park. The project aims to preserve ocean vistas, create wider sidewalks and replace street furniture such as benches and garbage cans — with a little flourish.

Some commissioners preferred a subdued color palette to match the silver buttonwood and gumbo limbo trees along the beach.

Mayor Cary Glickstein liked the flourish of curved benches but questioned whether masonry walls behind them were necessary.

"Of the thousands of people who have communicated, not one said we need more masonry walls," he told Currie and BPOA members.

He also objected to the signs announcing "Delray Beach." He thought they were too "contrived" and looked like they belonged in Pompano Beach or Fort Lauderdale.

The stockade fence looked too modern to him; he said he prefers the snow fencing that needs to be replaced.

He also wanted to see elements that would make the beach accessible to disabled people.

Vice Mayor Shelly Petrolia said she liked the tall sea grape growth along the beach's south end.

But both comments were outside the scope of the current project. The sea grapes need to be trimmed, consultant Rob Barron explained, to allow their root systems to be healthy and prevent the plants from blowing over in a storm. He is in charge of the dune management plan that will include the sea grapes.

Disabled access on the beach also is not included in the group's linear park improvements. Its work stops

One proposal aims to widen sidewalks and preserve ocean vistas along A1A. Rendering provided by Bob Currie where the beach begins.

Commissioner Jordana Jarjura stressed the beach should retain its natural look. She also proposed a bike-sharing program, which other commissioners agreed could work well with the image the city is trying to project.

Rebuilding the gazebos was postponed and will be included as part of the beach master plan.

The Beach Property Owners took offense to some of the comments because they had met individually with each commissioner, except for Al Jacquet who had a scheduling problem. They showed each commissioner the conceptual plan prior to the meeting.

"It was all positive," Andy Katz, vice president, said a week later. "It's incumbent on the city commission to decide whether they will honor the charette process. They have a responsibility over spending public dollars."

Cooper will take the commissioners' comments and work with staff to create a bid for the design contract.

In other action at the Nov. 17 meeting, the commission unanimously approved a contract with its firefighters that is retroactive to Oct. 1, 2014. The 3-year agreement includes raises up to 5 percent and will cost the city about $4.2 million.

Firefighters will receive back wages and raises. Human Services Director Tennille Decoste said she wanted the firefighters to receive the extra money in their checks before Christmas. ★

Atlantic Crossing suing current town officials

By Jane Smith

The Atlantic Crossing developers amended their lawsuit against Delray Beach to focus more on the current commission members and their actions, according to the updated complaint filed Nov. 20 in federal court for the Southern District of Florida.

The complaint alleges that the mayor, vice mayor and a new commission member elected in March had all campaigned on promises to oppose the Atlantic Crossing project.

"This new legislative majority (the 'New Commission') has pursued a de facto policy to obstruct the Atlantic Crossing project by any means," according to the amended complaint.

The lawsuit lists the obstruction tactics as: demanding a two-way internal road, asking for two alleys to be returned, refusing to certify Atlantic Crossing's site plan, requiring an updated traffic study and refusing to give the project plat approval. The developers claim they have suffered in excess of $25 million in construction losses.

"The city is reviewing it and will file a response in the time allowed," City Attorney Noel Pfeffer said on Nov. 24.

The Florida Coalition for Preservation was more pointed in its response to the amended complaint. In a lengthy response sent Nov. 30 to the city commissioners and city attorney, Robert W. Ganger, Coalition chairman wrote:

"Most of all, we take exception to the rewriting of local history and allegations of improper behavior on the part of city officials, by a team of apparently desperate attorneys who are either misinformed, or purposely engaged in a 'client cover-up' action." Ganger said he hoped his response would reach outside counsel.

The proposed $200 million Atlantic Crossing sits on 9.2 acres at the northeast corner of Federal Highway and East Atlantic Avenue in the city's downtown. The project, developed by a partnership between Ohio-based Edwards Companies and Ocean Ridge resident Carl DeSantis, will contain 356 luxury condos and apartments plus 80,000 square feet of restaurants and shops and 79,000 square feet of office space.

The developers sued the city in June claiming the city has not issued a site-plan certification that was approved in November 2013 and affirmed by a previous city commission in January 2014.

The lawsuit has a May 2016 trial date in federal court in West Palm Beach with Judge Donald Middlebrook presiding. It also was assigned a federal magistrate who can help arrange settlement or mediation discussions.

A pre-trial conference is set for May 25. ★

Along the Coast

The war against saltwater intrusion is being won — for now

By Ann Henson Feltgen

Saltwater intrusion leading to contaminated drinking water wells has long been feared in South Florida.

Billions of dollars have been spent on measures to protect our water supply — mostly paid for by utilities and their customers — and have paid off, so far.

The invisible underground barrier separating salt and fresh water is holding salt water back to the 1995 boundary or even farther east, scientists say.

“This is a success,” said U.S. Geological Survey hydrologist Scott Prinos, who helps monitor saltwater intrusion in several South Florida counties. “The question is: As we move into the future and with population increases, will these measures continue to be effective?”

The barrier between fresh and salt water — called the saltwater interface — preserves the pristine water in the 3,000-square-mile Biscayne Aquifer, which supplies potable water to about 5.8 million residents in South Florida and the Florida Keys.

The struggle to forestall saltwater intrusion began in the 1930s when canals were dredged to drain the Everglades, Prinos said. As water levels declined in the spongy aquifer, salt water — which is heavier than fresh water — began to flow inland. Population pressure, drought and higher sea levels all play a part in interface movement. Although the interface is stable, it imperceptibly ebbs and flows seasonally.

Florida receives an average of 54 inches of rainfall per year, much of which seeps into the ground and refills the aquifers.

This year’s rainy season officially began May 10 with South Florida in a severe drought that extended through July. The August and September rainfall helped, but the area was still technically in a drought.

The remainder of the season is expected to have above average rainfall due to the effects of an El Niño, according to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

The South Florida Water Management District, which governs potable water for South Florida, has for years been nudging municipalities to control their water usage by adopting conservation measures, installing reverse osmosis plants that can convert the brackish water from the deep Floridan Aquifer into drinking water and storing water during the rainy season for use in dry periods. Last year, these conservation measures were mandated by state law.

Previously, the carrot at the end of the water district’s stick was a water use permit that allows specific withdrawal amounts from the Biscayne Aquifer for up to 20 years. Now South Florida communities and counties are spending billions of dollars to adopt the latest technology and build new facilities, passing along the cost to residents and businesses in increased fees.

For its part, the water district has been upgrading and monitoring water control structures that also retard saltwater intrusion, said Pete Kwiatkowski, a SFWMD hydrologist and manager of the resource evaluation section.

The agency also provides substantial grants to cities, special districts and utilities for these projects. The agency issues a request for proposals, then reviews the projects based on a list of criteria and available funding. The projects must be considered nontraditional, such as aquifer storage and recovery, reverse osmosis plants and reclaimed wastewater used for irrigation. Since 1997, the agency has approved $1.4 billion in funding for 488 projects.

Local efforts

Because the elevation of Palm Beach County is much higher than counties farther south, the advance of saltwater intrusion is less. But efforts are underway by Palm Beach County cities and range from taking less water out of the Biscayne Aquifer and more water from the Floridan Aquifer, rotating well usage, using water storage, reclaiming water for irrigation to eliminating withdrawals from the aquifer entirely.

Boca Raton, the second-largest city in Palm Beach County, stores water by back pumping excess runoff into canals, where the water percolates into the ground and the Biscayne Aquifer for use during the dry season. The city also maintains canal levels at a fixed rate to keep salt water from intruding. The city uses reclaimed water for irrigation.

Boynton Beach officials learned five years ago that saltwater intrusion may become a problem for some of the city’s wells east of Interstate 95, so they reduced usage of those wells from 16 million gallons per day to 5 million gallons per day. Boynton Beach provides water to Ocean Ridge and Briny Breezes.

Delray Beach city commissioners on Sept. 3 approved a study to look at alternative water supplies and methods to meet the city’s demand. The study will look at using deeper wells and different treatment. A new plant would be included in the plan. The city has hired a firm to weigh the alternatives and costs.

Highland Beach taps the Floridan Aquifer and a reverse osmosis plant desalinates up to 3 million gallons of water per day. The city uses maybe half of that even during the winter season. Because the town taps into the deeper aquifer and uses desalination, Highland Beach residents are not subject to water restrictions.

Lantana operates 10 wells scattered throughout the town and provides water to 3,300 customers. The town’s water supply, which comes from the Biscayne Aquifer, is adequate and growth will not crimp the supply.

Manalapan’s wells are all on the west side of U.S. 1 and have not had a problem with saltwater intrusion. The town operates six wells, two of which tap into the Floridan Aquifer and require reverse osmosis to take out the salt water. Manalapan is in discussions with Boynton Beach about taking over Manalapan’s water plant.

West Palm Beach silenced its wells that tapped into the Biscayne Aquifer in 2012 and the city began relying on groundwater. The water utility does not face saltwater intrusion or worry about sea level rise, and the supply is a renewable resource. West Palm Beach provides water to the town of Palm Beach and to South Palm Beach.

The future

Much has been said about the effects of climate change and what it may mean for South Florida’s potable water supply.

“It’s too early to declare a victory over saltwater intrusion,” said Eric Draper, executive director of Audubon Florida, which supports and stresses conservation of natural resources, including water. “Saltwater intrusion is also a matter of sea level rise, and we don’t know what will happen. As sea levels rise, it puts more pressure to move the salt water that’s underground. I don’t know if we have studied that yet.”

Scientists agree that climate change is a factor, but say efforts are taking place to save the aquifer and, as technology continues to advance, more strategies will come into play.

USGS’s Prinos said South Florida governments are working together to identify areas of concern and come up with proactive solutions.

“We maintain salinity control structures, relocate wells that are very close to the coast farther west, we are using [best] practices with water conservation and some cities are using reclaimed water for irrigation,” he said.

Prinos added that technology now allows pinpointing where the saltwater interface is and whether it is moving east or west.

During mapping in 2011, the agency deployed helicopters equipped with electromagnetic technology that can precisely determine where the interface is located. Formerly, the salinity in sentinel wells along either side of the interface was used to determine if salt water was moving.

“In some cases, we had the front farther west than it really was,” Prinos said.

“As we move into the future, we will continue to be vigilant, watching and considering ways to hold it back.” ★

Circuit judge rules for O'Boyle and O'Hare

By Dan Moffett

A Palm Beach County Circuit Court judge has echoed the words of a federal ruling in dismissing the town of Gulf Stream's conspiracy complaint over hundreds of public records requests filed by residents Martin O'Boyle and Chris O'Hare.

Circuit Judge Richard Oftedal ruled on Nov. 4 that O'Boyle and O'Hare have the "absolute right under current Florida law to file public record requests and then file lawsuits if the requests went unanswered."

Oftedal threw out the town's request for an injunction halting new requests from the two men and said their lawsuits and claims for attorney's fees should go forward.

The judge's ruling against Gulf Stream came with a dose of empathy for the town's predicament in dealing with the onslaught of records requests, however.

"The court is neither unmindful nor unsympathetic with the plight of Gulf Stream, a small municipality of only 17 permanent employees, who, if the allegations are true, are being forced to divert taxpayer monies earmarked for public services in order to address the avalanche of public records requests being filed for no purpose other than to harass and shake down the town by fear and the threat of having to pay attorneys' fees under the statute," Oftedal wrote. "While Gulf Stream may well be the poster boy for those victimized by individuals seeking to 'game the system' by suing public agencies, it is hardly alone."

The judge said relief for the town and other municipalities would have to come from the Florida Legislature, which could change the law. Oftedal's ruling aligned with that of U.S. District Court Judge Kenneth Marra, who in June threw out the town's civil RICO (Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations) suit against the two men. The town's attorneys are appealing that dismissal.

"Thankfully, for citizens, journalists and data collectors, Judge Oftedal is not alone and is part of a growing trend of courts refusing to use their judicial powers to prevent people from exercising civil rights," said Jonathan O'Boyle, Martin's son and an attorney named as a defendant in the town's cases, who criticized Mayor Scott Morgan for not pursuing a settlement.

Morgan has said the town is willing to negotiate when O'Boyle and O'Hare agree to drop their lawsuits and make a serious proposal to the town's attorneys.

The O'Boyles have urged town commissioners to form a panel of residents and officials to help broker a settlement.

"Morgan is crazy if he thinks that he can resolve this issue without a sit-down," Jonathan O'Boyle said. "In my opinion, attributable to me and no one else, a sit-down is mandatory."

In other business:

- The Florida Commission on Ethics has dismissed O'Hare's complaint against Town Attorney John Randolph. O'Hare had accused the town of an improper contractual arrangement with Randolph that allowed him to directly pass work on to his law firm. The commission found "no probable cause to believe that he (Randolph) misused his public position to benefit himself, his law firm, or others."

- Residents will notice a $30 fee added to their water bills next year. The surcharge is to build the town's utility fund to prepare for problems with the aging infrastructure. Many of the town's water pipes are more than 50 years old and living on borrowed time, officials say, and a failure can cost more than $1 million to repair. ★

Ex-Mayor Diamond replacing Thornton on Manalapan commission

By Dan Moffett

A familiar face is returning to the Manalapan Town Commission.

Basil Diamond, who served as mayor from 2011 to 2013 and six years as a commissioner before that, will fill the open Point Manalapan commission seat vacated by Tom Thornton, who has moved out of town.

On Nov. 17, commissioners unanimously approved Diamond's appointment and said his experience would be useful to them.

Mayor David Cheifetz said he was "absolutely delighted" Diamond was willing to serve out the remainder of Thornton's term, which expires in March 2017.

"It's a good choice to get someone of Tom Thornton's experience," said Peter Isaac, "and getting Basil back would give that experience."

Diamond

As part of the commission reshuffling, Isaac moves from mayor pro tem to the vice mayor position that Thornton held, and Commissioner Chauncey Johnstone takes over as the new mayor pro tem.

Diamond, a lawyer, is partly responsible for the rather complicated configuration of Manalapan's elected representatives. In 2002, he led a group of Point residents who sued the town, claiming they were under-represented because oceanfront homeowners controlled two commission districts with four commissioners on the six-member board — despite having fewer residents than the Point.

A federal judge ultimately agreed and threw out that system. Then voters approved the current apportionment which requires two seats to be held by ocean residents, two by Point residents, and two other seats and the mayor elected on an at-large basis from anywhere in town. But all voters cast ballots for each seat.

The new commission lineup could be set for a while. Town Clerk Lisa Petersen said the three commissioners whose terms expire in March —

Simone Bonutti, Clark Appleby and Ronald Barsanti — have all said they plan to serve another term, and no challengers have come forward. Manalapan's qualifying period for the March 15 election began Nov. 24 and runs until Dec. 8, earlier than usual because the municipal voting will occur the same day as the presidential preference primary.

In other business, work on the Audubon Causeway bridge project has gotten underway, but is still moving slower than commissioners would like.

"It seems like it's taking forever to get the ball rolling," Cheifetz said.

Isaac, the town's liaison for the project, attributed recent delays to an excess of bureaucracy between the town's engineer and the contractor.

He said he was hopeful that the town can work with both parties to streamline the engineering oversight, eliminate redundant reviews and improve communication between consultants, saving time and perhaps money.

"The contractor has been just as frustrated with the delays as we are," Town Manager Linda Stumpf said of Drawdy Construction's support for changing the engineering procedures.

Isaac said by early December, workers should have installed a barrier to separate two 11-foot lanes on the bridge, and then will begin "sawing away" the south side.

Traffic will remain open throughout construction, which is expected to continue well into spring. ★

South Palm Beach

Paragon still plans to build condos on Oceanfront Inn site

By Dan Moffett

After months of silence, South Palm Beach officials and developer Gary Cohen are talking again about his Oceanfront Inn property.

The Paragon Acquisition Group chief executive officer met with new Town Manager Bob Vitas and Mayor Bonnie Fischer in November. Vitas and Fischer said Cohen promised to complete the demolition of the old Palm Beach Oceanfront Inn in a timely manner, then begin building the 33-unit condominium project the town has approved.

"It's going to be a long process," Fischer said. "We'll see if the building ever gets built. It's a very small property with a large building going on."

Vitas said the purpose of the meeting was "to clear the air and make sure that everybody was on the same page. I'm not a referee, but I'm a good mediator."

Cohen, according to Vitas and Fischer, said the property isn't for sale. But other town officials aren't so sure.

"I think he is trying to sell it," said Councilman Woodrow Gorbach, a real estate agent. "It is on the market — the European market. I don't really believe him."

Since the spring, HFF commercial real estate brokers in Miami has run an Internet ad that lists the property and its approved development plan as for sale. Cohen paid $8.25 million for the property in 2013. Vitas said that "if somebody offered him double what he paid for it," there's no reason to think he wouldn't sell.

Among the other discussion points:

- Cohen told Vitas and Fischer he intends to have the sea wall completed by the March 1 permit deadline. Fischer said she expects more inspections of the wall construction from state environmental officials in the weeks ahead.

- Shortly after the wall's finished, Cohen said, he intends to concentrate on demolition of the hotel and wants it to be done by June.

"Beyond that," Vitas said, "he plans going forward with the physical construction of the property."

- The town officials told Cohen to talk to neighboring property owners and keep them informed. Fischer said residents were concerned about the vibration from construction and demolition. She urged him to take steps to minimize that.

"He understands there are many watchful eyes on it," Vitas said. "I advised him to reach out to the neighbors."

Fischer said the town had no contact with Paragon or Cohen for most of the year. Not having a town manager on the job since June has hindered communications, council members said.

Artist's rendering of the condos planned for the former site of the Palm Beach Oceanfront Inn. Rendering provided

"We agreed that we'd meet on a regular basis," Vitas said. "I want to be kept up to date on what's going on. We're going to be monitoring it closely."

In other business from the Nov. 17 town meeting:

- Vitas said he intends to have a "90-day action plan" ready for the council to review in December. "I'm not going to tell you what to do," he said. "I want you to tell me what you'd like to have done."

Vitas, the former Key West city manager, succeeds Jim Pascale, who abruptly resigned in June after three months on the job.

"I actually heard people laughing in their offices this week," said Councilman Robert Gottlieb of Vitas' welcome arrival.

- Police Chief Carl Webb has promoted Lt. Robert Rizzotto to commander and hired Richard Scott Stevens as a new part-time patrol officer. Rizzotto and Stevens worked together with the New York City Police Department years ago. ★

Briny Breezes

By Dan Moffett

In May, Briny Breezes passed what it thought was a comprehensive golf cart ordinance that would clarify how and where residents can use their vehicles around town.

As it turns out, when it comes to golf carts, clarity is itself a moving target.

On Nov. 19, Briny's corporate board approved a plan to spend $75,000 for widening a sidewalk and constructing a golf cart crossing on State Road A1A. The plan would satisfy a state law regarding golf carts crossing state roads.

The approval raised new questions, however. Where would the crossing be located? That's up to the Florida Department of Transportation, Town Council President Sue Thaler said, and DOT hasn't decided.

Also, in giving its blessing and its money to the crossing project, the corporate board wants the town to enforce several requirements on golf cart operators: They should carry insurance, have valid driver licenses and be registered, board liaison Joe Coyner told the council.

Those requirements may not be compatible with the new ordinance, Town Attorney John Skrandel said. More research is needed.

"We may not be able to require these things," Skrandel said.

Briny Mayor Mike Hill thinks it's not a good idea to require driver licenses. A significant number of residents don't have them because of age or physical infirmity. Yet, they have no problems operating golf carts on the town's quiet streets. In fact, some residents need the carts to get around and stay mobile.

"It's not uncommon, particularly for people in their 80s and 90s who are perfectly capable of driving a golf cart, to not have driver licenses," Hill said.

Then there is the matter of who owns Old Ocean Boulevard and what vehicles should be allowed on it.

In researching the ordinance, Skrandel found that the town never formally received the deed to the road decades ago, so technically it still belongs to the state. So technically, again, when residents operate golf carts that aren't street-legal on the road, they are violating the law.

Skrandel said he heard from the DOT in November, and state officials say they're willing to formally give Old Ocean to the town for no charge, perhaps in relatively short order by the end of the year.

Meanwhile, golf cart owners must weigh the nebulous pros and cons of spending thousands of dollars to convert recreational golf carts to street-legal, "low-speed vehicles."

The state requires LSVs that have top speeds between 20 and 25 mph to have much of the standard equipment you'd find on family autos: headlights, stoplights, turn signals, parking brakes, reflectors, windshields, windshield wipers, seat belts, horns and vehicle ID numbers.

Converting a cart from use on the golf course to use as a street-legal LSV can run anywhere from $2,000 to $5,000, residents say. And once you convert to LSV, you can no longer legally operate your cart on sidewalks.

Thaler said council members should know more about where golf cart policy is heading by the Dec. 17 town meeting.

In other business:

• Deputy Town Clerk Steven Cooper said that qualifying for the March 15 municipal election ended on Nov. 24 with no new candidates coming forward to challenge incumbent council members' seats. Though Briny voters won't have to select aldermen, they will have the chance to go to the polls for the presidential preference primary that day. ★

Boat parade back on course to travel through Delray

By Jane Smith

The Holiday Boat Parade will travel down the Intracoastal Waterway on Dec. 11 through Boynton Beach and Delray Beach for the 44th year, but the Delray Beach part almost didn't happen.

The Delray Beach city manager, who just started in January, learned in mid-November that the city's non-participation was called out on social media as "being the Grinch." That's the first he heard of the Holiday Boat Parade, Don Cooper said.

Delray Beach had passed its budget in September and it didn't include money for the boat parade, Cooper said. "But we will do what we did last year. Open the bridges and staff them with police," he said.

At the Nov. 10 meeting of the Boynton Beach Community Redevelopment Agency, board members learned the boat parade was not going into Delray Beach. It's the second year that the CRA is running the boat parade. Previously Boynton Beach city staff had run the boat parade after a local Kiwanis group had organized it for decades.

"We had reached out to the new (Delray Beach) Parks and Recreation Director, but never heard back," Vivian Brooks, CRA executive director, told the board. "My concern is that we are sending our boats into Delray Beach — same as last year — it's a whole other city, and is that a wise use of CRA tax dollars?"

"We had a commitment last year to help offset the costs from Mr. (Reeve) Bright of Delray Beach but received nothing," Brooks said.

Bright, who ran the boat parade with the Kiwanis for more than 30 years, could not be reached for comment. In 2014, he told the Boynton Beach CRA board that in those years the city of Boynton Beach never contributed money for the boat parade.

The 2015 Holiday Boat Parade will start at the base of the Lantana Bridge, then travel south through Boynton Beach and Delray Beach where it will end at the C-15 canal. ★

Delray developer Pugliese begins jail sentence

By Dan Moffett

At the height of his influence a decade ago, Delray Beach-based developer Anthony Pugliese III oversaw the biggest land deal in Central Florida since Disney World and sat on Palm Beach County's Judicial Nominating Commission that selects local judges. The day before Thanksgiving, the 68-year-old Gulf Stream resident stood before one of those judges and asked for a bit of leniency. Pugliese wanted to spend the holiday weekend at his $28 million waterfront home before reporting to Palm Beach County Jail on Monday morning.

Circuit Judge Glenn Kelley granted the request, over the objections of prosecutors.

A plea deal negotiated by Lee County prosecutor James Miller will send Pugliese to jail for six months, followed by 10 years' probation, as punishment for complicated scams perpetrated against Fred DeLuca, the co-founder of the Subway restaurant chain.

In August, Pugliese pleaded no contest to fraud and theft charges stemming from a failed partnership with DeLuca to develop a 61-square-mile property near Yeehaw Junction that was to be known as Destiny, Florida. Pugliese admitted in court depositions that he created sham companies with phony addresses and fake invoices to siphon off roughly $1.2 million of DeLuca's money.

Pugliese and DeLuca had accused each other of fraud, with Pugliese suing the Subway magnate six years ago for $5 billion in civil court. The lawsuits between the men remain unresolved. Pugliese blamed DeLuca for an illegal financing scheme that allegedly profited him more than $20 million, and each accused the other of stealing Destiny's money and using it for lavish personal expenditures.

The partners also fought cancer as they fought each other. DeLuca died in September, losing his battle with leukemia. Douglas Duncan, Pugliese's attorney, told Kelley that the "serious and significant health issues" associated with his client's cancer treatment were reason enough to allow him a final weekend at home before he reported to jail.

Besides incarceration, Pugliese had to pay more than $1 million in restitution to DeLuca's estate. Pugliese has said he accepted the plea deal to spare his family the stress of a lengthy trial and to deal with his health problems.

