Tide of taxable property values continues to rise along the coast

By Mary Hladky

As the housing market collapse fades into memory, the taxable value of Palm Beach County properties has risen to within striking distance of the historic high set in 2007.

Estimates released by Property Appraiser Gary Nikolits' office on May 27 show that taxable values have increased for the fifth year in a row.

Countywide, the amount grew by 7.85 percent from 2015 to 2016, to $164.5 billion. That is just short of the record high of $169.5 billion, and well above the low point of $124.4 billion in 2010.

Delray Beach bested other cities and towns in south Palm Beach County, with taxable values rising 10.1 percent. Boynton Beach jumped 7.7 percent and Boca Raton rose by 6.7 percent.

The county and its 38 cities and towns could soon completely wipe out the losses of the recession, Nikolits said.

"It is probably within the next couple of years. We are practically there now," he said. "We will be back to where we would have been if we had not gone through all the upheaval."

Local governments will use Nikolits' estimates to calculate how much property tax money they can expect in the coming year and to set their annual budgets and 2016-17 tax rates.

Police step up efforts to keep dogs off beach

By Rich Pollack

Dog owners who fought to have a portion of Delray Beach's public beach set aside for their four-legged friends appear to have lost their months-long battle.

Now there may be even more bad news — especially for pooch owners who scoff at the law — as the city begins cracking down on those who violate its no-dogs-on-the-beach ordinance.

Delray Beach commissioners at a workshop meeting in May shot down a proposal that would have established a six-month pilot program crafted by city staff with input from local pet owners.

That plan would have set aside a small portion of Atlantic Dunes Park as a dog beach for a few morning hours and a few evening hours on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays.

During a lengthy discussion in which 16 dog owners spoke in favor of the proposal and 16 mostly beachside residents spoke against, commissioners were told that many owners are acting in violation of city ordinances and allowing their dogs to run free on the beach.

Part of the problem, according to See DOG BEACH on page 15

Howard's Market says it's an alternative to Publix at Plaza del Mar

By Dan Moffett

For 30 years, Barry Adkin has helped run Howard's Market, the family business on Southwest 18th Street in Boca Raton.

That means rising around

5 each morning, cooking up casseroles and deli foods, getting the books to add up through good economies and bad, opening up ASAP after hurricanes, managing 40 employees and making emergency deliveries to loyal customers when unexpected guests show up for dinner.

"We're a small-town market," Adkin says. "If you forget your money when you come to our store, just sign the bill. You can pay us the next time. We care about serving our community."

He was riding his bike through Manalapan about a year ago when the idea struck him: The town's Plaza del Mar would be an ideal location for another Howard's Market, a fitting extension of the eponymous enterprise his late father, Howard "Pops" Adkin Sr., founded in 1985.

Barry Adkin, 50, didn't know it at the time but he was about to pedal his way into a Howard and Goliath melodrama that was more biblical than any small businessman would ever want.

Middle school teacher shows students how to give back

By Lucy Lazarony

Boca Raton Community Middle School teacher Susan Oyer teaches her students to do much more than just crack the books.

For the past three years, her students have raised money to plant trees in Haiti and dig water wells in Africa.

Oyer, a descendant of legendary Barefoot Mailman Charlie Pierce and daughter of former Boynton Beach Mayor Harvey E. Oyer Jr., is teaching her students to be global citizens.

“Social responsibility may not be in the curriculum, but it is an important skill I try to instill every year,” says Oyer, who teaches civics, economics and American history.

To raise the money to plant trees, Oyer and her seventh- and eighth-graders sold wristbands with tree-friendly slogans that the students came up with like “Just Tree It” and “Grow Green.”

Through their Earth Day 2014, 2015 and 2016 projects, Oyer and her students raised $400, $1,500 and $1,400 — enough money to plant 6,200 trees, 3,000 trees in Haiti alone.