"I'm glad it's over," he said on leaving Kelley's courtroom. Miller was brought into the case from Fort Myers because of conflicts of interest arising from Pugliese's political connections. The developer donated money to Palm Beach County State Attorney Dave Aronberg's election campaign.

After his arrest in 2012, Pugliese was removed from the Judicial Nominating Commission by Gov. Rick Scott.

All told, prosecutors had filed more than a dozen charges against Pugliese that, with convictions, could have sent him to prison for decades.

Destiny was to have been one of the country's largest eco-sustainable communities, and its green design earned praise from the Clinton Foundation. Osceola County officials at first backed the project, but state agencies did not, claiming the development would add to urban sprawl and clog roadways.

In South Florida, Pugliese Development Co. built the Crystal Corporate Center in Boca Raton and helped develop the Pineapple Grove District in Delray Beach.

In 2010, as Destiny was falling apart, Pugliese gave $150,000 to build a baseball diamond for disabled children in Delray — The Anthony V. Pugliese Miracle League Field in Miller Park. ★ lighting.

"We're trying to invigorate the area," he said. "We want to give the artists a place where they can be successful."

Still, the future of Artists Alley remains awash in question marks, with plans for the area in the Pineapple Grove Arts District painted with uncertainty.

"I thought I'd be here for the rest of my days," says artist Vincent Cacace, a driving force behind the creation of the artists colony. "Now I'm not sure how long I'll be here."

Amid the precariousness, however, Artists Alley is far from dead.

"There are still a lot of artists here," said Susan Romaine, who has a separate studio and now a new gallery she opened with framer Maggie Walker. "There are 10 artists on Northeast Third Avenue alone."

By Cacace's count, there are still about 20 artists remaining in the area.

In their new gallery, Walker and Romaine host the works of several of the half dozen or so former Artists Alley tenants who have moved away.

"One of the reasons we opened was to give them space for their work," Walker said. "We want to showcase the displaced artists."

Delray Beach's Arts Garage is also joining in the efforts to showcase the works of displaced artists on the third Thursday of every month in what is being called Artpop!

"We're going to try to accommodate as many as we can," said Alyona Ushe, the president and CEO of the Arts Garage.

Also helping to attract people to the area is the Market in the Grove, a collection of craftspeople offering a variety of items, including jewelry, that is set up on Third Avenue on third Thursdays.

Both are seen by artists as complementing Artists Alley's events and helping to bring arts patrons to the area.

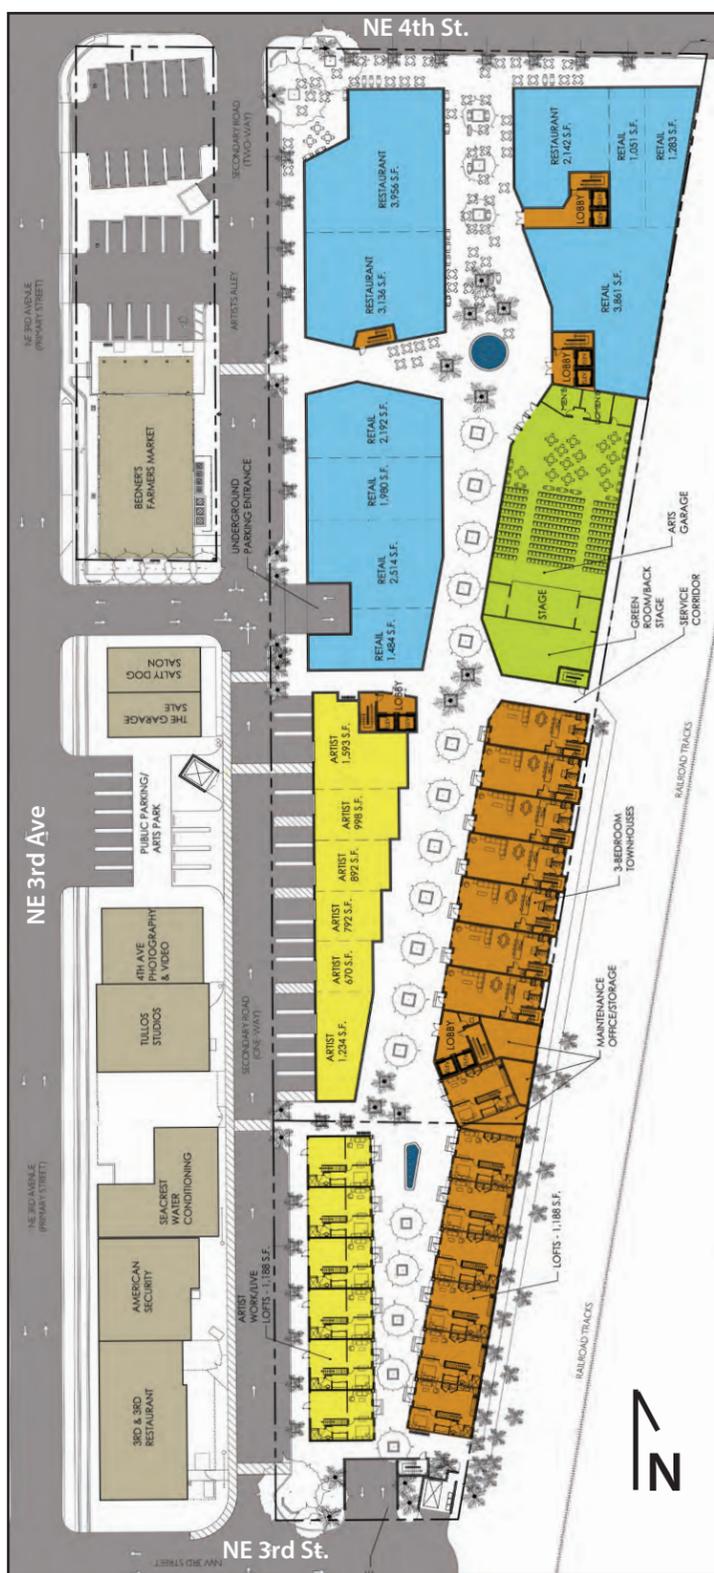

Just last month, Brenda Gordon and Magnus Sebastian moved their Magnus & Gordon Gallery into a larger space closer to Cacace's gallery.

"We've signed a new lease," Gordon said. "We looked at many different places and it's still a good deal."

Despite what seems like a constant evolution, Cacace — even before White's plans were unveiled — spoke optimistically about Artists Alley's future.

"This could be an international arts district," he said. "It has the bones for it." ★

Jane Smith and Lucy Lazarony contributed to this story.

Delray seeks grants, partner for plan to revive arts district

The fate of what has been dubbed the Arts Warehouse, a 15,000-square-foot building in Artists Alley purchased by Delray Beach's Community Redevelopment Agency in 2010, remains as uncertain as that of the surrounding area.

Little has been done to the warehouse, initially envisioned as an arts incubator — with art classes, gallery space and room for studios that artists could rent — since it was purchased five years ago.

But at its Nov. 19 meeting, the CRA board gave new life to the idea of an arts incubator, voting to seek grant money for the project and also requesting that staff members explore the possibility of finding a partner to help make the warehouse a reality.

During that same meeting, attorney Joe White, who earlier this year purchased the row of warehouse buildings to the north that are a major part of Artists Alley, introduced another option for the building.

White would like to see it bulldozed to make way for a block-long mixed use project he envisions for the area that would include studio space for artists, townhomes, retail space as well as a performance center.

"We're trying to unify the arts in one location," said White, who plans to have further discussions with the CRA about the proposal.

For now, however, uncertainty remains.

Town gets $10,000 from Eau Palm Beach for construction easement

By Willie Howard

The Town Council accepted a $10,000 payment from the Eau Palm Beach Resort & Spa during its Nov. 9 meeting as compensation for a temporary construction easement at the town beach.

The resort, formerly the Ritz-Carlton Palm Beach, has been using the temporary easement, originally approved in October, to cross property at the south end of the town beach while renovating its outdoor Breeze restaurant and pool deck.

The resort originally agreed to rebuild the south stairs at the beach, which washed away in a storm, in exchange for the easement. But because of potential legal problems with building on town property and obtaining permits, the council agreed to accept the $10,000 fee instead.

The easement is needed to move paver bricks and other materials onto the resort's pool deck.

Work is expected to be completed this month. The temporary easement expires Dec. 15. Under the agreement, the resort must pay the town $1,000 a day for each day it continues to use town property

Trucks working on the renovation of Eau Palm Beach Resort's outdoor restaurant and pool deck are parked near the south entrance to Lantana beach on Nov. 12. A temporary construction easement expires Dec. 15. Willie Howard/The Coastal Star after Dec. 15.

Mayor David Stewart said trucks delivering materials for the project were blocking the south entrance to the beach parking lot and dripping concrete slurry on the town's access road when he stopped by the beach in early November.

When Stewart began taking photos of the trucks, he said, one of the workers was rude and told him he had a permit from Manalapan to block the road.

The mayor said pickup trucks loaded with construction materials were occupying numbered spaces at the beach parking lot but were not paying by the hour to park as required.

During the Nov. 9 council meeting, Stewart said he had assurances from Harvey Oyer III, attorney for the resort, that there would be no more problems with construction trucks interfering with traffic at the town beach during the remainder of the project.

"I'm going to check it," Stewart told Damian Presiga, the resort's construction manager. "I will not be happy if it happens again."

Town manager gets raise

Also on Nov. 9, the Town Council voted unanimously to extend Town Manager Deborah Manzo's contract for another year and to give her a 5 percent raise.

Manzo, who replaced Michael Bornstein as town manager in May 2012, will earn $125,921 annually under her new contract.

Her 5 percent raise is at the top end of the range of merit raises offered to the town's general employees, based on their evaluations.

"She does not expect anything more than town employees get," Councilman Lynn Moorhouse said.

Stewart said Manzo has done "a great job," even though he has disagreed with her at times.

Manzo thanked residents and the Greater Lantana Chamber of Commerce for helping move the town forward.

"Working together, we've been able to accomplish a lot," she said. ★

Delray implementing restrictions for sidewalk cafes

By Jane Smith

Downtown Delray Beach restaurants that want to have sidewalk cafes on public property now have amended rules to follow.

City commissioners decided Nov. 10 that Atlantic Avenue restaurants east of the Intracoastal Waterway with a 6-foot pedestrian path could have tables along the curb and along the storefront. The city's engineering department had said restaurants have to choose one, but planning staff said the eateries could have both.

West of the waterway, along

Atlantic Avenue, restaurants need a 7-foot-wide path to be able to place tables along the curb and the storefront.

No tables will be allowed on Second Avenue where Gary Rack's Fat Rooster and The Office previously had sidewalk tables. "There are too many people there all of the time," Mayor Cary Glickstein said at the workshop. "There are people lining up to get into the restaurants, people stopping to chat with diners." Plus, the Second Avenue sidewalk sits next to a travel lane where there is no barrier between the road and the tables, he said.

"Up until two weeks ago, we had six tables out there (on Southeast Second Avenue)," Nic Henderson, general manager of Fat Rooster, said in mid-November. He referred further explanation to Gary Rack, restaurant owner, who could not be reached.

The Office also had tables on Northeast Second Avenue where it did not have the required 6-foot clearance. The restaurant had applied for a waiver but was denied. A manager directed questions to its parent corporation, BurgerFi, in North Palm Beach. But no one there could be reached for comment.

Also, the commission decided staff could not enforce the ordinance on private property.

Michael Coleman, Community Improvement director who oversees the code enforcement workers, had sought direction from the commission. His staff was caught between the looser restrictions of the planning staff and the stricter interpretations of the engineering staff.

Restaurants pay a $150 annual fee and $4.75 per square foot to have a sidewalk café.

"We work with the owners to get a solution," Coleman said. "The ordinance calls for a 6-foot clearance, but some restaurants have only 5-feet-plus because of trees or power poles on their sidewalks. We will work with them."

He tells his staff to use discretion and common sense when working with the restaurant owners to enforce the sidewalk café ordinance.

In the nearly 12 months he's run the department, his code enforcement team has not cited a restaurant.

"We want to create a safe place for all people to be able to enjoy the downtown and allow the restaurant owners to make money," Coleman said. ★

City looks at tweaks to iPic project; follow-up traffic study planned

By Jane Smith

Delray Beach planning staff is reviewing the latest changes submitted by the proposed iPic movie theater to ensure the revisions comply with city rules and a commission directive to reduce the project's size.

The question remains whether the developer's changes are enough to allow the project to proceed through the city's approval process. Next stop would be the Dec. 16 Site Plan Review and Approval Board. As of press time, planners were still reviewing the submission.

The iPic project received approval at an Aug. 18 city commission meeting. Mayor Cary Glickstein asked the company to reduce the size and "let some air out of the tires," but he did not give specifics.

The latest plan shows small changes in the project, but it's unclear whether they addressed the mayor's concerns.

It now has 31 fewer seats among the eight movie auditoriums for a total of 498 seats, an alley that is 4 feet wider at 24 feet, the retail square footage was reduced by 499 square feet to 7,487 and the office space grew slightly by 708 square feet to nearly 42,000.

"The areas of elevator/stair access space greatly increased because now the third-level outdoor terrace is accessible by the public," Bonnie Miskel, an iPic land-use attorney, wrote Nov. 20. She was responding to questions from principal planner Scott Pape. "This has affected every floor in the building."

Commissioner Mitch Katz had asked for public access to the terrace.

Another area of disagreement was the number of public parking spaces provided. Pape said 98 spaces needed to be supplied, but Miskel countered that iPic had agreed to provide 90 spaces and that it would add four from a nearby property that will be part of the project.

"There is no reason to slow down the design process over the management and maintenance of the public parking," Miskel wrote. "We have addressed the design questions related to the spaces by showing the public parking spaces' location and the location of the gate."

She also agreed to place signs on southbound Federal Highway indicating that dropping off of movie patrons is prohibited, encourage valet use so that movie patrons don't park in the public spaces and to do a traffic study in one year from its final approval to determine the number of conflicts created by vehicles stopping on southbound Federal to drop off movie-goers.

In addition, the inability of the iPic owners to purchase the city's Community Redevelopment Agency-owned Old Library Site for $3.6 million in the current budget year has affected the CRA's finances.

At the Nov. 19 CRA meeting, six board members agreed to extend the interest-only payments on the CRA's 2012 bonds for two years and move the maturity date to Oct. 1, 2020. CRA member Cathy Balestriere was absent.

The money must be used for public projects to allow the bond holders to avoid paying federal income tax on the interest earned.

The CRA board also approved securing a $2 million revolving line of credit for three years with interest-only payments at a 2.78 percent interest rate from City National Bank. The CRA already has a $1.3 million line of credit from that bank. ★

Appeal to inspector general fails to affect iPic approval

By Jane Smith

The county's inspector general won't be getting involved in the Delray Beach City Commission's decision to allow an iPic movie theater to open in its downtown.

On Aug. 18, the City Commission held a quasi-judicial hearing on the iPic project that will include eight movie theaters, office space in two levels, retail space along Southeast Fourth Avenue and a three-level parking garage.

The hearing spilled over into the next morning when commissioners voted 4-1 for the theater concept, 3-2 for the alley abandonment and 3-2 for the height increase.

Vice Mayor Shelly Petrolia, who voted no to all three, filed a complaint Aug. 21 with the Inspector General's Office.

She objected to the city giving the alley to iPic's owners, which she said violated the city's land use regulations that say rights of way should not be abandoned if needed for a public purpose.

The Inspector General's Office responded in late September to Petrolia.

The office does not have the authority that allows "reweighing evidence presented to duly-elected officials in their official capacities at quasi-judicial hearings or substituting our judgment with regard to discretionary decisions."

"I understand their decision and I respect it," Petrolia said. "I don't think they wanted to insert themselves in a decision-making process by a city commission."

"But I am disappointed we violated our rules and didn't follow our own codes." ★

Park docks closed for safety review

By Jane Smith

Delray Beach closed its public boat docks at Veterans Park in late November while it assesses the stability of the structures at 802 NE First St.

The city sent out a consulting engineer to review the stability of the docks and seawall at the park, the docks at the city's marina and also a portion of Marine Way between Southeast First Street and the Deck 84 restaurant, said Randal Krejcarek, director of Environmental Services.

That report won't be finished until early next year when it will be reviewed by the city commission for possible fixes, Krejcarek said.

"The elevation of the Intracoastal Waterway is actually higher than the road (portion of Marine Way)," he said. "We want to be sure the road can handle the weight of a garbage truck without cracking the water main" that lies 30 inches below the road surface. Traffic is limited to residents only in that area.

That portion of Marine Way shows erosion and cracking, made worse by the king tides in late October, Krejcarek said.

The other areas of Veterans Park remain open, the city said. ★

Delray coach encourages young batoners to give it a twirl

By Emily J. Minor

Each Thursday, right after the afternoon bell, Jeanne Chwalik's youngest proteges scramble into the gymnasium at St. Vincent Ferrer School in Delray Beach. They're little, and sometimes not all that keen about paying attention this time of day.

After all, mastering the "around-the-world" baton trick can be almost as tiring as practicing your lower-case letters, especially when you're 5.

Their mentors — older students Chwalik has worked with for years — are already in the gym, warming up, music going, getting ready to keep everyone in line.

Then in floats Miss Jeanne, adorable and smiling, the woman who for 50 years has kept everyone coming and going — to Nationals and Twirl Mania and even the Macy's Holiday Parade in Orlando.

"It's my creativity," says Chwalik, 73, who began teaching twirling when she was 16. "I don't paint. I don't sing. I twirl."

Baton twirling dates back centuries, although our predecessors used guns and knives and flames to show off their twirling skills. "Twirling requires a lot of agility," Chwalik says.

But ever since Chwalik fell in love with twirling back in Niles, Ohio, she's worked to pass on her passion to generations of youngsters, mostly female. When she first came to Florida in 1965, her twirling troupe was called the Delray Beach Debs, as in debutantes. Today, they perform as the South Florida Dynamics, a name they've held since 1998.

Chwalik and her performers are nationally recognized and have been to Australia, the Netherlands, Vancouver and, yes, even Jacksonville, to compete. They march in the Delray Beach Christmas parade. They make the trek to Orlando to march in the holiday parade at Universal.

And all that twirling, a lot of it in sync with the girl to your left and the girl to your right, takes practice — the younger kids on Thursday, the older ones the day before.

"I always say I don't care whether we win or lose," says Chwalik, smiling. "But I really do."

With her firm schoolteacher voice, pretty face and understanding smile, Chwalik teaches the girls not just about their step-ball-changes, two-turn twirls and blind catches. She teaches them about team building and persistence, dedication and passion. She also knows how to laugh.

"Miss Jeanne is amazing," says Erin Craig, a pharmacist at the family-owned Gulfstream Pharmacy in Briny Breezes, whose daughter, Lexi, now

LEFT: Jeanne Chwalik has been mentoring young twirlers in Palm Beach County for more than 50 years. Photos by Jerry Lower/The Coastal Star

Parent Jennifer Vancek says her two young daughters, Reese, 8, and Elliette, 6, have fallen in love with twirling — just like their grandmother did when she herself was little. Vancek never took up baton twirling, but her mother did. "It definitely is a big part of their bonding, that's for sure," Vancek says about her mother and her two girls.

Lindsey Finkel, 23, Chwalik's chief assistant and considered her top protege to direct the Dynamics when Chwalik retires, says she's constantly running into people, just about everywhere, who once twirled under Chwalik. Finkel has been twirling since she was 3.

"I started at the civic center and they just kind of realized I had potential, so they moved me up," Finkel says. "My friends, when they see me twirl, they have a new kind of respect. Everyone just always thinks of the majorette when you say twirling."

Indeed, it was the quintessential 1950s majorette that got Chwalik interested in baton twirling, and thus changed the lives of so many schoolgirls.

Chwalik can remember being at home when she heard the local high school band marching down her street on the way to practice.

She looked out the window of their house on Wade Avenue in Niles, saw young women twirling batons, and fell in love. "I just remember thinking,

'Oh, I want to do that,' " she recalls.

So she has, for nearly 60 years now, bringing grace and confidence to her students in Palm Beach County.

Of course, with all those kids swinging all those batons, practice is rarely drama-free.

"We have ice on somebody just about every week," Chwalik notes.

Because when you're one of Miss Jeanne's Dynamics, the show must go on. ★

Highland Beach/Delray Beach

Negotiations underway for fire truck, rescue vehicle

By Rich Pollack

The town of Highland Beach, which has been without a fire truck of its own since the summer, is wrapping up negotiations with Delray Beach on a proposed long-term contract in which the larger city would provide a fire truck and a rescue vehicle while continuing to staff both.

At the same time, Highland Beach town leaders have not stopped looking at additional fire-service alternatives, including using services and equipment from other nearby communities.

"We're about 90 percent there but there's always that last 10 percent," said Highland Beach Town Attorney Glen Torcivia. "We're not closing the door on any other options."

The town has had discussions with representatives from Boca Raton, Boynton Beach and Palm Beach County Fire Rescue, Torcivia said. The town also considered being part of an effort investigating the feasibility of a barrier island fire district, but recently backed out of that discussion.

Under a current contract that expires in 2017, Highland Beach pays Delray Beach Fire-Rescue to provide staffing for a ladder truck and a rescue truck, which operate out of a town-owned fire station.

Although Delray Beach is not required to provide equipment to Highland Beach, it provided a truck at no cost when Highland Beach's aging ladder truck was frequently broken down and out of service.

Highland Beach now pays $8,500 a month to use a Delray Beach ladder truck, but continues to operate its own 10 year-old rescue truck.

Under the proposed contract currently being negotiated, Delray Beach would lease a truck and a new rescue vehicle and would own the equipment after 10 years.

Highland Beach would reimburse Delray for the monthly payments and would have the opportunity to buy the vehicles from Delray Beach for $10 after the 10-year term expires.

Delray Beach Fire-Rescue Chief Danielle Connor estimates it would cost the town about $150,000 a year for both vehicles. She also pointed out that the cost of staffing the trucks would fluctuate based on the city's actual staffing costs.

The contract includes a clause that allows either side to cancel the agreement with one year's notice.

Under the agreement, Highland Beach's name would be on the ladder portion of the truck, Connor said, but Delray Beach Fire-Rescue would be on the door.

Highland Beach sold its 20-year-old fire truck at auction this summer for $6,000. But its quest for a new firetruck goes back more than five years, when residents voted against approving the purchase of a new truck in a referendum. The town charter requires most purchases over $350,000 to be approved by voters.

The current negotiations, according to Torcivia and Connor, have been slowed by conversations Delray Beach had with Palm Beach County Fire Rescue about the county possibly taking over Delray Beach's fire-rescue service. Those talks have been discontinued.

"We had mutually agreed to delay discussions with Highland Beach while the city of Delray Beach explored consolidation with Palm Beach County Fire Rescue," Connor said.

In other news, it appears Highland Beach will not need a municipal election this spring since no one is challenging Commissioner Carl Feldman for his seat. Filing closed at noon on Nov. 24 with Feldman being the sole candidate for the three-year commission seat.

Commissioners also reminded residents at their November meeting that the town's annual Light Up the Holidays celebration will be held on Monday, Dec. 7, at town hall beginning at 5 p.m.

The free event will feature a performance from the award-winning Dimensional Harmony Choir of Boynton Beach and will include treats and beverages at no charge. ★ contracting for fire and emergency medical services with Delray Beach.

FIRE DISTRICT

"Briny Breezes at the very front end told us they could not equally share in the cost," said Gulf Stream Town Manager William Thrasher. "We felt they were an important component and to bolster good will between the communities we recognized their inability to fund such a project."

Briny Breezes' importance to the plan is available real estate — several parcels on the west side of A1A that could become the site for building a fire station that would serve the southern end of the proposed district. The maintenance building behind Ocean Ridge's Town Hall likely also would require an overhaul for use as another station.

If the sites in Briny don't work out, Thrasher says it might be possible to find space in his town. The problem with moving to Gulf Stream, however, is that there would be no chance of obtaining federal or state grant money to pay for the station's construction.

The district movement comes after years of frustration with fire service providers on the mainland whose fees have been increasing and whose response times seem to have been, too.

Gulf Stream Mayor Scott Morgan said that, if the plan proves viable, it could mean self-sufficiency and that the towns "would not be at the contractual whims of Delray Beach or Boynton Beach, or anyone else that would have to provide that service to us."

Gulf Stream Vice Mayor Robert Ganger said the town had been setting money aside for a feasibility study for three years. "It's money well spent," Ganger said. "This is a really important project."

Matrix Consulting is expected to begin the study with visits to the coastal towns beginning in December and will have 90 days to file a report. Representatives of the towns said they chose Matrix not because it was the lowest bidder but because its proposal was the most detailed.

Fitch and Associates of Platte City, Mo., was the group's second choice with a bid of $48,600, and Thrasher said the company would be the alternate if one is needed going forward. ★

10 Questions

MEET YOUR NEIGHBOR: Terry Fedele

Her lengthy résumé might boggle the minds of some of the most avid volunteers in South County, and her monthly schedule might do the same.

She earned accolades for an even lengthier list of inspired accomplishments at this year's Soroptimist International of Boca Raton / Deerfield Beach Women of Distinction breakfast, which honors female leaders making a difference in the lives of others.

"I feel very, very fortunate," wife, mother, board member and community volunteer Terry Fedele said of the award. "There are many women in this community who give tirelessly of their time, talent and treasure, so I feel extremely blessed to have won."

The 63-year-old coastal Boca Raton resident has lived in the area for seven years and is building a new home with husband Jerry, president and CEO of Boca Raton Regional Hospital.

"We feel like we landed in paradise," Fedele said.

Before moving to Boca Raton, she worked in the Pittsburgh area as a registered nurse at the Allegheny General Hospital Suburban Campus (then called Suburban General) and eventually landed a series of professional roles prior to retiring as executive vice president of hospital operations. Her success in — and passion for — the health-care industry led her to join a long list of boards and committees that share her vision.

Fedele serves on Boca Raton Regional Hospital Foundation's Hospital Ball, Go Pink Luncheon and golf tournament committees and is coordinator and director of sales for the Allianz Championship's Women's Pro-Am, which benefits the hospital's Christine E. Lynn Women's Health & Wellness Institute. She is a member of the hospital's Collaborative Care Council and helps its Debbie-Rand Memorial Service League auxiliary group.

She also serves as a board member of the Louis and Anne Green Memory and Wellness Center at Florida Atlantic University's Christine E. Lynn College of Nursing, gives her time to the college's Caring Hearts Auxiliary and co-chairs its Keep Memories Alive walk. She and Jerry will co-chair the American Heart Association's Boca Raton Heart Ball in 2016.

Education is another one of Fedele's passions, so she decided to get involved with the Boca Raton Children's Museum (vice chairwoman of the board), Florence Fuller Child Development Centers (chairwoman of the Men With Caring Hearts Awards Luncheon and co-chairwoman of the Wee Dream Ball) and the George Snow Scholarship Fund's Boca's Ballroom Battle (committee member) and Caribbean Cowboy Ball (co-chairwoman).

"My calendar is full, but that's the way I like it," she said. "The busier I am, the happier I am."

— Amy Woods

Q. Where did you grow up and go to school? How do you think that has influenced you?

A. I grew up in Pittsburgh, the daughter of blue-collar parents who instilled a strong work ethic in me and the value of education.

Q. In what professions have you worked, and which ones make you the proudest?

A. I have always been very proud of working in the nursing profession as I enjoy helping others and making a positive difference in their lives.

Q. What advice do you have for young adults selecting a career today?

A. Select a career that you are passionate about, and do not focus on how much money that choice affords you. Money is a short-term satisfier, and work is a significant part of your daily life.

Q. How did you choose to make your home in Boca Raton?

A. My husband, Jerry, took a job in Boca as the president and CEO of Boca Raton Community Hospital, which is now Boca Raton Regional Hospital.

Q. What is your favorite part about living in Boca Raton?

A. The people and how much they support their community and the organizations within the community. Every day in Boca is a perfect day, as this is truly paradise. For me, spending time helping others, being with friends and family, being at the beach and golf time makes life wonderful.

Q. What music do you listen to when you need inspiration or want to relax?

A. I like classic '60s and '70s music.

Q. Do you have a favorite quote that inspires you?

A. Treat others as you would want to be treated.

Q. Have you had mentors in your life — individuals who have inspired your decisions?

A. My dad is my hero. Through his example, he taught me to always be positive and not to wallow in sorrow or problems but to move on to the solution.

Q. If your life story were made into a movie, who would you want to play you?

A. I would really want Katharine Hepburn, as she was strong, independent and the kind of person willing to give of herself to help and better others.

Q. Who/what makes you laugh?

A. My husband and my children, as they are the joys of my life.

Cover Story

Heifer International can arrange animals as gifts

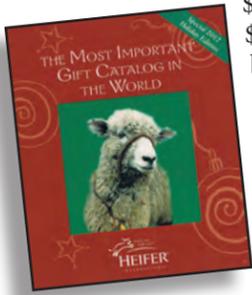

By Ron Hayes

You've probably found the catalog in your mailbox around this time of year.

Amid the booklets for gourmet cheese baskets, fruitcakes and holiday trinkets comes "The Most Important Gift Catalog In The World, Special 2015 Holiday Edition."

And there on the cover is a photo of that most important gift.

The catalog is from Heifer International, which wants you to buy a young farm animal.

A sheep, goat or pig for $120. A llama for $150. A water buffalo for $250. A heifer for $500.

And the organization wants you to buy it for someone else.

"Heifer International is just a wonderful charity," says Harold "Doc" Burton, who crossed the ocean with its volunteers, delivering farm animals to post-World War II Europe. "They're a charity of the Church of the Brethren. I'm not a member of the church, but I'm closely involved with what they're doing."

Established in America in 1723, the Brethren is one of the three traditional "peace churches," along with the Quakers and Mennonites.

In 1938, a church relief worker named Dan West was providing powdered milk to women and children battered by the Spanish Civil War when inspiration struck.

Instead of powdered milk, why not send cows? Or better yet, why not send a pregnant cow, so each recipient could pass the calf on to a neighbor.

Two good deeds for the price of one.

In 1944, war in Europe forced Heifers for Relief to send its first shipment of 17 heifers to Puerto Rico.

At war's end, the charity joined with the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration to bring livestock to Europe. And the effort has grown ever since.

According to its most recent report, Heifer International has helped more than 22 million families in 125 countries in its 70 years.

In 2008, the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation gave the charity a $42.5 million grant to help farmers in East Africa, and added an additional $8.2 million four years later.

And it isn't just about heifers anymore. Gifts of chicks, rabbits, ducks and honeybees are also available.

"The Church of the Brethren did not and does not believe in war," says Burton. "They believe in peace, and any time something comes up where they can help mankind, they do it."

"It's just a way of life with them." ★

To friends and neighbors in Briny Breezes, "Doc" Burton is a 94-year-old retiree with a cheerful disposition and a sly sense of humor. Nearly seven decades ago, he was a young vet from Hereford, Md., struggling to keep 960 horses healthy in the middle of Atlantic storms until they reached Gdansk and the Polish farmers struggling to recover from the war.

"The majority of countries like Poland were just countries of small farmers, and they had nothing to farm with," Burton explains. "The Germans had gone across it one way, and the Russians had gone across the other way, and there was just nothing there."

As the SS Saginaw's veterinarian, he was among the elite. The seagoing cowboys were provided by Heifers for Relief, a charity organized by the Church of the Brethren to provide cattle to needy countries. But while the cowboys slept on tiny bunks or hammocks, Doc Burton lived and ate in the officers' quarters. Still, the job was no vacation cruise.

"One time a horse grabbed me by the left shoulder blade, picked me up, shook me and spit me out," he recalls. "I weighed 140 pounds at the time, and I can still feel the pain."

This was not what the Maryland farm boy had envisioned when he asked the family doctor if he should become an MD or a DVM. "Well," the wise old doctor said, "if you become a physician, the patients lie to you all the time, but if you become a vet, the animals will never lie to you."

Young Harold Burton became a vet. "And I never did have an animal lie to me," he says. "The owners sometimes, but never the animals."

No luxuries, for anyone

Burton's shiplod of horses traveled first to Kiel, Germany, then through its canal to the Baltic Sea and on to Gdansk, where the horses were unloaded.

"We saw whole families living in bombed-out buildings with only two walls," he remembers. "They made artificial walls from old sheets and debris and anything that might keep out the cold. What they ate was what they could get ahold of."

The horses Doc Burton helped deliver were intended to help the Poles re-establish farming. "But I'm confident they hadn't had any protein for three or four years at least," he says, "so you can bet some of those horses were eaten."

On another voyage, he docked in Trieste, Italy, to unload horses bound for Yugoslavia, but his elite status as ship's vet offered no luxuries on the return trip. The ship's refrigerator broke in the Adriatic and all the meat on board went bad. Stopping at Gibraltar to repair and restock, the purser announced that he'd made a marvelous deal. They would dine on lamb all the way home.

The ship departed, the cooks cooked, and soon a sickening odor escaped the kitchen. Their delectable lamb was disgusting goat meat.

"But our first mate loved peanut butter, which he had on board in gallon cans, and our baker could bake the most delicious rolls," Burton says, "so some of us thrived on peanut butter and rolls until we got home."

Burton made only two trips on the old Victory ships, delivering nearly 2,000 horses to war-torn countries fighting to recover. Most of his days were spent at the home ports in Savannah, Ga., or Newport News, Va., getting the horses in shape for the voyage.

"In Savannah, I had a $3 a week room on the third floor of the YMCA and ate in the basement dining room in a local home," he recalls. "Cornpone drowned in blackstrap molasses."

By 1947, when the UNRRA shut down, 360 Victory ships had delivered about 300,000 animals to help war-torn countries recover.

The Heifers for Relief project never shut down. As Heifer International, it has provided farm animals to more than 22 million families in 125 countries, and still does.

Burton, a winter resident of Briny Breezes. Photo provided by Joan Nichols

Married with children

Doc Burton went home to Maryland and married Betty Dwyn. "I married her for her money when she was a kid and I was a kid and it turned out she had $80," he says. "But I kept her anyway."

On Dec. 27, they will have been married 68 years. None of their four children became a "Doc."

"Not on a bet," he says. "They saw me wake up at night to go on a farm call I'd already gone on four times during the day."

Doc Burton cared for horses, dogs, cats, guinea pigs and monkeys — you name it — for 40 years around Baltimore County and retired to Briny Breezes in his 60s.

And then one day, maybe 20 years ago, he was thumbing through a farm newspaper back in Maryland when a notice caught his eye.

The Church of the Brethren's seagoing cowboys were having a reunion in Manheim, Pa., about a 90-minute drive away.

"So my son and I went to this reunion of cowboys. I told them I wasn't a cowboy, I was a vet, and they were thrilled because they'd been looking for a vet. As best as anyone there could tell, I'm the only vet from those Victory ships who's still alive!"

"I was a big shot from that time on." ★

Shaded park will replace old Boynton dive shop

By Jane Smith

The old dive shop building at the Boynton Harbor Marina was demolished as the last piece of an $18 million plan to redo the marina area.

Demolition started Nov. 2, and most of the work was done in four days.

The city's Community Redevelopment Agency board, which controls the marina, received an update on Nov. 10.

"It's the last piece in tying that area together from a pedestrian and driver point of view," said Vivian Brooks, CRA executive director.

The project work won't start until the summer. "We don't want to interrupt our businesses during the season," she said.

The building will be replaced with a shaded park for the public with a walking path and seating, roadway realignment, extra parking spaces and other features, estimated to cost $700,000.

The CRA sought county approval in May to demolish the vacant two-story structure. It needed county approval because of a $2 million county grant received in 2006. The agreement limited what could happen to that 1969 building.

The BG Group LLC of Boca Raton won the demolition bid in September with its estimated cost of $24,950.

Now CRA staff will prepare bids for construction of the open space, allowing it to start late spring of 2016. ★

Memories forged during Sister City exchange

They came from more than 7,500 miles away, hoping to learn about a culture and a city worlds apart from their own.

Yet when the 10 high school students from Miyazu, Japan — Delray Beach's longtime Sister City — left a week later, what they had learned was more about what they shared in common with their young American counterparts and their host families.

As they headed for a short visit to New York after their time here, which included trips to three schools, the Morikami Museum and Gardens and other popular landmarks, the young visitors took with them friendships to last decades, if not lifetimes.

"It's amazing how quickly the bonds form and how long they last," said David Schmidt, president of Sister Cities of Delray Beach, which has been coordinating visits for students from here and Miyazu since 1999.

Miyazu English teacher Emi Shibahara — one of two chaperones on the visit — stayed with Ken and Susan Gross in Briny Breezes and she even brought a few of the students over for a visit.

"It was a great experience for us," said Ken Gross, who had arranged for his 9-year-old granddaughter to visit at the same time the Miyazu students were here.

While the chaperone stayed in a community of mobile homes, two of the Japanese students saw a different side of South Florida when staying in a four-bedroom, two-story house with a family of six.

"They got to see what it's like to be with a big family," said Daphney Antoine-Boylan of Delray Beach, whose daughter, Lauren, will be traveling to Miyazu next year as part of the exchange program.

In the end, these people from different cultures, who had shared a week together, also shared tears as it was time for the visitors to depart. They also shared promises to keep in touch for years to come.

Obituaries

R. Scott Morrison

By Ron Hayes

DELRAY BEACH — As chairman of the Boca Raton Resort & Club and director of Discover Palm Beach County, R. Scott Morrison helped pass a penny bed tax to benefit local cultural organizations.

In 1982, its first year, $1,251,000 was collected.

This past year the tax, now at 5 cents, raised $42,700,000 to support the arts, sports and tourism in the county.

Mr. Morrison, a South County resident since 1980, died Nov. 16 in Boca Raton, surrounded by his family and friends. He was 76.

“Though it’s been a while since his association with the Palm Beach County destination marketing organization, those who knew him only had words of praise as a very good man who contributed greatly to our destination’s tourism development,” said Jorge Pesquera, Discover The Palm Beaches’ current president and CEO.

Mr. Morrison’s involvement with the fabled Boca Raton resort and the county’s tourism development were only part of his work to promote the area.

During 35 years as a resident of Boca Raton, Gulf Stream and Delray Beach, he served as a director of the Florida Hotel and Motel Association, chairman of the American Hotel and Motel Association and president of the Palm Beach County Hotel-Motel Association.

He also served as an adviser and board member with the Junior League of Boca Raton, the St. Andrew’s School, the former Caldwell Theatre and former College of Boca Raton.

Born Sept. 15, 1939, Mr. Morrison was a fifth-generation San Franciscan.

A graduate of Michigan State University’s Hotel, Restaurant and Management School, he began his career with the ITT Sheraton Corporation.

As an assistant manager at the New Orleans Sheraton, Mr. Morrison met his future wife, Norma.

“It was a blind date and we were married nine months later at the Catholic church on Tulane Avenue,” Mrs. Morrison recalled. “It’s lasted 52 years.”

As the wife of a hotel manager, she learned to move — from New Orleans to Boston, back to New Orleans, then Key Biscayne, the Ozarks, South Carolina and in 1980 to Boca Raton.

After leaving the Boca Raton Resort & Club in 1986, Mr. Morrison built three hotels in Japan, Europe and the United States.

He was also a founding stockholder of Extended Stay America and a frequent lecturer at Florida Atlantic University and Palm Beach State College.

Locally, he was a member of the Boca Raton Resort & Club, the Gulf Stream Bath & Tennis Club and the Seagate Club in Delray Beach.

In his leisure hours, Mr. Morrison was an avid sport fisherman and hunter at his second home in Santa Fe, N.M.

“He could play golf, but he preferred to fish and hunt,” Mrs. Morrison said. “He was a gentleman, a sportsman, a family man, and everyone would say he had a booming laugh. Everyone mentions his laugh.”

A Mass of the Christian Burial was held Nov. 21 at St. Vincent Ferrer Catholic Church in Delray Beach.

“At the reception after the service we had 187 people who just came,” Mrs. Morrison said. “We didn’t send out invitations, but the church was packed.”

In addition to his wife, Mr. Morrison is survived by a son, Robert Morrison III, three daughters, Kelly Husack, Kim Lessard and Kristin Guttroff, and seven grandchildren.

Donations in Mr. Morrison’s memory may be made to Covenant House, St. Vincent Ferrer Care Ministries or New Hope Charities.

GULF STREAM — Robert Craft will be remembered perhaps more as an upholder of composer Igor Stravinsky’s legacy than as a noted orchestral conductor, writer and lecturer in his own right, according to music scholars Leon Botstein and Thomas McKinley.

Mr. Craft, 92, died Nov. 10 at his home in Gulf Stream.

Botstein, a renowned conductor who is also president of Bard College near Kingston, N.Y. — where Craft was born Oct. 20, 1923 — said Mr. Craft’s real achievement in life was “to bring Stravinsky alive” and to prevent the composer from descending into a barren old age.

“They met in 1948, and Craft introduced Stravinsky to different types of modern composition,” Botstein said. “Without Craft, I think Stravinsky would have fallen silent as a composer.”

McKinley, professor of music theory and composition at Lynn University in Boca Raton, agreed Mr. Craft was “very influential” in the course of 20th-century classical music because of his relationship with Stravinsky.

“He basically was Stravinsky’s private secretary for the last 20 to 30 years of his life,” McKinley said. “Late in his life, Stravinsky sort of shocked everybody by changing his style. He had done that before as a younger man in his early, famous ballets ‘The Firebird,’ ‘Petrouchka’ and ‘The Rite of Spring.’ In the ’50s, he changed his style again, into what is known as the atonal or 12-tone style, after Craft introduced him to this type of music.”

McKinley said that Mr. Craft’s collaboration with Stravinsky on books such as Conversations With Igor Stravinsky, Memories and Commentaries and Expositions and Developments provide invaluable insights into Stravinsky.

“Many people thought Craft may have written some of it for Stravinsky,” he said. “But I generally trust the books. I certainly don’t think Craft put words into Stravinsky’s mouth.”

Botstein maintained Mr. Craft took on traits of Stravinsky’s personality that emerged in those books, which were published in the 1950s and 1960s.

“It’s widely believed that Craft wrote those books,” Botstein said. “He was a terrific writer and a very smart man. Very sophisticated. But he essentially invented Stravinsky’s opinions.”

Botstein disagreed, however, with assertions that Mr. Craft wrote some of Stravinsky’s later musical works, including Requiem Canticles, completed in 1965-66.

“I believe those to be entirely Stravinsky,” Botstein said. “Craft didn’t ghost-write. Instead, he was a man whose creativity was best realized in someone else, much like Cyrano de Bergerac. Craft’s own talent came alive through the medium of Stravinsky. After Stravinsky died, though, Craft became a very elegant and interesting writer of music.”

Mr. Craft also wrote memoirs in diary form of his life with Stravinsky, including Stravinsky: Chronicle of a Friendship, first published in 1972, a year after the composer’s death in New York. A later memoir, An Improbable Life (2002), recounted his own story from his youth in Kingston to 2002, including his move to Gulf Stream in 1987. The memoirs provide a broad picture of some of the leading cultural figures of the mid-20th century who moved in Stravinsky’s orbit, including W.H. Auden, T.S. Eliot, Paul Horgan and Aldous Huxley, among many others.

Mr. Craft’s many recordings as a conductor include an 11-disc set of works by Stravinsky, 10 discs of works by Arnold Schoenberg, and two discs of music by Anton Webern, all for the Naxos label.

He is survived by his wife, Alva Craft, and his son, Alexander Craft.

At the end of his life, Mr. Craft was so identified with Stravinsky that the legendary composer became his only creative outlet, Botstein said.

“But he was a man of exceptional accomplishment,” he said. “Both musically and in the writing, he created an English language that for Stravinsky never existed. And he became a great American writer — a man, at 92, who could look back on his life with a sense of pride and accomplishment.”

Bradley James Stewart Jr.

By Steven J. Smith

SOUTH PALM BEACH — Bradley James Stewart Jr. was known as a jack-of-all-trades — and a master of pretty much all of them, according to his daughter, Sara Watson.

“He was an incredible handyman and was particularly gifted as an electrician,” she said. “My mom and dad bought a lot in Key Largo and he built a house from scratch. And there were 17 electric switches at the front door!”

Mr. Stewart died Nov. 16 at his Leesburg, Va., home, because of complications from chronic obstructive pulmonary disease. He was 90.

Born Oct. 5, 1925, in Bowling Green, Ky., Mr. Stewart was just 16 when Pearl Harbor was attacked. He joined the Navy at age 17 and soon found himself elevated to the position of personal secretary to Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, in Hawaii — mainly because of an unusual office skill he possessed.

“He was one of the few yeomen who could type,” Watson laughed. “And he could type really fast. They didn’t have many women working in jobs like that during the war. It was the Navy and they just had men.”

After the war, Mr. Stewart studied agriculture at Western Kentucky University, then moved to Florida in 1947 to finish his studies at the University of Miami. When he left school he worked all kinds of jobs, his daughter said.

“He was a bartender, then he worked on a shrimp boat for a while,” Watson said. “Then he and his brother started the first newspaper in Fort Myers Beach. It only ran weekly.”

After a teaching stint at Warfield Elementary School in Indiantown, Mr. Stewart next headed out to California, where he worked in a factory and was injured in a car wreck. He came home to Florida to recuperate and it was there he met and wed his nurse, Gloria Gehl. The two were married for 50 years until her death in 2006 and had two children, Sara and Bradley James III.

Watson said her father eventually settled into a career with Delta Airlines in Miami — first as a baggage handler on the night shift. He was soon promoted to a ticket agent position, however, primarily because of his appealing demeanor.

“He just had a natural, friendly personality,” Watson said. “You couldn’t help liking him.”

Delta’s district office in West Palm Beach next lured him to work there and he remained with the company’s marketing division for 30 years until his retirement. But he continued to juggle new career opportunities with his involvement in a variety of civic organizations.

“He went to work for the Holiday Inn Downtown in West Palm, which is no longer there,” Watson said, adding Mr. Stewart went on to help found a local branch of Skai International, which is an organization of tourism professionals dedicated to friendship and networking opportunities in the industry. In addition, he served a term as president of the Kiwanis Club and co-founded the Bon Vivants, another social club in the area.

Then there was his work with bees. Mr. Stewart became interested in bees when he was about 12 or 13 and had a neighbor who had bees. As a Boy Scout, he pursued a merit badge for beekeeping. At age 85, he revived that passion while living in South Palm Beach and started his own beekeeping business, farming out his 17 hives — each hive consisting of 60,000 bees — for production of his “Backyard Honey,” which he mostly gave away.

“He was definitely one of a kind,” Watson said. “He was very generous and kind. And he could do anything — carpentry, electrical work, painting. He could wear a tuxedo and not get a drop of paint on it.”

Mr. Stewart is survived by his children Sara and Bradley James III, three grandchildren, a brother, two sisters and several nieces and nephews. Donations in his memory are requested for the Palm Beach County Beekeepers Association at 531 N. Military Trail, West Palm Beach, FL 33415 or the Florida State Beekeepers Association, 5002 NW 64th Lane, Gainesville, FL 32653.

LANTANA — Judy Black was passionate in promoting environmental conservation and committed to creating gardens.

“She was a leader in the environmental movement,” said Ilona Balfour, who worked for a number of years with Ms.

Black on the Friends of the Lantana Nature Preserve. “She was always supporting everybody. She will be sorely missed.”

After a long illness, Ms. Black, 67, of Lantana (on Hypoluxo Island), died Nov. 15 at a second home she and her husband of 29 years, Richard Schlosberg, had in Washington, Conn. She was born in New York City on Sept. 27, 1948.

Ms. Black served as president of the Hypoluxo Island Property Owners Association for four years.

She frequently coordinated with the Lantana town manager on association activities.

She also supervised the neighborhood association’s Tree Program to save the ecologically essential native tree canopy. She oversaw the plans, brought them to fruition, and with several other members and town staff, helped plant the “Four Corners” entry onto the island, as well as the “y” entry to the south part of the island.

“She turned her own small front and mostly paved back yards into verdant habitat, protective of endangered and threatened migratory birds,” her husband said.

Ms. Black coordinated the HIPOA’s annual picnic for about four years. She continued administrative and coordinating activities during a three year transition and recruited new, competent and younger leadership.

One of her recruits was Lyn Tate, current treasurer of the HIPOA.

“Not only was Judy a special person because she was so brilliant, but she gave unconditionally to the island and the town,” Tate said. “She always thought before she spoke. She was always wise in her approach.”

Along with her husband, Ms. Black was a frequent attendee at Town of Lantana council meetings and town Nature Preserve meetings where her infrequent comments were always substantive and to the heart of an issue. Her brief statements helped save the native habitat which several years ago became the Lantana Scrub Nature Preserve.

Ms. Black, Schlosberg said, “served capably and was very widely respected as the non-town (of Manalapan) representative on the La Coquille Club board and Town of Manalapan La Coquille subcommittee during a prolonged period of intense debate, defending the retention of the traditional non-town membership inclusive structure, and against challenges to the club’s existence.

She was often a rare voice promoting Hypoluxo Island-wide (joined Lantana and Manalapan) activities.