Oyer, who lives in Boynton Beach, and her students choose Haiti as a recipient for so many trees “because Haiti is our neighbor, was listed as a treeless nation by the U.N. in 2000, and Americans help their neighbors when in need. Being a good neighbor and helping Haiti helps us all. Beyond reducing global warming and climate change, the trees improve the quality of life and reduce soil erosion for their people.”

Last fall, Oyer’s classes joined with students from Boca Middle School’s student government to sell pasta shaped like logos from various colleges to raise money to dig water wells in Africa. That effort raised $1,800.

“Water is essential to life. Living in South Florida we are all aware of the importance of a fresh, clean water supply. We are lucky to have the Everglades,” says Oyer, who has been teaching for 18 years. “There is a lot of water in Africa; it is just deep underground.”

Susan Oyer stands on Ocean Avenue where her grandfather had a real estate/insurance office. The plaque honors Charles Pierce, the Barefoot Mailman. Tim Stepien/The Coastal Star

To put all the students’ hard work and money raised into action, Oyer works with Julian Lennon’s foundation.

“Almost all of the funds have gone to Julian Lennon’s White Feather Foundation,” Oyer says. “I love the transparency of the foundation and the fact no donated money goes to administrative costs. So 100 percent of the funds go exactly where you want them to go and you get updates on the impact of your donations.”

Oyer, who is also president and founder of the St. George’s Society of Palm Beach (a nonprofit that supports local and English charities promoting positive exchanges between Palm Beach County and England), calls herself “a big environmentalist.”

“We have a responsibility to our planet. We have a responsibility to future generations to leave this world as great as we found it,” says Oyer. “Someone better step up and make a difference.”

She says she gets her let’s-do-something-about-this drive from her father, who died in 2010.

“I had a dad who was a mayor and on city commission and on every possible thing you could be on,” Oyer says. “There’s no being in my family and not making a difference.”

Making a difference is why Oyer, who declined to share her age, steps into a classroom and teaches.

“The world will be a better place because I went to work (today),” Oyer says. “I’m big on that. That’s why I became a teacher.” ★

Editor’s Note

We should all give sea turtles a break

This is when they come. During these early summer months, the females labor up the sand on primordial missions to find safe locations to bury their eggs. They have been doing this on our shore long before air-conditioning was invented and condos cast shadows on the sand.

These sea turtles are one of the Earth’s most mysterious and time-honored creatures.

The giant reptiles have a prehistoric magnetism that draws humans to them. This wouldn’t be a problem if we only wanted to watch and learn. But I have observed adults guiding children down the beach and shining flashlights into the eyes of the nesting turtles. And even more horrifying, I’ve seen them lift children onto the turtles’ backs and take flash photographs as the turtles retreat to the safety of the sea.

Already this nesting season, I’ve seen photos and videos on social media of turtles rushing back to the sea after what appear to be aborted attempts to nest. In all of these instances there are crowds of people with cellphones surrounding the frightened creatures.

The Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission has made a special effort this turtle season to educate the public about the hazards of cellphone photos during a turtle’s attempt to nest. (See story, page 18.)

“Most visitors to the beach don’t realize that any light on the beach at night poses a threat to these threatened and endangered animals. A nesting female may become frightened or disoriented by the lights or a flash photo and return to the ocean without laying eggs,” said Dr. Robbin Trindell, who leads the FWC’s sea turtle management program.

We need to leave these creatures alone.

Isn’t it bad enough that pollutants in the water are causing tumors to grow on turtles’ faces and fins? That plastics tossed overboard or washed into our waterways are ingested by these turtles as they forage for food? That their shells are sometimes cracked by boat propellers or that the turtles are entangled in discarded fishing line or nets and left to drown?

Sadly, those are just some of the additional challenges the adult turtles face.

For the hatchlings the odds for survival are even more difficult. It’s estimated only one out of 1,000 makes it to adulthood.

Watching a turtle dig her nest and lay eggs is an amazing experience, but it’s best done as part of an organized, state-sanctioned outing with a group like Gumbo Limbo Nature Center.

Sea turtles were here long before we were. Let them return to their nesting beaches in peace.