Ms. Black had a successful career in advertising. She was a vice president of marketing for Bozell throughout many corporate combinations from BJK&E to True North. Within advertising, she specialized in new media. She researched and wrote studies well received (and some seminal) in the use of cable television, then of the Internet, as they relate to advertising.

For years, she assisted, leading a subcommittee, then headed up as chairperson the American Association of Advertising Agencies New Technologies Committee.

“She was in demand by clients for her company,” her husband said. “She spoke around the world, from New Zealand to Brazil to Finland, for example, enthusiastically and with insights from her research on the potentials from technical vantage points of the then undeveloped new mediums of cable TV programming and the Internet as advertising outlets.”

Ms. Black was recognized by the advertising industry as one of the 10 top people in the field in the 1990s and was once on the cover of Media Magazine as the seer of the future of advertising. She continued to follow both the advertising industry and new media field. Later, she worked for Cablevision.

Ms. Black earned a Master of Arts degree in education from the Bank Street College School of Education and a Master of Business Administration from Columbia University School of Business. Her undergraduate degree was a B.A. in art history from Barnard College.

“She kept dear friends she met from school to business her entire life,” Schlosberg said.

Survivors, in addition to her husband, include her brother, Leon Black, his wife, Debra, and their four children.

Ms. Black was predeceased by her mother, Shirley Black Kash, who died in 2014 and her father, Eli M. Black, who died in 1975.

A tree planting ceremony in her honor is being planned for a later date.

Water Tower Commons site plan review delayed until Dec. 14

By Mary Thurwachter

The site plan for Water Tower Commons, the new development at the former A.G. Holley site, will finally come before the Lantana Town Council on Dec. 14.

The plan was on the agenda in October and November, but the matter had to be postponed while Palm Beach County officials had a chance to approve a traffic study for the area, just east of I-95 on Lantana Road.

Lantana finally received the study, with some conditions, late on the afternoon of the Nov. 23 council meeting. That didn’t allow enough time for town staff to comb through the study and share recommendations with council members, hence the postponement.

But because the matter appeared on November agendas, public comment was heard at the November meetings.

“This is an opportunity Lantana will never have again,” said Dan Tischler, who lives just east of the A.G. Holley site on North Eighth Street.

“I read four fast-food restaurants and a gas station and my heart just sank,” Tischler said. “I want it to be a destination that people living here will be proud of.”

Tischler suggested upscale dwellings and a store such as Whole Foods Market for the Water Tower Commons property.

“We’re only going to get one shot at this,” Tischler said. “This is going to affect our grandchildren.”

Dustin Mizell urged the council to push hard for a quality project on the 73-acre tract, former home to the A.G. Holley tuberculosis hospital, which closed in 2012 and was torn down last year.

“Unless we step back and really look at this project, it could be another missed opportunity,” he said.

Another resident, Edward Shropshire, said he was concerned about building heights up to 75 feet in the conceptual plans he found on the town’s website, which he called “jaw dropping.”

Ken Tuma of Urban Design Kilday Studios, speaking for the applicant, Southeast Legacy Investments, appeared at the Nov. 23 council meeting but withheld his presentation until Dec. 14.

“We’re very excited to show you our plans,” he said. “We’ve got a great PowerPoint presentation for you.”

In other news, the town learned that its clerk, Crystal Gibson, would be leaving. Gibson, of Lake Worth, has been town clerk for seven years and took a position as operations manager for the community services division of the city of Palm Beach Gardens.

Council members praised her work and she was given a standing ovation. ★

For the Liguoris, real estate is a family affair

By Christine Davis

Pascal Liguori, broker associate at Premier Estate Properties, has teamed up with his son, Antonio, 23, creating Pascal Liguori & Son Broker Associates at Premier's Delray Beach office. That makes three generations of Liguoris in South Florida real estate.

It all started with Alfonso Liguori, who opened Allbrook Realty in Pittsburgh after serving in World War II, Pascal Liguori explained. "He saw residential real estate as an opportunity to be a business owner and an entrepreneur, as well as a way to better provide for his family."

Over 45 years, Alfonso Liguori's real estate career evolved and flourished, and in the process, he was joined in his business by three of his sons — Pascal, Gerard and Joseph — and one of his daughters, Laura.

"As kids, we went with him on nights and weekends to different properties; we cleaned his apartment buildings and offices," Pascal Liguori said.

"After I graduated from college, I sold real estate for him for many years, and after eight years in the business, he transitioned the business over to us."

Then, 25 years ago, Gerard and Joseph Liguori decided they wanted to sell multimillion-dollar properties in Florida.

"Our average sale price in Pittsburgh was $48,000," Pascal Liguori said. "I stayed behind to run the Pittsburgh business as a fallback. If they did well, I'd join them, if not, they could return to Pittsburgh."

In 1993, his brothers started Premier Estate Properties with Carmen D'Angelo Jr., with the goal to work with sellers whose homes exceeded $1 million. Laura joined them in 1996.

"That was a lot of money, and people said they'd never make it; that they'd cut themselves out of the market, but they stayed true to their niche and were extremely successful," Pascal Liguori said.

"When they wanted to expand to Delray Beach, Hypoluxo, Point Manalapan, Gulf Stream and Ocean Ridge, that's when I made the decision to come with my wife, Kelly, and our five kids (Alfonso, Antonio, Gabrielle, Angelo, Alessandro) to Florida in 2000. And we started the office at 900 E. Atlantic in Delray Beach. That was my area.

"I had never set foot in Delray Beach. The first time I came was with the moving van and my family."

Fast forward to today:

The Liguoris consistently rank among the nation's top real estate professionals by The Wall Street Journal and RealTrends, and now it's time to put the third generation to work, Pascal said. "My son Antonio is the only one in his generation to be involved, but he's leading the way for the rest of them."

Antonio received his real estate license at 18, graduated from the University of Central Florida with a bachelor's in business administration majoring in real estate, and has already served several internships with Seaside Builders.

He also was an agent on a multimillion-dollar-producing team with Keller Williams Realty Advantage III in Orlando. This year, he passed his broker's exam and he joined his father in July.

"I'm ecstatic about joining my dad in our family business," Antonio Liguori said. "I can't see myself anywhere else. Delray Beach provides great activities and a vibrant atmosphere; our local business leaders have done a fantastic job developing a community here."

In addition to the Delray Beach office, Premier Estate Properties has two offices in Boca Raton, as well as offices in Fort Lauderdale and Vero Beach, and Laura Liguori, as corporate manager, oversees all five offices.

Also in the Delray Beach office are office administrator Leslie Horenburger, executive assistant Lisa Kugan, and support coordinator Ruth Ortiz.

"We are blessed and thankful for the trust our clients have placed in us," Pascal Liguori said. ★

Billy Joel or not, Fite Shavell singing about luxury waterfront listings

Fite Shavell & Associates agent Jack Elkins said he closed more than $26 million in property sales over the summer and, since then, has already listed a few luxury waterfront properties, including 1920 and 1940 S. Ocean Blvd., Manalapan, which are owned, Elkins and public records say, by 1920 S. Ocean Blvd., LLC.

Other sources, though, report the owner is Billy Joel.

Property records show 1920 S. Ocean, a 13,216-square-foot estate, was bought in March 2014 for $11,836,000. It's now for sale for $19.5 million.

"The price includes the furniture, some new and some that had already belonged to the owner," Elkins said. The 1940 S. Ocean 1.94-acre lot was bought in May 2014 for $6.5 million and is now listed for $9.5 million.

While Elkins does not confirm the Billy Joel connection, he's happy to sing the properties' praises.

"Each sits on about two acres and has ocean and Intracoastal Waterway frontage," he said. He's already had calls, including some inquires on buying the two parcels together. "There's nothing like it that comes close, except the Ziff estate," Elkins said.

The nine-bedroom, eight-bath Mediterranean-style estate was built in 2005 and is completely renovated by its present owner. The main house, which stayed within the original footprint, was reconfigured to better use the space, Elkins said. "It was a beautiful but more formal Mediterranean-style home. It's now a chic beach house."

Greg Bonner of B1 Architects oversaw the design, and Ellen Kavanaugh was consulted regarding interior décor.

Why is "the owner" selling, you may ask? "At the time the properties were bought, it was still a down market, and the owner saw the value. Both properties were good investments and undervalued," Elkins said. Most likely true, but hey, maybe Joel decided to settle down in his other beachfront Manalapan home just up the street.

As reported in The Coastal Star last spring, Joel purchased that property shortly after the two that are currently on the market. With 20,000 square feet, nine bedrooms, 16 baths, gatehouse, media room, billiard room, bar, library, elevators and wine cellar, it was built five years ago as a spec house by Robert Fessler on a parcel carved from the historic Harold S. Vanderbilt estate. Its price tag was $20 million.

Call Elkins at 756-9720.

Here's the scoop: The Ice Cream Club really takes the cake (so to speak) when it comes to all flavors of vanilla (and chocolate and strawberry).

The Ice Cream Club started its first ice cream parlor in 1982 in Manalapan and produces its product in Boynton Beach. Year after year, the National Ice Cream Retailers Association has consistently awarded The Ice Cream Club blue (and red) ribbons — so many in fact that this year, the association named it, "Grand Master — Ice Cream Maker."

Flavor, texture, color, melt-in-your-mouth-ability, all these were rigorously tested and applauded by the Department of Food Science and Nutrition at the University of Minnesota and Clemson University, along with the fact that the company's ice cream surpasses strict standards concerning microbiology and bacteriology. Corcoran reports strong real estate sales for the third quarter of this year, increasing county-wide over last year.

The average price in the South Palm Beach to Gulf Stream submarket rose by more than 50 percent versus last year and last quarter, though median price rose by just 13 percent year-over-year.

This dramatic jump in average price is explained by several sales at the very high end of the market this quarter, including one $33 million sale in Manalapan.

Sales in Delray Beach rose slightly year-over-year. Days on market fell, while median price, average price and average price per square foot rose versus last year.

Sales in Boca Raton were up compared to last year, while average days on market declined. Median price, average price, and average price per square foot all increased moderately over last year.

Bill Yahn, Corcoran senior regional vice president for South Florida, said the third quarter was an active sales period reflecting increased buyer interest in owning a Palm Beach County property. "Strong buyer demand drove sales and prices upward," Yahn said.

Celebrate the season with carols, concerts, plays and Menorah lightings

The holiday season is full of shopping and shows, concerts and parties. Parishioners are polishing the stained glass and putting on their dress-up clothes. They've got a lot to offer. Here's a sampling:

St. Paul's goes Victorian

This year, St. Paul's is inspired by how things were in the 1800s.

The church's "Festival of Lessons and Carols" is its most colorful and meticulously planned holiday event. It features favorite Christmas hymns, carols and anthems performed by the St. Paul's choir and instrumental ensemble. Drawn from composers of the times, the program features works by Sir Charles Hubert Hastings Parry, Sir John Stainer, Sir Joseph Barnby, Sir Edward Elgar, Sir Arthur Sullivan, and Gustav Holst. The congregation will be invited to sing along with the hymns and carols.

If you go: the Festival of Lessons and Carols: A Victorian Christmas — 3 p.m. Dec. 20, St. Paul's Episcopal Church, 188 S. Swinton Ave., Delray Beach. A free-will offering will be accepted.

Congregation Beit Kulam brings it home

Congregation Beit Kulam will be celebrating Hanukkah on Dec. 11 in the most fundamental way: with a meal at the family dinner table. A really big dinner table.

Rabbi Joan Cubell, formerly at Temple Beth Shira, will lead the celebration, of course, because, well, it's her house in the Polo Club in Delray Beach. And she expects a full house, including kids and canines.

"Animals and children are always welcome!" Cubell says. She has six dogs of her own. You also need to bring your own menorah. "Everyone brings one and we light them together like a big family. Then we sing Hanukkah songs. We have a guitar and piano player." They'll also play games. And of course there's tons of food made in her home's Kosher kitchen.

Sometimes called the "Congregation of Everyone" for its "for everyman" philosophy, Beit Kulam also is "the Congregation That Does," Cubell says. "We don't just say we're going to do it, we actually do it!"

Cubell is the first female rabbi to be ordained as rabbi with s'micha (rabbinical ordination) from Tifereth Israel Rabbinical Yeshiva in its 60-year history and the first woman to be accepted as a member of the American Council of Rabbis.

The cherry on top of Chabad of East Boca's Chanukah Festival will be the performance by Israel's King of Blues/Rock, Lazer Lloyd, who performs in Sanborn Square in Boca Raton on the eighth night of Hanukkah.

Lloyd's most recent album, an eponymous album released in June, has garnered a suitcase full of rave reviews for his skillful riffs. One of the best-known blues musicians in Israel, the Connecticut-raised singer/songwriter was born Lloyd Paul Blumen 40-something years ago. (Lazer is short of Eliezer, Lloyd's Hebrew name.) Living abroad in Israel for the last 20 years ago, Lloyd has watched Israel's love for the blues blossom. Now the land of his ancestors attracts A-list blues artists. Lloyd contends the blues have been there all along. He told The New York Times, "We consider King David to be the first blues singer."

The event also features carnival rides and food, and a menorah lighting. Tickets are $10 for adults, $5 for kids. For more information, visit chabadbocabeaches.com.

Chabad's dreidel honors

Who owns the world's most expensive dreidel?

According to the Guinness World Records, Chabad of South Palm Beach County does. The record was officially claimed on Oct. 23.

"Dreidel" is Yiddish for a spinning top, and most dreidels are toys. In the past, they were made of clay. This one is made of precious gems and metals.

The four-sided dreidel has a silver Tiffany frame, gemstone-encrusted gold plates with the four Hebrew letters: Nun, Gimmel, Hay and Shin, which form the acronym of the phrase: "Nes gadol hayah sham" or "A great miracle happened there," a reference to the Hanukkah miracle.

The top point is antique turquoise, and the point on which it spins is a diamond. The artist who made it, Pedro Maldonado of Artisan Jewelers in Manalapan, also used free-hanging diamonds and gems that sparkle when it spins.

Chabad of South Palm Beach appealed to the Guinness World Records Inc. to create custom criteria for this new category — the World's Most Valuable Dreidel.

"The completed Dreidel meets and exceeds the Guinness requirements in every category," Rabbi Leibel Stolik said.

Maldonado donated his skills to craft the piece, valued at $14,000.

Burrow into nature at Deerfield Island Park

Deerfield Island Park has much to teach us about what happens when man intrudes on nature. Keep that in mind as you travel the half-mile Coquina Trail that explores the eastern side of this 53.3-acre piece of land.

“This park is a hidden gem in the middle of the urban wilderness,” says naturalist Katharine Hendrickson, who works for the Broward County Parks and Recreation Division.

But to discover the island, you’ll need a boat. Free dockage for moderate and deep-water boats means you can bring your own or you can hop aboard the weekend pontoon shuttle that leaves Sullivan Park on the mainland.

Once on the island, find a picnic spot or take the opportunity to learn more about the ecology of this natural jewel.

“We are working to make this park less passive and more of an educational experience,” says Hendrickson — mentioning guided bird walks, kayak tours and more.

While walking on the boardwalk and sandy paths, you’ll see many plants and animals up close and personal.

On our visit, we were greeted by raccoons (there are three troops on the island), an orb weaver spinning an intricate web that she will destroy at the end of the day, a cardinal couple, an iguana that probably swam over to look for lunch and a gopher tortoise.

Hendrickson tells us there are about 50 burrows the tortoises have built on the island, of which 30 are actively populated.

Because the tortoises are a protected species, the island is closely monitored to be sure there are plenty of safe areas for them to find sandy land in which to burrow and plenty of vegetation for them to eat.

To understand the plants you will see along the way, you need to jump back in time to when Deerfield Island was still a peninsula surrounded by fresh water. In fact you’ll still find pond apples growing on the island that probably took root when the western part of the peninsula was a fresh water marsh; the eastern side was covered with slash pines.

Beginning in 1895, the lazy river to the east of the peninsula was widened and deepened to become the Florida East Coast Canal and later the Intracoastal Waterway.

What sand and sludge was removed to deepen and widen these waterways was dumped on the peninsula, raising its elevation, destroying the native vegetation and creating an open expanse of sand.

In 1904, the river on the south side of the peninsula was “improved” to help drain the Everglades. And in 1961, a waterway was built to connect this canal with the Intracoastal Waterway — turning the peninsula into an island.

With its habitat cut off from the mainland and little else growing, it was ripe to be invaded by Australian pines, Brazilian peppers, morning glory vines, wandering sailor and schefflera.

You’ll still find these on the island today, but Hendrickson and her small crew are slowly removing them.

“As we remove the invasives, we see natives starting to flourish. They are just waiting for their time to shine. It’s fantastic to see them rising up out of the sand,” she says.

Some of the natives such as wild coffee, mangrove trees, gumbo limbos, sea grapes, saw palmettos, coconut palms, ferns and oaks have arrived naturally. But others such as the stoppers and slash pines were planted.

A butterfly garden also was recently created, which was a big undertaking. Almost 30 volunteers, the plants and 27 bags of soil had to be transported to the island by boat and moved to the site on ATVs.

“It was a major logistical effort,” says Hendrickson. But like everything else in this island park, it is much appreciated.

“I’ve never met anyone who has come here and not felt a connection to this island. It’s a very special place,” says Hendrickson.

HISTORIC LORE

Deerfield Island also is known as Capone Island because in 1930 gangster Al Capone tried to purchase the land on which to build a casino, a 120-foot-wide swimming pool and a home. At that time it was a peninsula with access from Boca Raton. But to keep the gangster out, the city closed the roads to the island and refused to let him reopen them. By 1932 he was in federal prison and the rest is, well, history.

Along the Coast

Residents begin to tackle invasive plants overwhelming the beaches

By Deborah S. Hartz-Seeley

Nonie Wyckoff of Delray Beach has taken it upon herself to help educate Floridians living along the dunes about how to eliminate the invasive plants that are destroying native vegetation and opening the sand to dangerous erosion.

"The invasives need to be removed to make the beach look better and to protect it as well as our homes," says Wyckoff, who has owned her Bridgehampton condo for more than 20 years.

Her involvement started about a month ago when, by chance, she ran into dune biologist Rob Barron. A consultant for the city, he was walking the almost two miles of sand behind the town's beachfront homes. He'd been hired to map the invasive plants in order to rewrite the city's Comprehensive Dune Management Plan.

In talking to him, Wyckoff learned that the natural dune vegetation is under assault from invasive species.

And, of course, this is not only a problem in Delray Beach but all along Florida's coast. In fact, about 387 of the state's 825 miles of sandy beaches have experienced "critical erosion." That's enough to threaten development and recreation as well as cultural and environmental interests, according to the Florida Department of Environmental Protection.

And much of the problem can be linked to invasives replacing natives on the beaches because the natural greenery protects the beaches, dunes and homes behind them from storm damage and erosion. Those natives also provide habitat for coastal animals and can even help nesting sea turtles by shielding them from artificial light from the land.

"I couldn't believe what he was telling me about the problems with invasives," Wyckoff says.

So she not only talked to her fellow condo dwellers about undertaking an eradication program but she also contacted the neighbors.

"We feel the beach is something we should all look after," says Debby MacInnis at The Southampton, next door.

She admits to having noticed in the last two years that invasives are taking over the dunes behind her home.

So, after hearing from Wyckoff, she and her fellow condo dwellers met to discuss the problem and the possibilities. And now they are looking into turning their eradication project over to their landscape contractor.

But others are doing it themselves.

On Wednesday afternoons, you'll find Nate Kinbacher, who manages and maintains The Bridgehampton, out on the beach swinging a machete and using a saw to whack and hack his way through the invasive plants. Once they are cut back, he drags them to where they'll be picked up by bulk garbage collection.

"It's hot sweaty work. But I've always had a green thumb and like being outdoors working with my hands," says Kinbacher, who says it takes about three hours to clear 100 square feet of dune.

GET INVOLVED

For more information about fighting invasives on Florida dunes, visit www.nrcs.usda.gov/Internet/FSE_DOCUMENTS/nrcs141p2_014913.pdf.

He goes after the non-natives Barron has pointed out as the four biggest culprits in this area.

Of course there are many more, but looking out over the dunes, one sees the shiny bright green leaves of the Hawaiian sea grape and the prickly nicker bean that can quickly grow 18 to 20 feet in length. There's the Brazilian pepper, which has red berries that birds eat and then spread their seeds. And the prolific coin vine is aptly named for its seeds that look like, well, coins.

Soon the dunes here will be like those behind Delray Beach's Fountain House where the owners have already cleared the exotics and are getting ready to plant sea oats, saw palmettos and other rare but native coastal shrubs.

With the invasives removed, some of the more than 170 native species you find on wild, natural dunes will have room and sunlight to thrive.

"There's no obligation to homeowners to do anything about the problem of invasives. It's just smart," Barron says. ★

Trials underway show promise in treating Alzheimer's patients

With no cure yet available, and few ways to stall its progress, Alzheimer's Disease has passed cancer as the disease most feared by Americans, according to 2015 surveys.

Alzheimer's steals memory and thinking ability and eventually kills its victims. In 2015, an estimated 35 million people worldwide have the disease. By 2050, as more people live longer, that number could grow to 131.5 million — or one out of 85 people globally.

For people ages 85 to 95, the chance of developing Alzheimer's is nearly 50 percent.

Caring for an Alzheimer's patient takes an emotional and financial toll on millions more — the caregivers and families.

Michael Tuchman is one of thousands of doctors involved in medical trials that could find a cure. He is screening and evaluating test subjects in five current trials.

"There is reason to be optimistic," said Tuchman, a board-certified neurologist and psychiatrist who practices in Palm Beach Gardens.

Amyloid, a protein that collects in the brains of Alzheimer's victims, is currently the "prime therapeutic target," according to the journal Nature. "After 30 years of research, we have moved in the last 12 years to 'Let's move that amyloid out of there,'" Tuchman said.

Two strategies are among those being tested: preventing the buildup of amyloid, and finding ways to flush it out of the body.

Certain trials have isolated mouse antibodies that prevent the accumulation of amyloids. Other researchers are transferring protective antibodies from the small percentage of humans who seem to be genetically immune to Alzheimer's. If the mouse and human trials prove successful, it will be possible to slow the disease with an injection.

When Alois Alzheimer, a German psychiatrist, conducted autopsies on abnormal brains, he identified three cases of the disease that now bears his name. All three cases involved people younger than 60.

Alzheimer, who died in 1915, was not able to predict that the disease would occur more often in older people, because few people of his era lived past 60.

Even in the middle of the 20th century, Alzheimer's was seldom seen.

"When I went to medical school in the '60s, I was told it was something you'll never

ALZHEIMER'S FACT SHEET

Alzheimer's Disease is an irreversible disease that is characterized by loss of memory, thinking and reasoning skills, leading to a loss of cognitive functions and dementia.

What are the risk factors?

Age: Symptoms typically become noticeable after age 60. Risk of developing the disease doubles every 5 years after 65.

Nearly 50 percent of adults older than age 85 are living with Alzheimer's.

Family history: Having one or more immediate family members with the disease increases the risk.

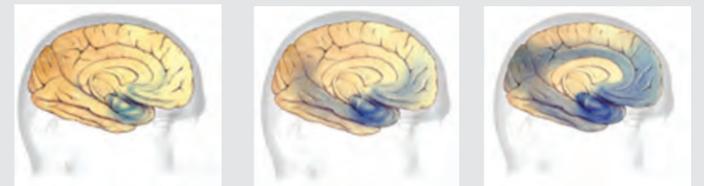

Heredity: Certain genes increase the risk and others directly cause Alzheimer's.

What are the signs of Alzheimer's disease?

Mild cognitive impairment (MCI): Memory problems that differ from normal, age-related changes in cognitive functions (such as occasionally forgetting which word to use, but still remembering later on). Symptoms of MCI include:

- Memory loss, such as asking the same questions multiple times and forgetting the use of everyday items
- Ongoing changes in thinking and reasoning skills, such as having difficulty managing money and paying bills
- Needing additional time to complete everyday tasks, such as eating, brushing teeth and communicating

What are the stages of Alzheimer's disease?

PRODROMAL

Begins: 20 or so years before typical diagnosis

Plaques begin to form in the brain; symptoms not usually detected until people experience mild cognitive impairment

MILD TO MODERATE

Typical length of stage: 2-10 years

Areas of the brain related to memory and thinking are affected; symptoms lead to interference with work and social life

SEVERE

May last: 1-5 years

The cortex is seriously damaged; individuals can no longer recognize family or friends, and lose the ability to communicate see, and that's what I told my students 10 years later," Tuchman said.

A hundred years after Alzheimer's death, the only definitive test for the disease is the same: an autopsy that shows the presence of amyloid proteins and neurofibrillary tangles in the brain.

However, there are now much better ways to diagnose Alzheimer's early in its progression, Tuchman said.

"We are now able to determine with a 90 to 95 percent confidence level," he said. "That gives us hope."

Tuchman and his colleagues make their diagnoses based on family history, the existence of Parkinson's Disease and previous strokes, among other indicators.

Patients can be given MRI, CT and PET scans and spinal taps to indicate the presence of amyloids. Doctors can also determine if the problem is Alzheimer's or some other form of dementia, which can be caused by strokes, for example.

Since Alzheimer's results in permanent brain damage, early detection gives the most hope for slowing its progress with drugs now available. The best people to notice early symptoms are people who see the patient every day: family and friends.

Recent studies show that the brain remains elastic longer than previously thought. So, an old dog can learn new tricks — and should, to keep the brain cells firing. Puzzles, games, learning new languages, reading and other brain work all keep the "old" brain working better.

Studies also show that exercise benefits brain health, and not just because it improves circulation.

Paws Up for Pets

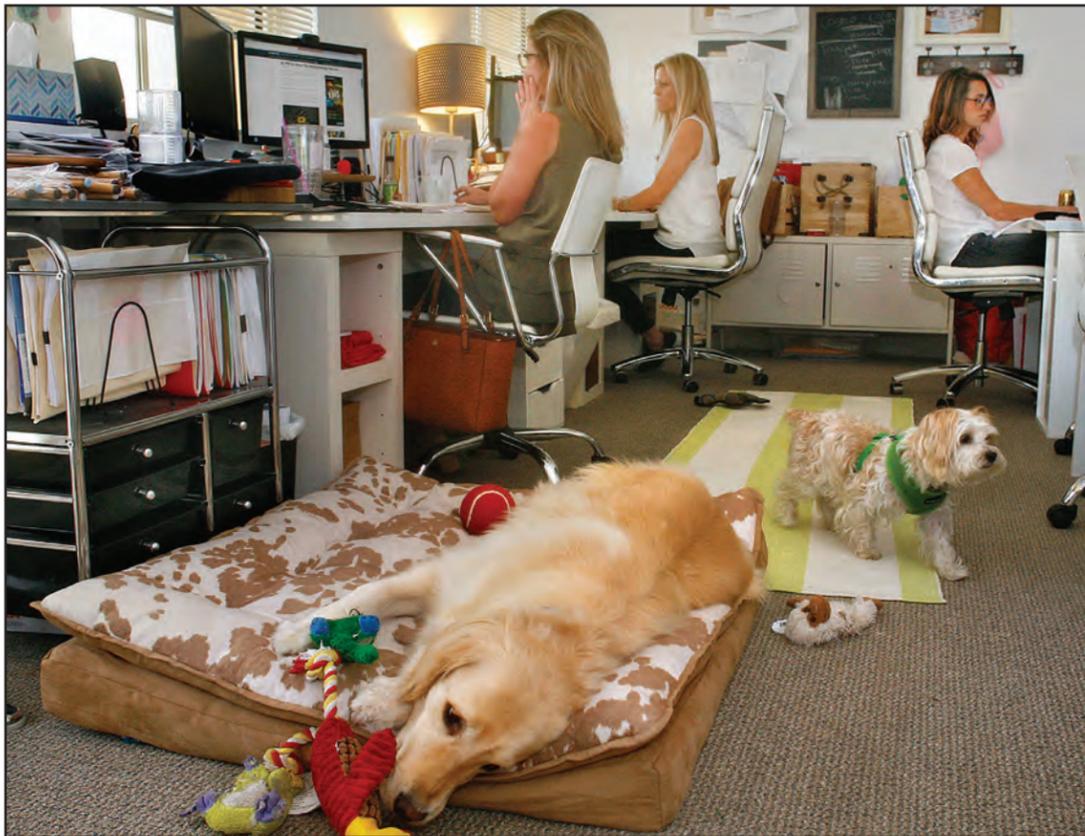

Delray company aims to make holidays brighter for animals in need

We are in the heart of the holiday season. And you have a choice. You can scramble to various stores and spend hours online to shop for gifts you hope will be well-received by your family and friends.

Or you can consider a powerful third option by purchasing items from companies committed to giving back to homeless dogs, cats and other companion animals. Locally, Jenna Sellers Miller is launching a holiday tradition in memory of Benny, her late, great otterhound mix she adopted from a Tallahassee shelter. He was just hours away from being euthanized because of shelter overcrowding.

As chief executive officer of Architec Brands, a company based in downtown Delray Beach, Miller is donating 5 percent of each product sale of her Totally Sweet Products line to Animal Aid Inc., a nonprofit, no-kill animal rescue shelter and adoption center in Oakland Park. This group takes in emergency, abuse and neglect cases as well as dogs and cats from animal control agencies in Palm Beach, Broward and Miami-Dade counties.

Miller is calling her first pet donation venture the Bake for Benny fund. And Miller will donate 5 percent of all sales — not simply net profit — from items in her Totally Sweet Products brand. TSP is the new boutique line of bakeware tools and accessories by Architec Brands, a manufacturing company founded in 2000 by Miller's mother, Kathleen Sellers. Its products are now available in major department stores and gourmet shops throughout the United States plus eight other countries.

Miller, who shares her home now with three former shelter dogs named Birdie, Chaney and Molly, is focusing on Animal Aid this time, but has bigger plans. She intends to expand her giving by divvying up the funds to more nonprofit animal charities in the coming years.

"Launching the new TSP line means a new avenue for us to give back," says Miller, who runs a pet-welcoming office. "We have been wanting to do this for a long time and are ready to give back to pet charities and no-kill shelters that work so hard."

Benny was her inspiration. Miller expresses it best:

"Benny was such a good dog, no, make that the best dog," says Miller. "I found him on Petfinder.com 14 years ago. Something about his photo, his eyes that I connected with and I immediately called the shelter in Tallahassee where he was housed. They told me I better get him fast because he was scheduled for 'destruction' at 8 a.m. the next day."

"I was dating my now husband, Bryan, at the time and asked him if he would drive with me and he immediately replied, 'Let's go.' We drove all night to Tallahassee and arrived at 7 a.m. to adopt Benny. He was a scruffy, smelly mutt and we stopped in Gainesville where we took him to a PetSmart store to get him groomed."

BAKE FOR BENNY

Learn more by visiting the Bake for Benny website (www.je0711.wix.com/bake-for-benny), the Architec website (www.architecproducts.com/tsp/) and its designated charity beneficiary, Animal Aid Inc. (www.animal-aid.com/index.html).

"Benny became our first office dog at Architec Brands, and passed away a couple years ago. He had a nice, long happy life and I will never forget him."

If you would like to make this holiday a special one for animals in need, consider these ways you can make a difference for shelter animals:

- Volunteer to walk shelter dogs or play with cats.
- Donate spare towels, pet beds and blankets to an animal shelter.
- Offer to temporarily foster a shelter pet during the holiday season.
- Provide transportation for shelter animals needing to go to foster or adoptive homes.
- Spread the word. If you adopted a pet at an animal shelter, post his photo and your gratitude on your social media sites.

• Host a party for your pet and ask attendees to bring items that can be donated to shelters in lieu of gifts for your pet.

• Honor the memory of a beloved pet who passed away by making a donation in his name to a nonprofit pet group.

Take it from Miller. It feels good to give.

"Benny represents the inherent worth of all animal life and highlights the incredible work and devotion of those who dedicate their time to saving and improving pet lives," says Miller. "This is a way I can honor his memory."

CHRISTMAS CANTATA

The Chancel Choir of Church of the Palms located at 1960 N. Swinton Avenue in Delray Beach will present the Christmas Cantata The Promise of Light by Joel Raney on Sunday afternoon, December 6th at 3 pm in the Sanctuary. The program is free and open to the public. A free will offering will be taken for the Music Ministry of the church. All are invited to attend a light reception in the Friendship Center immediately following the Cantata.

CHRISTMAS EVE

The Church of the Palms invites the community to attend our Christmas Eve Candlelight Service on Thursday, December 24th at 6:30 pm. In addition to the Worship Service, we will have specially selected Christmas music for your enjoyment beginning at 6:00 pm and ending at 6:30 pm for the Candlelight Service to begin. This service will bring a message of hope, love and inspiration for all who attend, both young and old.

Remembrance

Lulu Whittaker

Lulu Whittaker passed away on Nov. 4. She was 10 years old. A typical Westie, Lulu was determined, smart and spirited. She was the Perle Mesta of Gulf Stream. Lulu was often seen wearing her pink Lilly Pulitzer dress and was the life of the party. She was a wonderful hostess when entertaining her friends or sponsoring an event for Dogs 4 Disabled Veterans. Lulu was everyone's favorite and will be missed by all who knew her, especially Barbara.

Step-by-step: How to wrap a gift

Step 1: Spread paper facedown on flat surface with gift in center. Pull up sides of paper, estimating where they'll meet; cut.
Step 2: Fold sides over; secure in middle.

Step 3: On one end of box, flatten paper from both sides against box, creating triangles above and below. Crease triangle edges.

Step 4: Tuck corners in at ends.

Step 5: Fold top triangle down, then lift bottom triangle over that one and tape in place.

Step 6: Lynn Waldenmyer, a wrap demonstrator at The Container Store in Town Center, shows completed packages. To finish, wrap ribbon lengthwise across front of box, bring to back and twist so ribbon spans box width. Bring to front, knot and tie bow. Finish package with holiday flair.

For coastal flair

This time of year, beach-themed ornaments are especially popular at Hand's Office & Art Supply in Delray Beach. Besides being used as tree décor, the ornaments are used to embellish gifts, giving them a seaside feel, said Liz Hughes, Hand's manager. But the ornaments are good sellers all year long.

Mary Thurwachter / The Coastal Star

"People like to buy them as a remembrance of the warmth and sunshine," Hughes said. "We have ornaments made in Florida and from all over the world. Most are under $10."

Hand's also has an extensive collection of Christmas cards and wrapping paper and is at 325 E. Atlantic Ave., Delray Beach.

of holiday gift wraps, ribbons, bows, totes, tie-ons, boxes and other gift packaging solutions. "Have some cider or wine. Make it fun."

Here are some of her wrapping tips:

- Use paper with a grid on the back. It makes measuring easy. Then allow two inches on the ends of a box before you begin to fold.
- When choosing a wrap, remember that typically, small patterned wraps work best for small boxes. Wraps with larger designs work well on bigger boxes so that the entire pattern may be seen. It's always a nice touch to select a wrap that speaks to the personality or tastes of the recipient.

Wrapping trends

This year's top themes for wrap include trees, snowflakes and deer motifs, says Natalia Woodworth of The Container Store. "Foxes are the new owl (last year's popular add-on animal) this year, and the store still has its signature penguin, moose, hedgehog and dog. Lots of natural recycled wraps again — as well as wood/wood-grain textures and patterns. Pinterest-y/DIY/personalizable elements like chalk wraps are still very big this year — we're also seeing chalk ribbons and chalk boxes! Textured ribbons are big this year as well as reversible ribbons and velvet. Hanukkah gift wrap features lots of silvers and blues."

— Mary Thurwachter

- Create your own, unique presentation using a variety of materials and techniques. Experiment with ribbon in a basket weave pattern, use stickers and decals instead of tape.
- A good pair of scissors is essential for cutting paper straight.

- Use two-sided tape. You won't see the tape on the outside of the package at all.
- Pick a theme. Paper designs at The Container Store are mostly made in America but some come from other countries. There are special designs for gifts for boyfriends, pets, kids, teachers, etc.

Choose embellishments for extra allure. Ornaments often are used for this purpose and can go on the tree after the present is opened.

If your gift is large, like a surfboard or a bike, create a little game with clues that eventually lead the recipient to the garage where you've hidden the gift. Bulky toys and other gifts can be stuffed in a bag.

Put a bow on it! Making one isn't as difficult as it may look. Wrap experts at the store will show you how.

Personalize presents with creative gift tags you can buy or make yourself.

Keep all of your wrapping supplies neat, accessible and protected. Depending on how much space you have, you can find solutions for storing these materials on a shelf, under a bed or in a spare closet. ★

Shopping Hot Spots

5 not-to-miss places on Worth Avenue

Story and photos by Mary Thurwachter

Accolades keep rolling in for Palm Beach's Worth Avenue, a collection of more than 200 upscale shops (Tiffany, Chanel, Hermes, Saks, Louis Vuitton and Cartier, etc.) offering everything from designer jewelry, clothing and shoes to internationally acclaimed antiques and paintings.

Conde Nast Traveler dubbed Worth Avenue one of "the top five places to shop in country" and USA Today has it on the list of "10 Most Iconic Streets." Worth Avenue's history began in 1918, when Addison Mizner built the exclusive Everglades Club at the road's west end. That Mediterranean-style structure set the pace for the prestige the shopping area that it is today. Beyond the shops, restaurants and galleries, there is much to see.

Here are five spots not to miss:

1. Via Mizner

Worth Avenue features eight cloistered courtyards. The via design was intended to resemble Venice, without the water. One of the most impressive is Via Mizner with its winding, covered walkways, fountains and flowers, and colorful tiled stairways. The complex has 19 buildings, 40 small shops, flats and includes Addison Mizner's five-story apartment at 339 Worth Ave. (above), with a bridge that connects his living space to his offices. Mizner's love of monkeys is evident throughout. In fact, Mizner's pet monkey, Johnnie Brown, is buried in the courtyard, which has a monkey motif (below). Look for it if you're dining at Pizza Alfresco (14 Via Mizner).

2. Via Amore

If you've lived here awhile, you probably knew this as the Gucci Courtyard. The name changed in 2012 after the Gucci building (256 Worth Ave.) was sold. From gurgling fountains to playful sculptures and colorful bougainvillea, this via is gorgeous and historic (Gucci started his Palm Beach fashion shows here). Via Amore, so named on Valentine's Day in 2012 by property owner Burt Handelsman, is where Historical Walking Tours of Wonderful Worth Avenue (www.worth-avenue.com/specialevent/historical-walking-tour-at-worth-avenue/) begin on Wednesdays during the season.

3. Ta-boo

From its beginning in 1941, Ta-boo (221 Worth Ave.) has been a magnet for the rich and famous. Frank Sinatra, John F. Kennedy and the Duke and Duchess of Windsor dined here. Today's famous guests include Rod Stewart, James Patterson, Hoda Kotb and Kathie Lee Gifford. The food is good, the happy hour is legendary and then there are those adorable monkeys (above) on the wall!

4. The Living Wall

As part of Worth Avenue's $15 million face-lift in 2010, an 840-square-foot vertical garden was added to the west wall of the Saks Fifth Avenue (above). The living wall is made up of 10,900 plants. Shoppers often stop to admire the wall (150 Worth Ave.) but the wall's most dedicated watcher can be found across the street in the window of the DTR Modern Galleries at 440 S. County Road (right). A security guard never takes his eyes off the wall. He's actually a sculpture by Marc Sijan but looks so real you have to stare back at him awhile to see that he's not breathing!

5. The Clock Tower

Designed by Bridges Marsh & Associates (both Digby Bridges and Mark Marsh are Ocean Ridge residents), the 30-foot tower on the sidewalk at the east end of Worth Avenue serves as a monument to the Palm Beach Pier that stretched into the Atlantic from 1926 to 1969. The landmark, built in 2010, also alerts drivers on A1A that this is where Worth Avenue begins. Tourists and other shoppers can't resist using the tower as a backdrop for a selfie or as a convenient spot for a quick siesta.

This is the first in a series of five shopping areas The Coastal Star will feature this season. Next up: Plaza del Mar in Manalapan, followed by East Atlantic Avenue in Delray Beach, Mizner Park in Boca Raton and Royal Palm Place in Boca Raton.

Meet the Pro

Even with 50 wins, golfer sees best still ahead

By Brian Biggane

The countless rounds former PGA Tour player Steve LeBrun has played with Ocean Ridge pro Jimmy Lytle has left him with no doubt Lytle has what it takes to reach the game's highest level.

"He's a good enough player," said LeBrun, who played on the Tour in 2013 and is in the process of working his way back. "He's got a great short game, and his long game is fine. He's probably one of the best chippers and putters I've played with."

"He's just got to get himself right from the mental side, to believe he can shoot those scores when the lights are shining brightest."

Lytle, 29, has spent a lifetime proving himself on the links, from knocking it around with top junior players at Delray Beach Golf Course in his formative years to Pope John Paul (now St. John Paul Academy) in Boca Raton to Elon University in North Carolina to Pine Tree and Quail Ridge in Boynton Beach.

Along the way he's met some of the biggest names in the game, from former LPGA star Meg Mallon, for whom he caddied in the recent LPGA Legends event at Seagate Country Club in Delray Beach, to Hall of Fame teacher Bob Toski, with whom he's worked in recent years. In eight years as a pro, he's won 50 events — the vast majority on the Palm Beach County-based Minor League Tour. But ask Lytle to name the highlight of his career so far and he replies, "I don't think it's happened yet."

He has had his moments. In 2011, he made it through the first two rounds of Web.

com qualifying to reach the pressure-packed Q School, but didn't fare well enough there to get a full-time playing card. The same year he shot 63 to win a Web.com qualifier at Jacaranda in west Broward, then was in the top 15 after two rounds before fading.

"That was good; most people miss the cut in their first tournament," he said. "And I've finished second in pretty much every state's Open in the Northeast. So a lot of top finishes, but my best is ahead of me for sure."

History says time is still on his side. LeBrun, of West Palm Beach, didn't reach the Tour until he was 34 in 2013, when he played in 21 events and earned more than $330,000. Justin Hicks of Royal Palm Beach spent years working as a bag boy at PGA National before his break came in 2011 at age 36; he's since earned more than $2.6 million.

After failing to get past the first stage of Web.com qualifying this year — the top 25 players from that tour move up to the PGA Tour every year — Lytle plans to go back to basics for 2016.

"I've tried to do too much the last couple years," he said. "I'm going to throw out the window what happened this year, and maybe last year, and just go back to something I know I had success with."

LeBrun said that what Lytle

Jimmy Lytle reads the green as he caddies for pro golfer Meg Mallon during the Walgreens Charity Championship at the Seagate Golf Club in Delray Beach in early November. Mallon, of Delray Beach, made an attempt to defend her title at the Legends Tour event. Tim Stepien/The Coastal Star needs more than anything else is the belief that he can produce under pressure — and then go out and do it.

"The Minor League Tour, the mini-tour events, all that's fine, but that's not really golf," LeBrun said. "Q School, the PGA Tour, that's golf. Your body feels totally different than playing those other events. Maybe you're a little nervous, but it boils down to if you can shoot good scores when your body doesn't even feel like your body, that's when you can go and get through this thing.

"He needs to go to Q School with the attitude of 'I can beat anybody here,' because he has done that. He gets and keeps that mindset, then we'll see what he can do." ★

Mandatory boater education coming to Everglades National Park

Everglades National Park will require training for all boaters navigating park waters beginning next year.

The 1.5 million-acre park harbors some of the most remote shallow-water fishing and boating destinations in Florida, including most of Florida Bay and the Wilderness Waterway, which stretches 99 miles from Everglades City to Flamingo.

Although details are still being developed for the boater-education program, park officials say mandatory training will be required sometime in 2016 and will be available online.

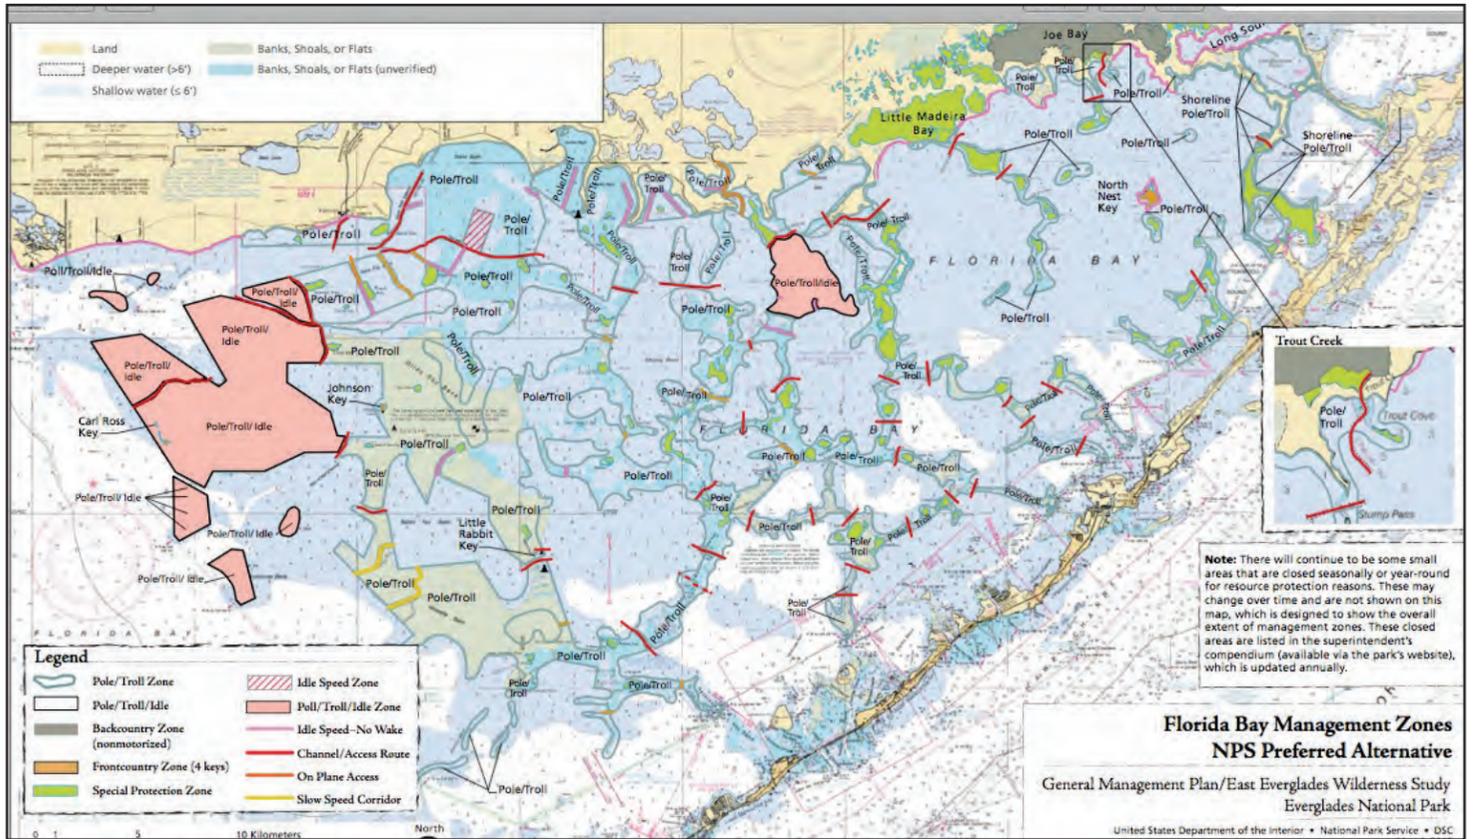

Park planner Fred Herling said key goals of the boater-education program are resource protection (primarily for sea grasses), respectful boating behavior and safety.

Boater education will be free — at least at first. A boating permit fee, probably $50 to $75, is expected to be phased in. The online course will include links to nautical charts of the park's waters.

The public will be notified of the date when mandatory education is required. For updates, check the park's website, www.nps.gov/ever.

Boater education is part of the park's new general management plan, approved in October.

Other key features include 140,000 acres of shallow-water zoning to protect marine habitat

New boating zones in Florida Bay, including poll-and-troll zones and poll-troll-idle zones, were approved as part of Everglades National Park's new general management plan. The shallow-water boating zones are not physically marked yet. ENP website image as well as designated zones for commercial and private airboats.

Boating zones will include poll-and-troll zones, where combustion engines can't be used, poll-troll-idle zones and on-plane access channels.

CCA/Florida, the recreational fishing group, worked with park planners in developing the new management plan.

"We believe the general management plan strikes an appropriate balance of management measures to safeguard resources while allowing for reasonable boating and fishing access," said Trip Aukeman, director of advocacy for CCA/Florida.

Implementing the new management plan, including boating zones, is expected to take several years and will depend on the availability of funding, park Superintendent Pedro Ramos said.

Sachs supports incentive for boat beacons

State Sen. Maria Sachs of Delray Beach will co-sponsor a bill that would give boaters a financial incentive for buying and registering satellite beacons for their vessels.

Sachs will co-sponsor Senate Bill 746, filed by state Sen. Joe Negron of Stuart, because the bill accomplishes the voluntary incentive approach discussed during a boating safety workshop Sachs organized in September at the Delray Beach Public Library, said Gladys Ferrer, a legislative assistant in Sachs' office.

Elected officials joined representatives from law enforcement and the boating industry at the safety workshop, held in response to this summer's extensive search for Austin Stephanos and Perry Cohen — two 14-year-old boys who left Jupiter Inlet in a 19-foot boat on July 24 and never returned.

Their capsized Sea Craft boat was found in the ocean off New Smyrna Beach.

Negron worked on legislation promoting satellite beacons with Austin's parents, who started the AustinBlu Foundation in their son's memory to promote boating safety.

"My bill will stress education and the use of technology for increased safety," Sachs said in an email. "The state will be offering financial incentives to encourage education and safety. This is a win-win proposition, and I urge everyone to support it."

Rescue beacons send up a unique signal to satellites during emergencies, allowing rescuers to pinpoint the location of the boaters in distress.

Negron's bill would offer boaters a price break of about 25 percent on the annual vessel registration fee if they prove they have a satellite beacon registered with NOAA for their boat.

Another boating safety bill (SB 644), introduced by state Sen. Jeremy Ring of Margate, would increase from 14 to 16 the minimum age to operate a personal watercraft in Florida.

Tip of the month

Take extra precautions to avoid leaving fishing line in the water, dangling from tree branches or on the ground where it can harm birds and marine animals.

Discarded fishing line has killed pelicans and other sea birds and has cut off circulation to the flippers of marine mammals, such as manatees and bottlenose dolphin.

Consider bringing an empty tennis-ball can when you go fishing.

After trimming a leader or removing old line from a reel, stuff the unwanted line into the can, replace the lid and stow it until the line can be disposed of properly.

Monofilament line can be recycled. Look for fishing line recycling bins (large, white PVC pipes) around boat ramps and fishing piers.

Berkley (a fishing equipment company) uses monofilament line scraps to make plastic products, including artificial reefs for ponds and lakes.

For details about recycling monofilament fishing line, see www.fishinglinerecycling.org.

Gulf Stream School students have the music in them

By Ron Hayes

Eight hundred Florida elementary school music students applied.

For 300 spots.

And those who made the cut would face as many as 8,000 music teachers listening to their every note.

The odds were tough, but eight fourth- and fifth-graders from the Gulf Stream School have beaten them.

On Jan. 14, five GSS students will be among the 200 singers of the All-State Ensemble in the Tampa Convention Center when music teachers gather for the Florida Elementary Music Educators annual conference.

And another three will join the 100 members of the Orff Ensemble, performing on xylophones, triangles, maracas and drums.

“It’s a huge conference, with all the state educators from elementary school through college attending and more than 100 schools participating,” says Rob White-Davis, the school’s director of music.

“Each school can send a maximum of 10 students and we had eight accepted.”

The audition process itself is enough to scare many away.

During the third week in September, the students

Gulf Stream School students who will participate in the all-state concert are (l-r): Stefan Awaida, Tori Wheat, Sarah Vanden Bosch, Daniel Rogers, Bianca Mason, Alivia Roth, Morgan Mattson and Mia Dagher. Jerry Lower/The Coastal Star recorded their auditions for the music association’s panel of judges to consider, following a 16-page set of extremely detailed instructions:

Are You Sleeping? will be sung a cappella as a round at 90-100 beats per minute.

The student will begin and the teacher will enter after two measures.

Sing only one time. Breath marks are included.

Fifth-graders Morgan Mattson, 10, of Manalapan, and Tori Wheat, 10, of Boynton Beach, know what to expect. They were selected last year.

“First you rehearse your part alone,” Mattson says, “and then when you sing it with the whole group it sounds really, really good. It’s really fun, but the actual performance is 30 to 45 minutes and you rehearse for six hours.”

Other students who won the judges’ approval are:

- Stefan Awaida, 11, Delray Beach.
- Sarah Vanden Bosch, 11, Ocean Ridge.

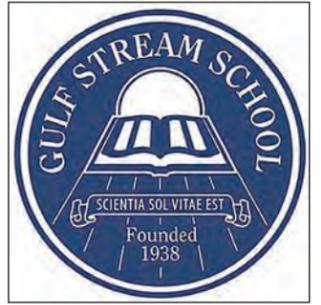

- Mia Dagher, 9, Ocean Ridge.

- Bianca Mason, 11, Gulf Stream.

- Daniel Rogers, 10, Delray Beach.

- Alivia Roth, 10, Gulf Stream.

“I feel thankful,” said first-timer Roth, “because I didn’t know my voice was that good. I’m kind of nervous, but there’s 200 other people singing, and they’ll be singing so beautifully that if I do a wrong note it won’t stand out.” ★

School ranked as one of best in country

Gulf Stream School has been ranked No. 32 out of 50 schools identified as the best private schools in the country by TheBestSchools.org, an independent organization.

Only one other Florida school made the list. Rocky Bayou Christian Academy in Niceville ranked No. 4.

To make the list, schools, among other criteria, must have at least three of the six grades (first through sixth grades) that are traditionally categorized as elementary-level grades and must exceed nearby public schools in course selections and scholastic success.

Holiday season alive with kid-friendly events

By Janis Fontaine

The 13th annual Gingerbread Holiday Concert by the Lynn University Philharmonic returns from campus to the Great Hall in the Boca Raton Resort & Club at 3 p.m. Dec. 13.

The 80-member Lynn University Philharmonic's program features the concert suite from the animated film The Polar Express, based on the beloved children's book by Chris Van Allsburg.

Composers Alan Silvestri and Glen Ballard wrote the suite, which includes a medley of the songs Believe, The Polar Express, When Christmas Comes to Town and Spirit of the Season. A Hanukkah medley and a six-song sing-along, under the direction of Guillermo Figueroa, balance the program.

A pre-show reception features champagne (for parents) and gingerbread cookies. New this year, Santa will pose for photos with kids and adults. Another perfect place for the photo is in front of the 30-foot decorated tree surrounded by gaily wrapped oversized gifts.

This annual concert is an important fundraiser for the Lynn Conservatory of Music. It supports the scholarship that many of the conservatory's 103 students depend on for their tuition and expenses.

Tickets, $35, are available in advance only.

If you go: Gingerbread Holiday Concert, 3 p.m. Dec. 13, Boca Raton Resort & Club Great Hall, 501 E. Camino Real.

Admission: $35 (includes valet) through the box office at 237-9000 or online at events.lynn.edu/upcoming-events/

Cruising with Santa

Delray Yacht Cruises will host a Cookie Cruise with Santa on select days in December.

Get in the spirit, Florida-style, on a yacht cruise of the Intracoastal Waterway. A light ocean breeze will likely ruffle some whiskers, and festive music will blend with the sound of waves lapping the hull of the Lady Atlantic.

The adventure will begin and end at Veterans Park in Delray Beach.

Boarding begins at 9:30 a.m. and the boat will leave the dock at 10:30 a.m. and return at noon. Visitors will cruise south through Delray Beach, Boca Raton and Highland Beach.

Parents can sip coffee or tea and admire the architecture of the homes lining the Intracoastal while kids can visit with Santa, enjoy a craft activity, and nosh on cookies and other treats.

If you go: Cruising with Santa, 10:30 a.m. Dec. 12, 19 and 20, Veterans Park, 802 NE First St., Delray Beach. Admission: $20, which includes a visit with Santa, cookies and milk or hot chocolate or coffee and tea, and a craft activity. Reservations are required. Info: Call 243-0686.

Children's Gala and Festival of Trees

The lovely Ann Norton Sculpture Gardens in West Palm Beach opened its doors for its annual Festival of Trees on Dec. 4. The exhibit, which features professionally decorated trees, will be open through Dec. 16. Last year nearly 5,000 people visited the festooned Fraser and Douglas firs scattered throughout the 1.7-acre garden.

One popular highlight of this annual celebration is the Children's Gala, which takes place from 5 to 7 p.m. Dec. 13.

This year, Hansa Creation Inc. brings a jungle-full of lifelike, life-sized stuffed animals to decorate the gardens.

Visitors will find flamingos balancing on one leg and a family of tigers resting after a long day. Have a family scavenger hunt to find all the animals artfully hidden among the garden's rare palms and sculptures.

The theme of this year's show is "The Joy of Holiday Traditions: Celebrating Family Heritage," and it features more than 25 trees. Trees are sponsored by area patrons and businesses and are designed by local interior designers, artists, architects and florists, who

Family dinner theater
How The Grinch Stole Christmas

Make your reservations by Dec. 10 if you want to bring the family to dinner and a show at First Presbyterian Church of Delray Beach to celebrate the holidays.

At 5 p.m. Dec. 13, the children, youth and adults of the parish will be singing, dancing and starring in this production of the timeless Seuss tale How the Grinch Stole Christmas. A special surprise solo is also planned.

Dinner begins at 5 p.m. in Fellowship Hall with special menus for children (tomato bisque, grilled cheese, mini-hot dogs and dessert) and adults (Christmas salad, roast beef, fingerling potatoes, vegetables, rolls and dessert).

If you go: How the Grinch Stole Christmas, 5 p.m. Dec. 13, First Presbyterian Church of Delray Beach, 33 Gleason St., Delray Beach. Admission: $7 adults, $5 children, or $20 for family. Reservations are required by Dec. 10 at 276-6338. Info: firstdelray.com.

Piles of Smiles 'Snow Day'

Sugar Sand Park Community Center is at it again!

For the fifth year, visitors can experience a South Florida novelty. Snow!

From 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Dec. 19, children ages 4 to 12 can play until their hands freeze in 25 tons of real snow.

And there's so much more! A giant inflatable polar bear slide, bounce house and ride, a sock-skating rink, obstacle course games, a sweet treat decoration station, a holiday theme craft, music and appearance by special characters are planned.

Adult admission is included with paid child admission, but rides and activities are for children only.

They'll also have food vendors on site, and the Florida

Panthers hockey team's Panther Patrol will return in the team's tricked-out interactive party-mobile. An 88-foot street hockey rink will thrill hockey fans.

If you go: Snow Day at Sugar Sand Park, 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Dec. 19, 300 S. Military Trail, Boca Raton. Admission: $12 in advance, $15 at the gate. Info: 347-3948 or www.SugarSandPark.org.

Original Editor's note: "We take pleasure in answering this prominently the communication below, expressing at the same time our great gratification that its faithful author is numbered among the friends of The Sun"

Dear Editor,

I am 8 years old. Some of my little friends say there is no Santa Claus. Papa says, "If you see it in the Sun, it's so." Please tell me the truth, is there a Santa Claus?

Virginia O'Hanlon, 115 West Ninety Fifth Street

Virginia, your little friends are wrong. They have been affected by the skepticism of a skeptical age. They do not believe except they see. They think that nothing can be which is not comprehensible by their little minds. All minds, Virginia, whether they be men's or children's, are little. In this great universe of ours, man is a mere insect, an ant, in his intellect as compared with the boundless world about him, as measured by the intelligence capable of grasping the whole of truth and knowledge.

Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist, and you know that they abound and give to your life its highest beauty and joy. Alas! how dreary would be the world if there were no Santa Claus! It would be as dreary as if there were no Virginias. There would be no childlike faith then, no poetry, no romance to make tolerable this existence. We should have no enjoyment, except in sense and sight. The external light with which childhood fills the world would be extinguished.

Not believe in Santa Claus! You might as well not believe in fairies. you might get your papa to hire men to watch in all the chimneys on Christmas Eve to catch Santa Claus, but even if you did not see Santa Claus coming down, what would that prove? Nobody sees Santa Claus, but that is no sign that there is no Santa Claus. The most real things in the world are those that neither children nor men can see. Did you ever see fairies dancing on the lawn? Of course not, but that's no proof that they are not there. Nobody can conceive or imagine all the wonders there are unseen and unseeable in the world.

You tear apart the baby's rattle and see what makes the noise inside, but there is a veil covering the unseen world which not the strongest man, nor even the united strength of all the strongest men that ever lived could tear apart. Only faith, poetry, love, romance, can push aside that curtain and view and picture the supernal beauty and glory beyond. Is it all real? Ah, Virginia, in all this world there is nothing else real and abiding. No Santa Claus! Thank God! He lives and lives forever. A thousand years from now, Virginia, nay 10 times 10,000 years from now, he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood.

"Is There a Santa Claus?" reprinted from the September 21, 1897, edition of The New York Sun.

House of the Month

Each month, The Coastal Star features a house for sale in our community. The House of the Month is presented as a service to our advertisers and provides readers with a peek inside one of our houses.

This house, crafted by renowned Palm Beach luxury home builder James Woolems, sits on 0.66 acre close to the 100-foot deeded beach for owners.

A grand foyer opens onto a spacious loggia that overlooks the pool and gardens.

Classic Ocean Ridge estate

This two story residence has more than 6,500 total square feet. There are four en suite bedrooms. The master bedroom has its own marble fireplace and there is another downstairs in the spacious living room. The master bath has dual closets, a steam shower and a spa tub.

In addition, the home has a powder room for guests and a cabana bath. It also has oak hardwood floors throughout.

The kitchen has custom cabinets and state-of-the-art appliances.

The house has a 2½-car garage with custom built-ins, a whole house generator and a laundry room on each floor.

The eat-in kitchen with slate floor is an epicure's delight, with a commercial gas cooktop, a Subzero refrigerator, a warming drawer, pantry and two wine refrigerators (one for white, one for red). The Downsview cabinetry is custom made of Alderwood.

There is an enclosed library with a spiral staircase that leads to an upstairs sitting room for conversation or relaxing contemplation.

Downstairs, a huge formal dining room includes hidden floor-to-ceiling cabinetry for silver and linen storage.

Striking a holiday note

Concerts, performances set the scene for the season

Palm Beach ArtsPaper staff

One minute it's Thanksgiving, and the next, you're stocking up on champagne to welcome the new year.

The holidays go by in an instant, but we all try to steal a little time for the ceremony of the season, for its sounds, sights, aromas and traditions. Finding that time is difficult, especially with the growth in the past few years of South Florida's arts season — which has become more compact but much more crowded.

In the spirit of preparing a to-do list for that hard-to-schedule task, we offer this holiday music-and-dance calendar to show you just how much is out there, and what you might want to see. You'll notice that on some weekends, there are multiple things that are well worth your time.

You'll also notice that this is the time of year that two holiday presentations that have become de rigueur in English-speaking countries are represented here several times: George Frideric Handel's oratorio Messiah, and Pyotr Ilyich Tchaikovsky's ballet The Nutcracker. Handel's oratorio premiered

It takes the community to conserve our natural resources

With the help of donors like Thomas Ladue McGinty and the Community Foundation, our community is building a healthy environment.

Tom worked his entire lifetime to collect and label shells and fossils from around Florida waters. When he died in 1986, a portion of the Ocean Ridge resident's estate established a field of interest fund at the Foundation to support environmental needs in Palm Beach County. Tom's fund has awarded more than $210,000 in grants over the last 25 years - giving away over two times its original value and demonstrating the power of endowment.

Spirit of Giving Network offers Boca Raton Bowl tickets to local veterans

By Amy Woods

The Boca Raton Bowl enters its second year at Florida Atlantic University Stadium on Dec. 22 and so does the Spirit of Giving Network as the college-football event's official charity partner.

ESPN tapped the nonprofit that supports needy children and families in Palm Beach County based on the organization's strong mission statement and feel-good vibe.

"I was impressed with them from day one," said Doug Mosley, the bowl game's executive director. "We like what they do."

This year, ESPN, which owns and operates the Boca Raton Bowl, will find more to like about the Spirit of Giving Network when the media outlet makes its repeat gift of 5,000 tickets. The board of directors has extended an invitation to the matchup between the American Athletic Conference and Mid-American Conference to local veterans — in addition to underprivileged youths and adults.

President Ann Rutherford pushed the idea.

What: Boca Raton Bowl

When: 7 p.m. Dec. 22

Where: Florida Atlantic University Stadium, 777 Glades Road, Boca Raton

Information: Call 800-515-2171 or visit espevents.com/boca-raton-bowl

"It's dear to me," Rutherford said. "My son was a Navy SEAL and served in Afghanistan after 9/11. When that happens to you, your life is changed forever."

David, 43, made it home safely and now gives motivational speeches around the country.

Other veterans aren't so lucky.

"We would like to add some services for them, and I've been reaching out to different people I've met," Rutherford said. "Eventually, that will be part of our goal, to bring them and their families under our fold."

For the inaugural bowl game, the Spirit of Giving Network distributed 5,000 tickets and aims to increase that number to 7,500 with the addition of the veterans. The tickets include access to a tented area with free food, drinks and tailgating activities.

"We felt this was a nice way to start with the veterans — to get to know them by bringing them to this game," Rutherford said. Sponsorships are needed for transportation to and from the stadium, as well as underwriting the cost of the food, drinks and entertainment.

"This is a huge task,"

Rutherford said. "We're just taking baby steps at this point."

Veterans or veterans groups interested in attending the Boca Raton Bowl can call Wendy Friswell, executive director of the Spirit of Giving Network, at 385-0144. ★

CARING FOR OUR COMMUNITY

Raymond J. Leveilee, M.D., who specializes in the treatment of prostate, kidney and renal cell cancers as well as kidney stones, is the Director of the new Bethesda Center for Advanced Robotics and Urologic Care. Before joining the team at Bethesda Health, he was a tenured professor of urology, radiology and biomedical engineering at the University of Miami and served as Chief of the Division of Endourology and Laparoscopy at the University's health system.

"The way the community supports Bethesda Health inspired me to move my practice to Palm Beach County. The generosity of those who contribute to the Bethesda Hospital Foundation made it possible to equip the new Bethesda Center for Advanced Robotics and Urologic Care. I am honored to lead this Center with state-of-the-art equipment, including the first Xi da Vinci™ Surgical System in south Palm Beach County. Having the latest tools at my disposal and having the kind of meaningful support that philanthropists in this community provide mean that my surgical patients will suffer less pain, recover faster, have minimal scarring and a reduced risk of infection. I've been performing minimally invasive surgery for urologic disease for more than 25 years. I'm excited to be part of Bethesda's team and grateful to the Foundation and its donors for allowing me to bring these specialized treatment options to Palm Beach County."

Around Town

FAU president boasts 'unbridled ambition' for university

The FAU Owls may have been plucked by Hurricanes and Gators, but football does not — despite what some misguided folks in this nation believe — make a great university or make a university great. FAU President

Kelly

John Kelly knows how it feels for a football team to win: Before FAU he was a vice president at Clemson University, which boasts one of the nation's best football teams. But he also knows that institutions ultimately are measured by academics and research, and his State of the University address Nov. 20 set some bold goals.

He used a little streaming and beaming to make his case that FAU should be one of the best educational institutions in the nation.

Examples came from New York via a video conversation with alumnus Jeremy Murphy, a vice president for communications at CBS, and a live in-person performance from Emil Liakhovetski, 18, a junior pre-med student, and his brother Dariel. As Emil & Dariel Rock Cellos they were finalists on America's Got Talent. Also present was 1988 grad Marc Kudisch. He stars as the Senate majority leader on House of Cards. Grad students Charles Weinthal and Chad Coursey discussed the prosthetic hand they built with a 3-D printer.

Kelly acknowledged that FAU had many problems when he arrived and it still needs considerable work to meet not only board of regents' standards but also those that he has set. Though he's been president for less than two years, the graduation rate already has risen from 40 percent to 45 percent. The current freshman class of 3,500 is the school's largest ever, but admission will become tougher with minimum admission standards rising to a grade point average of 3.6 (from 3.3).

"My plan for Florida Atlantic University is to proceed and lead with unbridled ambition," he said.

Snyder

October the Delray Beach Chamber of Commerce honored Virginia Snyder with its 2015 Lifetime Achievement Award. More recently, FAU's Alumni Association inducted the "private eye" into the inaugural class of its Majestic Owls Society that will recognize top graduates from classes 50 years earlier.

In 1965, FAU was so undeveloped that it had no building capable of accommodating a commencement. So the 30 graduates received degrees at First Presbyterian Church of Boca Raton. Snyder majored in government and politics. She spent 10 years as a newspaper reporter and then opened a private investigation agency. For 32 years she worked tenaciously, tackling 100 homicide cases, helping to free six men from death row and, using DNA evidence, secure freedom for a convicted rapist after 26 years.

Snyder also was a thorn in the side of the Delray Beach Police Department and inspired the hit TV show Murder, She Wrote. As a community activist, she founded Boca Raton's South County Neighborhood Center, later renamed the Mae Volen Senior Center, which spawned the Florence Fuller Day Care Center. She helped George Morikami, a resident of Boca Raton, obtain his U.S. citizenship and then was instrumental in convincing the county commission to reverse itself and accept the farm worker's donation of land that became Morikami Park.

In 1975, Gov. Reubin Askew named her an Outstanding Woman of Florida and two decades later Gov. Lawton Chiles proclaimed her one of "Florida's Finest."

Now 94, she retired in 2008. If she was working against you, watch out. If she was on your side, you couldn't ask for a better ally.

In its four decades, the Palm Beach Sports Hall of Fame has recognized dozens of remarkable figures who have played, coached, contributed to and covered sports in Palm Beach County — from football (Boca Raton's Mark Richt and Boynton Beach's Howard Schnellenberger) and baseball (Lake Worth's Herb Score) to golf (Delray Beach's Beth Daniel) and tennis (Boca's Chris Evert), even hydroplane racer Andy Coker and polo legend Memo Gracida.

Two sports, however, despite their growing popularity locally and internationally, have never been represented. That will change next spring when the first hockey and soccer legends are inducted. The ice man is Noah Babin of Palm Beach Gardens, the first native Floridian to sign a professional contract. He now coaches in California.

As cool as ice on the field, Boca's Kristy Whelchel Hartofilis grew up in a soccer family with two older brothers who also were standout players. She first distinguished herself while leading Team Boca youth squads to state and national prominence in the mid-90s, then earning All-America recognition at Duke University. After playing in the inaugural women's professional league WUSA, she returned to Boca, first to coach at Spanish River High and then join her brother Jay in the real estate business.

Hartofilis is another example of the great sport opportunities that exist in Palm Beach County.

Wold

54th annual gala is set for Jan. 23 at the Boca Raton Resort & Club. The gala will honor Elaine J. Wold and raise money for the new Gloria Drummond Physical Rehabilitation Institute. Tickets range from $400 to $100,000 for a Hope Diamond sponsorship.

"The Event" at B'nai Torah Congregation in Boca Raton is still three months away, but seats should go quickly because the guest speaker is Henry Winkler, best known as the Fonz. The benefit for the Jewish Federation of South Palm Beach County aims to "Celebrate All the Good in Our Community." (jewishboca.org/theevent or 852-5031)

We usually stick to what's happening between Lake Worth and Boca Raton, but when Clay Conley and his gang to the north try something, it's usually worth a mention. First came Buccan in Palm Beach nearly five years ago, then Imoto and The Sandwich Shop. Now they're heading across the bridge to liven up South Dixie in West Palm with an Italian place, Grato. That's Italian for grateful, which Conley is . . . for the culinary opportunities he's been given and for what he hopes his customers will be after they dine at "the kind of place I would bring my family and friends — a true neighborhood restaurant."

Indeed, the building, at 1901 S. Dixie, has been in the neighborhood for nearly a century, most recently as Reward Lighting. Conley hopes to be serving a few days before Christmas.

Back across the bridge, it's nearly a century for Testa's. The oldest family-owned and continuously operated restaurant in Palm Beach County, and the third oldest of that sort in Florida, turns 95 next year. So why not start celebrating now?

"We wanted to make it fun," says Judy Testa, one of three third-generation siblings who now run the restaurant. In addition to Eggplant Testa, Uncle Joe's Chicken Cacciatore and Testa's Stone Crab Claw, the family is offering a special "Paradise in Pink" cocktail — coconut rum, amaretto and fresh fruit juices garnished with fruit and topped with a drink umbrella. For a chaser, try that newcomer dish, Testa's strawberry pie. It's only been on the menu for 70 years.

The Miami Dolphins may not have the greatest record — certainly no 17-0 this year — but at least the fans now can drown their sorrow in something better than Bud or Miller Lite. Renovated Sun Life Stadium now sports two taprooms that serve craft beers, 31 from Florida including four with Palm Beach County connections: Due South's Caramel Cream Ale (Boynton Beach), Saltwater's Screamin' Reels IPA (great name for a beer, especially in Florida) from Delray Beach. Also represented are Tequesta Brewing Co. and Funky Buddha, started in Boca Raton and now also in Oakland Park.

Back in Boynton Beach, Matt Cox has Copperpoint up and foaming with seven brews on tap such as Summer Session IPA, B.Rabbit Espresso Cream Stout and Trula Saison.

After taking second a few months back at Bud and Burgers in St. Louis, he continued his run on the competitive chef circuit by winning the Southeast Semi-final for Chevron's Game Day Chef Challenge in Atlanta with Steak Balls of Fire with Chipotle Cheese Dip. The finals will be held Jan. 1 in Pasadena before the Rose Bowl game.

After outdoing several teams of professional chefs to take a top 10 finish in the pasta division at the World Food Championships in Kissimmee on Nov. 10, he was asked to be a last-minute substitute in the event's Kansas City Steak Co. Danielle Rosse is breathing a little easier and South County residents will be breathing in dramatic new aromas now that Oceans 234 is back in business. A dramatic three-month, $1.8 million renovation is complete with the popular Deerfield Beach-front restaurant offering a new entrance, new ocean views, new décor, a 400-bottle wine wall and a menu from Chef Victor Franco that is 75 percent new but retains longtime favorites.

Also new is a paver walkway that leads from the entrance to the boardwalk. Rosse's 234 One Step program aims to raise $50,000 from the sale of personalized pavers (4x8, 8x8 or 16x16 from $199 to $800) for Deerfield Beach Chamber of Commerce's community projects, the Boys & Girls Clubs of Broward County and Broward Health KIDS

Where will Donald Trump be on Dec. 5? His campaign office doesn't know. Managers at his Mar-a-Lago Club don't know. Lois Pope doesn't know.

But Pope, who will host the Lady in Red Gala at Mar-a-Lago on Dec. 5, hopes the flamboyant mogul-turned-politician shows. After all, her Leaders in Furthering Education (LIFE) charity is raising money for veterans.

"I don't know if he'll be there or not," Pope said, "but it was our gala that first exposed him to disabled veterans."

each ticket buyer will be entered in a drawing for a Mini Cooper convertible featuring the unmistakable touch of world-renowned artist Romero Britto.

"We want to take care of people, and it takes a team," Pope said, but she promised the gala would have its lighter moments. If Mandel doesn't have something to say about Trump, Pope is prepared: "I have a few jokes to tell about him."

Despite a messy weekend before Thanksgiving, the 2015 Chris Evert/Raymond James Pro-Celebrity Tennis Classic offered entertaining tennis and the Saturday night gala at the Boca Raton Resort & Club. The event raised $600,000 for drug abuse treatment programs funded through Ounce of Prevention Fund of Florida and the Drug Abuse Foundation of Palm Beach County. A healthy portion of the proceeds came from bidders at the gala's silent and live auctions.

Two VIP tickets to a speech plus a photo with former President Bill Clinton went for $11,000 and a Wimbledon package — four nights accommodations and tickets to the semis and finals — took in $9,000.

Among those taking to the court with Evert were such tennis legends as Martina Navratilova and Pam Shriver and entertainers Jason Biggs, Dennis Miller, Gavin Rossdale, Chelsea Handler and Jon Lovitz. Gala entertainment was provided by The Fifth Dimension. In its 26 years, the event has raised more than $22 million for South Florida charities.

Well done, Chris.

make an exception for this riff on the classic French steak frites, beautifully prepared each visit.

The 10-ounce strip steak is grilled over a wood fire. As for that beef, it was tender and redolent with maitre d' butter — that mix of butter, garlic, lemon, herbs and other goodies that bring out the flavor of the beef.

A GIFT FROM HEAVEN.....

ART WAS PRIMARILY a means to explore the connection between human-kind and the higher universe. Through the universal language of music and dance, Shen Yun weaves a wondrous tapestry of heavenly realms, ancient legends and modern heroic tales, taking you on a journey through 5,000 years of authentic Chinese culture. There was a time when the world was full of magic and splendor, and all on Earth existed in harmony with Heaven. You could see it in the arts, feel it in the air, and hear it in the beat of a drum. This was a land of heroes and sages, dragons and phoenixes, emperors and immortals.

Known today as China, this place was once called “the Land of the Divine.” What if you could journey back and visit this lost paradise? Shen Yun brings the profound spirit of this lost civilization to life on stage with unrivaled artistic mastery. Every dance movement, every musical note, makes this a stunning visual and emotional experience you won’t find anywhere else. Banned in communist China today, the non-profit Shen Yun is dedicated to reviving 5,000 years of civilization. A Shen Yun performance features 100 world class performers, over 400 sets of exquisite hand-made costumes, a unique orchestra blending East and West, and dazzling animated backdrops – creating a spectacular performance beyond your imagination. Experience the Arts connecting Heaven & Earth! Experience Shen Yun!

SHEN YUN SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA: THE PERFECT BLEND OF EAST AND WEST

There’s never been an orchestra quite like this before. Shen Yun Symphony Orchestra’s original compositions bring together the best of classical Eastern and Western music in perfect harmony. Combining these two very different musical traditions is not easy, but the artists of Shen Yun bring something special to the task.

Distinct Classical Traditions
Traditional Chinese music emphasizes the expression of inner feelings. The ancients used musical instruments to convey their states of mind. When playing a melody, each individual note can be expressed in many different ways. Chinese music also emphasizes the rhythm and the feeling of the transitions between notes—it’s up to the musician to bring out this distinct feeling. Classical Western music, meanwhile, emphasizes the effect of the ensemble. To achieve this, arrangement and harmony are of utmost importance. Shen Yun combines these two approaches to capture the essence of both East and West.

Art

Japanese-American experience on display at Morikami

By Gretel Sarmiento
ArtsPaper Art Writer

We are often moved by art, but what is art moved by? Tragedy. Joy. Death. Life.

Two dramatic exhibitions now on view at the Morikami Museum feature artworks born out of ashes and out of the necessity to cope with loss.

Running through Jan. 31, Wendy Maruyama: Executive Order 9066 revives a particularly sad time to mark the 70th anniversary of the closing of the last Japanese internment camp. Jimmy Tsutomu Mirikitani is meant as an exploration of an artist's life through his work because it deserves to be known. Both are armed with truth and heart.

The 1942 campaign that dragged thousands of people of Japanese ancestry — even American citizens — out of their homes into internment camps is the core of Executive Order 9066. Maruyama doesn't just touch upon this chapter; she drags it from the pages of the history books and plants it right in front of us in the form of name tags and suitcases used during the move.

Included in this exhibit are wall-mounted cabinets and objects made and owned by the internees. One example is the bird pins said to have been gifted to internee Yone Yoshioka from a fellow internee at Poston, Ariz. Each pin is attached to a twig using metal wire. An odd display consisting of a large black square features an opening from which a short Popeye film can be watched. The film is titled You Are a Sap, Mr. Jap.

But the most commanding section is the 10 gigantic paper lamps suspended from the ceiling representing the 10 internment camps in the United States. Each consists of identification tags — sporting names and numbers, 120,000 all told — that were recreated by this third-generation Japanese-American artist. The names of all 10 camps are reflected on the floor, below each lamp. Maruyama called this The Tag Project. Its massive volume makes the event an undeniable fact and seems to restate it: Yes, this happened.

Among these camps, one based in California — Tule Lake — was home to the Japanese-American artist being explored in the second exhibit. Named after its protagonist, Jimmy Tsutomu Mirikitani features less

Colorful child-like drawings take on big serious subjects such as the atomic bomb and the Sept. 11 attacks. The compositions are similar, with the vivid colors making up for the simplicity in execution. Oversize structures appear overwhelmed by bright orange flames and black smoke clouds. Ant-size figures are shown trapped at the bottom

A mass-market cultural phenomenon is set to take place Dec. 18, with the release of the highly anticipated new Star Wars film The Force Awakens, the first in a new trilogy of the durable space operas, now directed by J.J. Abrams.

While newcomers such as John Boyega and Daisy Ridley are onboard, many of the original characters and actors are reprising their roles, including Mark Hamill as Luke Skywalker, Carrie Fisher as Princess Leia and Harrison Ford as Han Solo.

"The Star Wars films defined childhood for a generation of adults and has an ongoing appeal to upcoming generations," says Gerald Sim, associate of the frame. There are also slight differences suggesting the thought put into them. For instance, unlike those depicted in Hiroshima Peace Memorial, the figures trapped in the chaos of World Trade Center 1 are drawn lying down; very few appear standing.

The 29 artworks on view, created between 1999 and 2006, represent a small selection of the artist's work, considering Mirikitani lived to the age of 92. But they constitute a powerful introduction to a man with a life story like no other. Mirikitani lost relatives and friends to internment camps and Hiroshima's atomic bombing only to end up homeless in the streets of New York City selling art, before being reunited with a sister he had not seen in 60 years.

A series of landscape drawings reflect his feelings toward Tule Lake, the place of his incarceration following the attack on Pearl Harbor. The choice of soft peachy colors and minimal lines are the opposite of what we would expect. Nothing suggests hatred or hard feelings. There are no traces of anger or violence here. It is a surprisingly soothing response to the cruel event that separated him from his sister, Kazuko.

The painful memories are there though, in the two smallest pieces depicting a gravesite and a cross at the hilltop. Both reference the journey that relatives and former internees made to the camp site every two years. The gravestones have been marked red and a preserved flower appears pressed against the glass frame.

To survive in the streets, Mirikitani sold playful drawings depicting cats, flowers and fruits. They reflect undying optimism and an unexpected innocence. His felines have a distinctive long dark tail and almond-shaped eyes and it would be fair to assume it is the same cat, posing with different fish, in all the frames. Even the most cheerful drawing, Cat Taking Sun Bath in Autumn, cannot escape the artist's dramatic background. Despite the warmth of this lush, idealistic tropical scene, a question persists: How did he get past the pain? How did he manage to create anything resembling happiness?

The answer is the point both of these ongoing exhibitions aim to make.

Art Basel, art fairs light up Miami

By Sandra Schulman
ArtsPaper Art Writer

Art fair week has descended on Miami from every corner. The sheer quality and quantity of shows, promotions, screenings, talks, public art and fairs on the billion-dollar sandbar is unparalleled in America and perhaps the world. Add in Miami's own tropical weirdness and heavily multicultural audience for another dose of sensory art overload.

The main big-top event is Art Basel at the Miami Beach Convention Center, with 267 leading galleries from North America, Latin America, Europe, Asia and Africa showing significant work from the masters of modern and contemporary art, as well as a new generation of emerging stars. The fair is notoriously difficult for exhibitors to get into — not to mention expensive — but several South Florida galleries make it in regularly, including Frederic Snitzer and Gavlak.

Paintings, sculptures, installations, photographs, films, and editioned works of the highest quality are on display in the main exhibition hall — you can find Picasso next to Jeff Koons and Georgia O'Keeffe next to Cindy Sherman. Works that sell in the millions are in every aisle, making for a remarkable glut of museum-worthy art sold in essentially high-class pop-up booths. Celebrities cruise the aisles with their art advisers, picking the ripest fruit.

While the fair — which last year attracted 73,000 visitors — is the main attraction, my favorite events are the ones outside that take advantage of the unique beachfront location and its lush outdoor landscapes.

Then there are the side sectors, a series of booths that show more focused work: Survey has 14 booths showing "historically informed" works; Nova, where you'll find 34 younger galleries showing new works; and 16 Positions galleries focusing on emerging artists.

Public is always a must-see as 26 artists create site-specific installations and performances all week in Collins Park in front of The Bass Museum at 21st Street and Collins Avenue. The Theme Is Metaforms, Nicholas Baume's curatorial premise, considers how art is, at its core, a process of transformation; highlights this year include a gemstone-encrusted Healing Pavilion by Sam Falls; a group of tall chairs from the original production of Robert Wilson's Einstein on the Beach; a giant set of luscious red lips by Sterling Ruby; and a monumental deer lawn ornament by Tony Tasset.

The film program is another winner as movies screen on the giant projection wall outside of the New World Center (500 17th St., South Beach). "Our Hidden Futures" is the overall theme for this year's film program. More than 50 films and videos will also be screened at The Colony Theater (1040 Lincoln Road, Miami Beach).

And the world outside the main fair continues to orbit, as there are now 18-and-counting satellite fairs. Miami Project and Art on Paper move into the Deauville Beach Resort (6701 Collins Ave., Miami Beach); meanwhile the 13th edition of NADA heads down the street to the Fontainebleau (4441 Collins Ave., Miami Beach). Pulse Miami Beach hones in on Indian Beach Park (4601 Collins Ave., Miami Beach).

Art Basel continues from noon to 8 p.m. Dec. 4 and 5; noon to 6 p.m. Dec. 6. One-day tickets are $47; an all-day pass is $100. Tickets can be had at the venue or online at artbasel.com/miamibeach/buy-tickets.

professor of film studies at Florida Atlantic University and a Star Wars fan.

“The amount of YouTube views for a 30-second trailer shows how highly anticipated the new film is,” he says. As of mid-November, the official trailer had some 62 million views to its credit.

A film series about adventure, good guys vs. bad guys, moral dilemmas, father-and-son relationships and the struggle for power — all told in a way that touches people’s hearts — the films left an enduring legacy on Hollywood, leaving their mark on such films as Raiders of the Lost Ark, The Matrix and The Lord of the Rings.

The Star Wars franchise began in 1977 with the first film, simply titled Star Wars, (and later subtitled Episode IV: A New Hope). Its combination of storytelling and groundbreaking special effects marked the beginning of a three-decade love affair for creator George Lucas and his fantasy-filled films.

Chapters 5 and 6, The Empire Strikes Back and Return of the Jedi, were released in 1980 and 1983, respectively.

A second trilogy recounting chapters 1-3 of the mythology came out between 1999 and 2005. The Phantom Menace, Attack of the Clones, and Revenge of the Sith received mixed reviews and disappointed many fans.

“The intensity of reactions, including intense hatred, to the second trilogy speaks to the importance of the film on a whole generation of people,” Sim notes.

Despite the controversy, all six films were nominated for or won Academy Awards, and all were box-office hits, earning in excess of $4.38 billion.

One can look at the impact of the Star Wars franchise on popular culture through a number of different lenses: cultural, economic, psychological, historical and religious. Few films have added so much to the cultural vocabulary — from death stars to Jedi knights, light sabers to Yoda — and it as much a marketing phenomenon as it is an intergalactic adventure series.

Star Wars: The Force Awakens reportedly cost $400 million to make, and pre-sale tickets broke IMAX records with more than $6.5 million sold for U.S. screenings in the first day. Opening weekend is projected to bring in more than $215 million with a total domestic gross of $762 million, according to expectations by website BoxOffice.com, as well as a global take of $2 billion to $3 billion.

“With all the millions spent on merchandising and toys, it shows people are invested in the series and can generate billions in merchandising deals even before the first ticket is sold,” Sim says.

Shelly Isaacs, a film buff and expert on popular culture who runs an international film series called Café Cinematheque, agrees with Sim about the economic impact of the Star Wars films.

“Star Wars is part of our lifestyle and permeates our culture,” says Isaacs.

Disney, which bought Lucasfilm in 2012, has plans to open a Star Wars theme park in Florida and California. “It’s a money machine for Disney,” says Isaacs, who also sees the franchise expanding to markets in China and India.

“I remember the excitement of going to see the first Star Wars movie,” says Sim, 43, who was in elementary school in 1977. “At the time, Lucas used innovative technology to create special effects and establish a set of expectations of what film special effects should be. With each new film, we re-live that initial thrill.”

Lucas’s company, Industrial Light & Magic, a division of Lucasfilm, which he founded in 1975, became the industry standard for computer graphics and special effects.

The first Star Wars film launched the careers of Hamill, Ford and Fisher, and raised the profile of its composer, John Williams, who has scored the new film as well as the previous six. Few pieces of music are as familiar to audiences as the fanfare-like opening title of the film, or the menacing march associated with Darth Vader.

Sim notes that Princess Leia was a role model for young girls. Rachel Galvin, writer and producer of the online film magazine Independent Streak,

One critic/fan recalls the beginning

By Hap Erstein

The time was May 1977 and the place was the front row of Washington, D.C.’s movie palace, the Uptown, which had the city-wide exclusive rights to show an untouted intergalactic swashbuckler by George Lucas, that guy who made the nostalgic teen epic American Graffiti just four years earlier. Called Star Wars, it was set in a galaxy far, far away and had the ability to transport moviegoers back to the days of Buck Rogers, Flash Gordon and other Saturday morning serials.

Thirty-eight years ago is eons when it comes to special effects, but the visuals of Star Wars have a timeless quality. Retro from the start, they were never intended to awe, though they gave birth to one of the movie world’s great effects mills — Industrial Light & Magic. Instead, Lucas put the emphasis on storytelling, concocting a mythic tale of an orphan named Luke Skywalker thrust into an intergalactic battle between a rebel army and the Empire, with borrowed bits from Westerns, war pictures and adventure tales.

Lucas was never much good at directing actors — for evidence, see Episode I, The Phantom Menace — but in the original films, he had the good sense to cast such classically trained performers as Alec Guinness and James Earl Jones, who knew how to make even the silliest dialogue sound good.

Nothing, it seems, can diminish the affection fans have for the original trilogy of Star Wars films, though episodes I-III seemed to try. And as for the imminent follow-up movies, we can only cross our fingers and harbor a new hope.

remembers dressing up as Princess Leia.

“I identified with her,” said Galvin. “She is less seen as a quintessential sexpot and more as a warrior, kicking butt and taking names, and standing up for herself.”

Galvin also notes that Lucas was a pioneer in using action as a driving force in a story. “The very way in which the tale was told seemed unique and epic in scale, with high-tech dog fights in space changing the way sci-fi was viewed and paving the way for more films in the future.”

Lucas’ reliance on Jungian archetypes and his interest in the work of anthropologist Joseph Campbell led him in Star Wars to reference Greek and Nordic mythology and synthesize a number of genres, including science fiction, Westerns, soap operas, fantasy and Japanese samurai films.

“Lucas, as part of the New Hollywood, along with Francis Ford Coppola and Steven Spielberg, studied film and grew up watching old Hollywood movies. He has a vast knowledge and vocabulary of old films, and some scenes in his film are a recreation of scenes from earlier films, such as John Ford’s 1956 film, The Searchers,” says Sim, referencing scenes in Star Wars that take place on the desert planet Tatooine.

The first film, coming out in a decade emerging from a long and exhausting war in Vietnam and one in which the president of the United States, Richard Nixon, resigned in scandal, heralded the dawn of a new cinematic era.

“Star Wars brought us excitement and brought us back our heroes,” Isaacs says.

Local cinephile Dave Montalbano (aka “Cinema Dave”) believes that Star Wars would not be the success that is today if the sequel, The Empire Strikes Back, had not been as good as it was.

“The first sequel reached for something deeper with the introduction of Yoda and his philosophies about The Force,” Montalbano says.

As the characters in the new Star Wars film break barriers and explore new galaxies, the legacy of the franchise looks certain to last for years to come.

‘Sex With Strangers’ gets an extended run

Fresh off a successful run at the Arts Garage in Delray Beach, Laura Eason’s play, Sex with Strangers, starring Michael Uribe and Jacqueline Laggy, moves up the road this month to The Palm Beaches Theatre in Manalapan, the new home of the Palm Beach International Film Festival.

The show, directed by Genie Croft, will run Dec. 4, through Dec. 20, with shows at 8 p.m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday and 2 p.m. Sunday.

“The response to Sex with Strangers has been tremendous,” said Keith Garsson, producing director at Arts Garage.

The plot centers around online dating. When Olivia, a 40-something writer in Chicago, encounters the younger sex-blogger Ethan, questions about his past take their relationship through a series of comic and surprising revelations.

Alyone Ushe, president and CEO of Creative City Collaborative, which operates Arts Garage in Delray Beach and The Amp in Pompano Beach, said they approached film festival Chairman Jeff Davis about bringing Sex With Strangers to his theater.

“Extending the run of Sex with Strangers in Manalapan makes perfect sense,” Ushe said. “It provides audiences with additional opportunities to see this deliciously funny play and allows Arts Garage and the Palm Beach International Film Festival to grow their dedicated fan base even further.” Tickets for the play are $45. An opening night celebration will begin at 6 p.m. on Dec. 4; tickets are $75.

Maltz promotes Kato to its chief executive

The Maltz Jupiter Theatre’s board of directors has promoted Producing Artistic Director Andrew Kato to producing artistic director and chief executive.

Celebrating his 10th anniversary with the theater, Kato has signed a contract for 10 more years.

“We’re so proud of the many accomplishments of the Maltz Jupiter Theatre over the past decade, and much of the theater’s success is due to a great staff, led by Andrew Kato,” said Milton Maltz, founder and chairman emeritus of the board.

Under Kato’s leadership, the theater has produced more than 60 productions and annual subscriptions have grown to more than 7,626 (much higher than comparable regional theaters across the country). Attendance has doubled, growing from 50,000 to more than 100,000 annual patrons.

During his tenure, the Maltz Jupiter Theatre has continuously earned annual Carbonell Awards, South Florida’s highest honor of artistic excellence. The theater has achieved a fully funded $10 million endowment, completed a $2.5 million expansion and renovation in 2013, and opened its Paul and Sandra Goldner Conservatory of Performing Arts in 2007, now attended by over 600 students annually.

“The theater has achieved all of its goals and objectives by producing consistent-quality productions, so now we are looking to the future,” Kato said.

Organizers promising best-yet roster for 10th annual Festival of Arts Boca

By Steven J. Smith
ArtsPaper Art Writer

The 2016 Festival of the Arts Boca promises a compelling line-up of international superstars, thinkers, authors and performers, according to festival chairman and co-executive producer Charlie Siemon, who unveiled the season Friday at the Mizner Park Cultural Arts Center.

“The 10th Annual Festival of the Arts Boca will be our most celebrated and memorable yet,” Siemon told a gathering of several hundred supporters at the kickoff event. “We have much to be proud of throughout our decade of bringing the best and brightest in dance, classical music, performing arts and literature to Boca Raton.”

Violin superstar and conductor Joshua Bell will headline the festival, which runs March 4-16, splitting time between the Mizner Park Amphitheater at 590 Plaza Real and the Cultural Arts Center at 201 Plaza Real.

Bell will serve as both soloist and conductor in a performance of Vivaldi’s Four Seasons with the Lynn Philharmonia on March 16.

The festival will open with a showing of the 1981 film Raiders of the Lost Ark on March 4, presented with a live orchestra. The film, which introduced the character of Indiana Jones (portrayed by Harrison Ford), features a stirring score by Academy Award-winning composer John Williams and will be performed live to picture by the Henry Mancini Institute Orchestra, which is based at the University of Miami.

Other musical highlights will include jazz trumpet legend Herb Alpert and his wife, Grammy Award-winning singer Lani Hall (March 6); Cirque de la Symphonie (March 12); a night of symphonic jazz with the Joey Alexander Trio, the Symphonia and conductor Constantine Kitsopoulos (March 11); and a new family-friendly production in English of Mozart’s opera The Magic Flute (March 5).

Siemon attributed the festival’s decade of success primarily to the hard work put in to organize and present it to enthusiastic audiences.

“Also, we really have emphasized bringing in great artists,” he said. “We’ve had the best of the best, and that’s what brings people in — supporters, sponsors and attendees.”

In addition, the Festival of the Arts Boca will continue its “Authors and Ideas” program, featuring CNN host Fareed Zakaria, who will discuss “Global Hot Spots and Trends: The Next Security Crisis” (March 7).

Also contributing to the program will be author and professor Dr. Robert Sapolsky, who will present “The Biology of Good and Evil” (March 8).

Rounding out the program, author and Pulitzer Prize finalist Laila Lalami will discuss her novel The Moor’s Account (March 9) and Dr. Jay Winter, former history professor at Yale University, will explore World War I and its impact on the 21st century.

New this season is a free, official Festival of the Arts Boca app — a digital pocket guide featuring GPS directions, schedule of events, ticket purchasing, contests, links to social media channels, videos, sneak previews of upcoming performances and more. Users will be able to access up-to-the-minute schedule changes, emergency information and traffic updates. To download, visit the app store on your mobile device and search for Festival of the Arts Boca.

When asked what will make the festival’s upcoming season unique, Siemon just smiled.

“I think every one we’ve done has been unique,” he said. “Our speaking program is wonderful, our artists are fantastic and we’re really happy and excited about the movie, which has been digitally remastered. And the score from John Williams is just spectacular. We hope everyone will come on out. It’s going to be a great festival.”

Ticket prices range from $15 to $225. For more information, go to www.festivalboca.com or call 866-571-2787.

Opera company seeks funds for new drama

A new musical drama titled Not In My Town, written for the stage by Michael W. Ross and based on the events surrounding the death of Matthew Shepard, who was brutally murdered for his sexual orientation, is set to have its debut in March by South Florida start-up Opera Fusion. Shepard, a 21-year-old gay Wyoming college student, was beaten and tortured by two men and then tied to a fence near Laramie in October 1998.

Discovered after 18 hours, he died six days later in a Colorado hospital.

On Oct. 28, Opera Fusion kicked off a crowdfunding campaign on Indiegogo.com in the hopes of raising $150,000 to fund the production.

The show, which requires seven singing parts, two mute parts, a double chorus and a nine-piece orchestra, will be directed by Dean Peterson, artistic director of Opera Fusion.

In keeping with its mission, Opera Fusion plans to cast local singers in performances scheduled for Fort Lauderdale, West Palm Beach and Miami.

The musical drama addresses bullying, “a subject that’s in the news every day,” said Opera Fusion President Xavier Garcia.

“Our kids are bullied constantly and they are either killed, or they commit suicide or they are scarred for life,” says Garcia. “Matthew was killed because he was gay, but Matthew is anyone who has been affected by a hate crime.”

Composer and librettist Ross, who moved to Florida from New York in 2004, writes music reflecting social justice issues.

His other recent works include The Line that Divides, based on the anti-slavery movement and women’s suffrage activist Harriet Tubman, and Yours Truly, Anne, an opera about the life of Anne Frank.

“I wrote Not In My Town because I don’t think people know what happened after Matthew Shepard died,” Ross said.

“I want the audience to see that good can come from such a terrible tragedy,” he said.

The fundraising page can be found at igg.me/at/NotInMyTown/x/12537295.

Music

Hidden among horse farms in Wellington sits an impressive new music studio

By Bill Meredith
ArtsPaper Music Writer

Anyone who's looked for a recording studio with world-class equipment in Palm Beach County knows that they're hard to find. Until now.

Liberated Studios (liberatedstudio.com) opened in Wellington late this summer to fill that world-class equipment void.

Finding it, however, can still be a bit of a challenge.

That's partially by design. The 1,500-square-foot facility is isolated amid the green grass, trees and winding roads of prime Wellington equestrian real estate, and sits behind the home of husband-and-wife Ian Carey (a composer and keyboardist) and Shanti Ellis (a vocalist). Their third studio partner is Brad Holland.

The three designed and acoustically treated the former guest house, which now features two primary rooms, each with a legendary recording board — the Studio A main room with its Neve 96-channel V66; and the Studio B mixing and overdubbing room with a Logic SSL 8000G/B G Series Console.

"The Logic desk is actually the more widely used of the two," says Carey. "The Neve is two desks put together, since I bought an extra one in order to have spare parts."

"Both brands are very sought after, and just great equipment," he said.

Anyone who refers to such coveted mixing boards as "desks" must have put in some serious work behind them. Carey's client list includes award-winning service for recording labels like Warner Bros., EMI, Island, Universal, Atlantic, and Sony, and artists from Snoop Dogg and the Black-Eyed Peas' will.i.am to Katy Perry and Timbaland.

Part of the reason the studio's exact location isn't completely open to the public is, in fact, because such celebrities might be there.

"Most of my work has been remixing R&B, pop and hip-hop artists," Carey says, "and writing dance music and doing dance remixes for pop artists."

"But I've had a gold Top 10 record under my name in the U.K., a couple multi-platinum records, one of which hit No. 1 in Australia, and a Best Dance Video MTV Video Music Award in Australia in 2009. A lot of that success helped fund this place," he says.

The video award statuette is in the shape of the familiar MTV "Moonman" logo from the network's early days, and Carey's plaques for his gold and platinum records

Ian Carey and Shanti Ellis sit in the guest house they converted to a recording studio. Bill Meredith are also on display just outside Studio B. Liberated Studios' additional recording engineers are Dustin Breeden, a graduate of Full Sail University in Winter Park, and Chris Arrue, who studied at the SAE Institute in Miami. They work the boards amid an additional live tracking room, kitchenette and lounge.

There's also a pool and sauna.

And with cues from Abbey Road Studios in London, the studio specializes in mastering recording projects through Maselec gear using Bowers & Wilkins monitoring.

Online mixing and mastering options are also available.

"The key is the combination of the Maselec console and those monitors," says Carey. "That's behind the sound at Abbey Road, even if most people in the U.S. may not have even heard of those brands."

Carey grew up in Maryland, which is where he met Ellis, a Queens, N.Y., native. The couple named the studio after a famed retail music store where Carey was once a record buyer, Music Liberated in Baltimore.

"It was a legendary place," says Ellis. "John Waters, the film director, is from Baltimore, and he used it for the location scene in 'Hairspray' where the cast was dancing in a record store."

"My father was a live sound engineer while I grew up in Maryland," Carey says. "I got my start in the music biz at Music Liberated, then worked for a retail instrument chain called Mars Music before it folded. After that, I became more involved on the production and engineering side."

Still, the move to Florida was much more circuitous than a straight line south from Baltimore along Interstate 95.

"I got a lot of musical work in Europe," Carey says. "We moved to the Netherlands for a couple years, then to Spain for five or six, so we were basically overseas for all of the 2000s.

"It was a great scene in Europe, with much more of a middle class for musicians. There's a lot of support from the government there for education, and the arts in general," Carey said.

"When we decided to move back to the United States, we settled on either Los Angeles or in the vicinity of Miami."

"This seemed like a good hub," adds Ellis, "since we didn't necessarily want to actually live in Miami."

"I'm close enough this way, since I've gotten a lot of work there," says Carey. "But this location provides a quiet place to write and work."

The couple has an indie electronica recording group called Aubergine Machine, and also composes music and records demos for clients, often with Ellis providing the vocals.

"We know there isn't another studio in Palm Beach County with equipment this high-end," says Carey. "We wanted to provide that option in hopes that some people would be looking for that, although others have questioned why we bothered."

"We bothered because there are so many people in Palm Beach County," Ellis explains. "There are a million people here!"

And nearly that many reasons to consider the facility, which include an additional assortment of Blue Bottle microphones (along with those by Neumann, AKG, Avantone, Shure and Audio Technica), an array of analog and digital keyboards; Maselec, Logic, and Universal Audio compressors, and an Otari 1/4-inch analog tape mastering deck.

Despite its banner equipment, Liberated Studios' basic rates ($70-$100 per hour) are competitive with other popular South Florida facilities. For a quote, call 797-7548.

ArtsPaper Reviews

Hello, Dolly! (Wick Theatre, through Dec. 6)

Certain roles are simply owned by their originators, whose memorable performances cast a shadow over all those who dare attempt to fill their shoes. Like, say, Carol Channing in Hello, Dolly!

But at The Wick Theatre, as reverent as Lee Roy Reams is to the Jerry Herman-Michael Stewart musical and to those who walked down that red velvet staircase before him, he will have you saying, "Carol who?"

Without slighting the rest of the first-rate cast, the reason to see this Hello, Dolly! is the remarkable performance by Reams. In the title role.

Those who saw him last season as drag diva Zaza in La Cage aux Folles should not be surprised that he wears matchmaker Dolly Gallagher Levi's gown, headpiece and finery with larger-than-life self-assurance. But while his performance as Zaza made room for him to camp things up and insert part of his concert act, Reams plays Dolly entirely — pardon the expression — straight.

Reams knows every nook and nuance of this show, as he demonstrates in his staging at the Wick. And while his stellar performance is startling in its gender-bending originality, the rest of the show pays unwavering tribute to the

Master comic Lewis J. Stadlen is an ideal foil as curmudgeonly Horace Vandergelder, Dolly's designated prey. Soprano Susan Powell (George M) is back with a more comfortable assignment as milliner Irene Molloy, who will find romance with Cornelius (aptly bumbling James Clow).

Dustin Cross has put together crayon-bright costumes for the company and cleverly engineered dresses for Reams. Josieu Jean continues to be one of the theater's prime assets with his scenic projections, and the only liability is the continued use of recorded music. — Hap Erstein

Brooklyn (opened Nov. 25)

Adapted by Nick Hornby from Irish author Colm Tóibín's award-winning 2009 novel, and often suggesting a less-gentrified Jane Austen romance, Brooklyn follows Eilis Lacey (Saoirse Ronan) from her workaday drudgery in 1950s Ireland and across the inclement waters of the Atlantic, toward a more glamorous, if equally unsatisfying, employ in a Brooklyn department store. Tethering herself to the city's Irish community, she still manages to meet Tony (Emory Cohen), an Italian-American plumber with a penchant for fair-haired Irish lasses.

family brings her back home to Ireland. Torn between her native land and her adopted second life, Eilis is forced to make a decision that will dictate her future.

Director John Crowley's cast is unimpeachably period-perfect. Ronan's fragile radiance ensures that she's more than a coming-of-age composite. Cohen, likewise, is an astonishing discovery, a performer who disarms us in the affectless manner of a young Brando or De Niro.

But even formidable actors can't fully realize some of the central-casting supporting characters, including Julie Walters as the lovable curmudgeon who runs the boarding house, and child actor James DiGiacomo as Tony's little brother, who can always be counted on for a sitcommy bon mot.

Crowley's direction tames any wildness that might emerge from this old-fashioned story of self-determination.

Yet the timing of Brooklyn's release feels right. In a campaign season dictated more by fear and loathing than compassion, immigration has emerged as arguably the chief concern among policymakers and presidential aspirants. It's a pretty corny moment when Crowley visualizes a flood of heavenly light spilling from the big blue door separating Ellis Island's immigration station from the hope and promise of America: It's an all-too-literal golden door. But maybe we need a little reminding that this country was, and still can be, a beacon of hope. — Palm Beach ArtsPaper staff

Miami City Ballet (Kravis Center, Nov. 14)

A tepid launch of Miami City Ballet's 30th anniversary season suggests it might be time to rethink repertoire.

Of the three works, one was choreographed 64 years ago and the other 71 years ago. The third was a commissioned work created for the company just three years ago.

It was disappointing to see just a trickle of the excitement that MCB has reflected in earlier programs. It made me wonder about the continuous two-thirds balance in favor of history when the company clearly and undeniably shines in its newest works.

Swan Lake, choreographed by a young George Balanchine in 1951, opened the program. The iconic role of Odette was performed with determination by Tricia Albertson, and her Prince Siegfried was Reyneris Reyes, who performed his solo variation adequately. But the duo lacked chemistry.

Liam Scarlett's Viscera opened the second half of the program, packing a big (and welcome) bolt of wonderful, ebullient dancing. The Miami City Ballet dancers seemed so in their element performing this work, as they do performing all the new contemporary ballet additions to the repertoire.

Patricia Delgado sparkled in her role debut as the darting soloist that anchored the choreography amidst the unison duets beautifully executed by Shimon Ito and Renato Penteado. Veterans Jennifer Carlynn Kronenberg and Carlos Miguel Guerra calmed things down in their pas de deux with its slow and seamless partnering where the two became one in the movement.

Clearly a custom fit for MCB, as it highlighted the intrinsic artistic core of the company, Viscera also centered the program. It left us with a satisfied feeling but also wanting more of this kind of dancing from these spirited artists. — Tara Mitton Catao

Allan Holdsworth (Mizner Park, Nov. 21)

No one inside the black box theater at the Mizner Park Cultural Arts Center in Boca Raton — not the overflow crowd of 300 nor the three instrumentalists led by veteran British jazz/fusion guitar great Allan Holdsworth — could've possibly been fully prepared for what they'd experience.

Considering the reputation and incendiary talents of the 69-year-old Holdsworth, 63-year-old American bassist Jimmy Haslip and 57-year-old Australian drummer Virgil Donati, one could be forgiven for expecting a positive once-in-a-lifetime experience. In many ways, most having little to do with the band itself, this proved quite the opposite.

The trio strode onstage 20 minutes late and launched into Fred, a molten piece that Holdsworth had recorded for the 1975 album Believe It.

But something was amiss. The trio's sound was alternately muffled and muted, and all three musicians suffered from the imbalance. Donati's drums were the most audible, although some of his microphones were hotter than others; Haslip's bass was too prominent, and Holdsworth's left-hand legato soloing intricacies — a catalyst in his rise to prominence — were buried.

Thus, the obviously distracted guitarist's inimitable spark-to-simmer-to-boil middle solo never materialized as he fiddled with his settings and effects, clearly never satisfied. After the opening song, he stepped up to the microphone and angrily explained why.

"I have to apologize," Holdsworth said. "They put us in a room with no PA! We've been working on it, but it was their [expletive], not ours!"

The first half of the show, which ended up evenly split between Holdsworth's solo material and tunes he'd recorded with Williams, suffered as the musicians and sound technicians scrambled to improve things.

The second half, aided by Williams gems from Believe It, some sound tweaks, and the trio's adjustments to the PA-less atmosphere, improved significantly. Holdsworth's expert chording, volume swells and effects were prominent through the night, but on the funky Red Alert, he was finally able to cut loose with one of his best and most audible solos. The staggered feel of Proto Cosmos was another highlight, and Mr. Spock closed the hour-plus set via a funkier arrangement than the raucous original Williams recording.

Holdsworth, Haslip and Donati all professionally overcame and did their jobs, but the headliner clearly wasn't amused at facing such hurdles.

Having influenced most current electric guitarists worth mentioning, Holdsworth certainly deserved better. Considering the slowdowns in both his recording and touring schedules, and the troubling experience this time around — captured for broadcast, no less — the odds don't appear good that he'll ever return.

In fact, to borrow a term from his homeland, they're probably nil. — Bill Meredith

Drinking in America: Our Secret History, by Susan Cheever; Grand Central Publishing; 258 pp., $28

By Bill Williams
ArtsPaper Books Writer

American history books rarely mention alcoholism as a significant historical issue. From the Pilgrims at Plymouth Rock to the presidency of Richard Nixon and beyond, liquor has influenced American society and politics.

Susan Cheever has excellent credentials, having written extensively about her own battle with alcoholism and that of her father, the writer John Cheever.

One of the scariest chapters in this new book involves President Nixon's drunken episodes, which largely were kept secret from the public. Nixon did not imbibe every day, but a couple of drinks "would render him drunk, slurring, stumbling and rambling irrationally before he finally passed out." Aides worried that he might launch a nuclear war while drunk. Defense Secretary James Schlesinger was so concerned that he instructed the Joint Chiefs of Staff to ignore any military orders coming from the White House.

"Since the beginning," Cheever writes, "drinking and taverns have been as much a part of American life as churches and preachers, or elections and politics."

The Pilgrims regarded drinking and taverns as "gifts from God," but they also held that drunkenness came from the Devil. By the time of the Revolution, colonialists were drinking almost twice as much as the average person drinks today.

After George Washington left the presidency, he opened several distilleries on his Mount Vernon property. By the 1820s, Americans' drinking was out of control.

"Children drank before school, during school at recess, and after school," Cheever says. "Farmers had jugs stashed at the end of every row in their fields. Factories featured frequent drinking breaks" and slave owners supplied their slaves with liquor to keep them happy and obedient.

Throughout history liquor has divided Americans. In 1919, those who favored temperance pushed through Prohibition, a failed experiment that led to increased crime and open flouting of the law. Drinking has declined in recent decades, in part because of the influence of Alcoholics Anonymous and Mothers Against Drunk Driving. DUI accidents have been cut in half as a result of laws raising the legal drinking age and mandating stronger penalties for drunken driving convictions.

Founded in 1935 by Bill W. and Dr. Bob, AA has enabled millions of alcoholics to abstain. For many addicts, it is no longer shameful to admit that one has a drinking problem.

Cheever includes a chapter, "The Writer's Voice," about the link between writing and alcohol in the mid-20th century. Of seven U.S. writers who won the Nobel Prize, five were alcoholics — Sinclair Lewis, Eugene O'Neill, William Faulkner, Ernest Hemingway and John Steinbeck. Cheever rejects the notion that drinking promotes great writing. Although alcohol might produce a short-term boost in creativity, it "almost always turns on the writer — eating away talent, which leads to inferior and even embarrassing work."

The author speculates whether President John F. Kennedy's assassination might have been foiled if not for the dereliction of Secret Service agents, six of whom visited an illegal bar until 3 a.m., just hours before they were scheduled to guard the president on that fateful day in Dallas.

Like others who have written on the subject, Cheever stresses that alcoholism is a genetic trait like hair color and not a moral failure or a lack of willpower.

Despite recent trends, drunkenness has soared among college students and military personnel. One study showed that students who drink to get drunk increased from 10 percent to 34 percent in recent years.

Cheever crams a lot of information and factoids into the text. She quotes scores of other writers, which sometimes causes the book to read like a research paper, rather than an original text.

Drinking in America awkwardly blends memoir, history and brain science. Still, it offers a fascinating overview of an illness that has killed millions of addicts and influenced the course of U.S. history.

in April 1742 as an Easter piece, and has been a sellout hit since then, primarily in an abridged format that deals with the nativity of Jesus, or what choral directors call "the Christmas portion" of Messiah.

Two of the local ballet companies have already presented their Nutcracker performances, but there are others coming in December, including the George Balanchine version, courtesy of Miami City Ballet, at the end of the month.

In between are many vocal and instrumental programs featuring the music of the holidays, mostly Christmas, but with some songs of the season for Hanukkah (Dec. 6-14).

So clip this calendar, mark it up, or just leave it handy: But do take in at least one of these programs. It could be just the thing that puts the holiday spring back in your step.

Friday, Dec. 4

Alleluias, Magnificats and Carols: The Delray Beach Chorale, now under the direction of Florida Atlantic University's Patricia Fleitas, offers a holiday program featuring music by J.S. Bach, Halsey Stevens, and Handel, along with alleluias by Jewish composers. DeSantis Family Chapel at Palm Beach Atlantic University, 300 Okeechobee Blvd., West Palm Beach. 7:30 p.m. Tickets: $30 at door. 800-984-7282 or www.delraybeachchorale.org.

Saturday, Dec. 5

Alleluias, Magnificats and Carols: The Delray Beach Chorale program, this time at First Presbyterian Church, 33 Gleason St., Delray Beach. 3 p.m. Tickets: $25 in advance, $30 at door; 800-984-7282 or www.delraybeachchorale.org.

Winter Tapestry: The Young Singers of the Palm Beaches, 350 children from grades 2 to 12, perform a holiday program at the Kravis Center, 701 Okeechobee Blvd., West Palm Beach. 7 p.m. Tickets start at $15. 832-7469 or www.kravis.org.

Sunday, Dec. 6

Celebrate the Holidays ... With a Twist: The Robert Sharon Chorale presents the first of three holiday concerts with this performance of seasonal music by composers from Handel to Rollo Dilworth. 2 p.m., DeSantis Chapel, Palm Beach Atlantic University, 300 Okeechobee Blvd., West Palm Beach. Tickets: $15; visit rschorale.com/tickets.

Cocoa and Carols: The Master Chorale of South Florida, joined by the Girl Choir of South Florida, presents a concert of holiday music, followed by cocoa and cookies. 4 p.m., St. Mark's Greek Orthodox Church, 2100 NW 51 St., Boca Raton. Tickets: $30. 954-641-2653 or www.masterchoraleofsouthflorida.org.

Holiday Choral Prelude: The Nova Singers, a Broward County-based 125-person

Celtic Woman, a four-person Irish group created by the people behind Riverdance, performs Christmas music at the Kravis Center on Dec. 18. Photo provided community choir now in its 40th year, presents music by Z. Randall Stroope, Morten Lauridsen and familiar Christmas and Hanukkah selections. Director Chuck Stanley and the singers also will be accompanied by a brass and percussion ensemble. 4 p.m., St. Paul Lutheran Church, 701 W. Palmetto Park Road, Boca Raton. Tickets: $15 in advance, $20 at door, $5 for students.

Messiah: Florida Atlantic University's choral students, along with faculty members, under the direction of Patricia Fleitas, does its annual rendition of the Handel classic. 7 p.m., University Theatre, FAU, 777 Glades Road, Boca Raton. Tickets: $15; 800-564-9539 or www.fauevents.com.

Tuesday, Dec. 8

A Seraphic Fire Christmas: The First Noël: The Grammy-nominated Miami choral group Seraphic Fire presents its annual Christmas music program in its only Palm Beach County performance this season at St. Mark's Episcopal Church in Palm Beach Gardens. The group always stages this a cappella concert of music with candlelight and a canny use of the church acoustics. 7:30 p.m., 3395 Burns Road, Palm Beach Gardens. Tickets: $45. 305-285-9060 or www.seraphicfire.org.

Symphony of the Americas: James Brooks-Bruzzese leads his orchestra in its annual holiday program, which will include selections from The Nutcracker plus an audience sing-along of favorite carols. Tickets start at $62. 8:15 p.m., Amaturio Theater, Broward Center for the Performing Arts, 201 SW Fifth Ave., Fort Lauderdale. 954-335-7002 or www.sota.org.

Wednesday, Dec. 9

Live at Lynn Christmas: The 175-member Gay Men's Chorus of South Florida, led by Harold Dioquino, is accompanied by instrumentalists for its program of holiday music, and promises a special celebrity guest. 7:30 p.m., Wold Performing Arts Center, Lynn University, 3601 N. Military Trail, Boca Raton. Tickets: $35-$55. 237-9000 or www.lynn.edu/events.

Friday, Dec. 11

Messiah Sing-In: The Master Chorale of South Florida revives the older tradition of the singalong Messiah, in which audience members join in for the choruses. Bring your own score, or borrow one at the door. 8 p.m., First Presbyterian Church of Pompano Beach, 2331 NE 26th Ave. Tickets: $25. 954-641-2653 or www.masterchoraleofsouthflorida.org.

A Christmas Spectacular: The Orchid City Brass Band, a local British-style brass band, joins the Robert Sharon Chorale for a concert that will include the Hallelujah chorus and Christmas music from the Austrian Alps. 7:30 p.m., Duncan Theatre, Palm Beach State College, 4200 S. Congress Ave., Lake Worth. Tickets: $20, $10 for students. 247-4078 or www.orchidcitybrass.org.

Saturday, Dec. 12

Nutcracker with the Duke: Duke Ellington and Billy Strayhorn created a jazz rewrite of some of the pieces from Tchaikovsky's ballet score in 1960, and the Florida Wind Symphony Jazz Orchestra will play it along other holiday selections in a concert led by Kyle Prescott. 7 p.m., University Theatre, Florida Atlantic University, 777 Glades Road, Boca Raton. Tickets: $20; 800-564-9539 or fauevents.com.

The Nutcracker: The aspiring professionals of the Harid Conservatory present Act II from Tchaikovsky's ballet as well as other dances. 3 p.m., Countess de Hoernle Theater, Spanish River High School, 5100 Jog Road, Boca Raton. Tickets: $25-$30. 997-2677 or www.harid.edu.

Sunday, Dec. 13

FAU Madrigal Dinner:

Florida Atlantic University began its own version of this popular dinner-theater tradition five years ago. Students dress in Renaissance-era costumes and sing period music while guests enjoy a sumptuous meal (and can dress in period garb if they wish). The dinner is a benefit for the Choral and Vocal Studies Program at the university. Tickets are $100 or $1,000 for a table of 8. 5:30 p.m., Vintage Gymnasium at Old School Square, 51 N Swinton Ave., Delray Beach 297-2337 or fauf.fau.edu/madrigal.

Tuba Christmas: In 1974, the great tuba player Harvey Phillips brought a large ensemble of tubas to Rockefeller Center to play Christmas carols on the ice rink, and a quirky holiday tradition was born. Florida Atlantic University picked up this idea five years ago, and presents it for free; the concert will be led by Sean Murray. 5 p.m., Mizner Park Amphitheatre, 590 Plaza Real, Boca Raton.

Holiday With the Pops: The Indian River Pops Orchestra, led by Dwight Robert Roadman, is joined by the Robert Sharon Chorale for a concert of seasonal music dedicated to the memory of Owen Seward, longtime director of the Indian River Pops and the New Gardens Band, who died in August. Tickets: $25. 7 p.m., Eissey Campus Theatre, 11051 Campus Drive, Palm Beach Gardens. 207-5900 or www.palmbeachstate.edu.

Monday, Dec. 14

PERSONAL ASSISTANT SEEKS NEW ASSIGNMENT

I am Judy Yusem, formerly the owner with my husband, Hank, of Yusem Homes. Together we built parts of Boca West, Harbor Point and Broken Sound. My background is extensive and varied. It includes the intricacies of the construction business, complete planning and preparation for world travel (including wardrobe selection and efficient packing), social calendar organization and event arrangement as well as personal shopping.

My significant traits to offer you, as an Employer, are that I am highly organized, passionate, creative and focused. I am looking for my next important adventure.

I would most enjoy a position with a busy couple or an active female professional helping to keep things on schedule in south Florida or a second location as needed. Time for me can be easily maneuverable and flexible.

Resume, references and referrals available upon request.