Urban trail will bring ruination to east Delray Beach

Our "Village by the Sea" is being placed at risk by Delray Resolution 71-015, unanimously adopted by the City Commission in December.

The resolution commits the city to a 3,000-mile "urban Appalachian Trail" that connects 15 states along the East Coast of the U.S. for non-motorized travelers. This will require 8- to 10-foot pathways along A1A in Delray Beach and the adjoining barrier island communities.

City officials told The Coastal Star, shortly after passage, that "sidewalks would be striped to create separate lanes for pedestrians and bicycles" and the passed resolution "will allow us (the city) to get grants."

Even though city officials claim the resolution "means nothing," the clear and unambiguous 3.1-mile route along A1A will extend approximately 6.3 miles between the north and south city limits, from Federal Highway, down George Bush Boulevard to A1A, and southward to Highland Beach, including the 7/10th-mile in front of the new beach pavilion at A1A and Atlantic.

This new Beach Property Owners Association-supported pavilion will become a grant development-supported casualty. Every transient from Maine to Key West will be able to stop for a rest before dumping trash in our front yards, relieving themselves in our shrubbery, and sleeping on the beach.

We are of the opinion that the 3,000-mile pathway through all major East Coast urban areas will:

- Bring thousands of backpackers and transients to warm Florida in season, by bike, foot, thumb or bus, for a hike/bike down our 300 miles of oceanfront. They will bring sleeping bags for beaches and shovels in backpacks for beachgardens directly along our existing sidewalks.
- Be directed through the heart of Delray's beach area along A1A and front doorsteps on George Bush Boulevard.
- Increase traffic backups at A1A and Linton Boulevard. More pedestrians and bikers mean more activation of pedestrian lights, slowing traffic.
- Be dangerous to pedestrians and beachgoers, children and elderly as the "shared use" will be confusing.
- Require sidewalks be widened to create separate lanes for pedestrians and non-motorized vehicles.
- Become another

overdevelopment effort to get grant money for the city. Who will pay for the portable toilets and trash barrels?

• Once "grant" money is accepted, the city will lose control and the grantors' camel will have his nose under the tent. Soon the pathways will come all the way down A1A.

• Devalue properties. The "urban" pathway will greatly devalue the beachfront homes, condos, apartments, hotels, and business properties that contribute a significant portion of Delray's revenues.

• Risk converting the new pavilion into a rest area for thousands of urban backpacking hikers and bikers, as well as being joined by our very own congregating drug-rehabbers.

We need an immediate repeal

South Palm Beach

Town council shuns developer's height request

By Dan Moffett

Developer Gary Cohen and two of his lawyers spent more than an hour trying to persuade the South Palm Beach Town Council to vote on a charter amendment measure that might allow him to build his condo project 5 feet higher on the old Palm Beach Oceanfront Inn site.

It didn't work.

"We would beg of you to make a motion and have a vote," Mitch Kirschner, an attorney for Cohen's Paragon Acquisition Group, said during the May 24 town meeting.

Council members sat silently and then moved on to the next item on the agenda.

The council's cold shoulder is because building heights are a "hot-button" issue in South Palm Beach, said Vice Mayor Joe Flagello. Officials remember the angry outcry from residents six years ago when the property's previous owner, Pjeter Paloka, wanted to build a 14-story condo. Voters responded by overwhelmingly putting strict height limits in the town charter.

"This is through no fault of your own. It's with the previous history. We get that. We know you're not the previous group," said Flagello, who told Cohen he should understand why the town is "gun shy" about height. "But you do know the history and what has occurred in this town. And it is a very hot-button issue. There are people who are very passionate on both sides of the fence."

Flagello told Cohen that he should take the other route that remains available — bypass the council and go directly to the town's voters and get the petitions needed to put a charter change amendment on the November ballot. To do that, Paragon would need to collect signatures from 15 percent of the town's registered electorate, roughly between 150 and 200 voters.

Cohen said afterward he was undecided about what his next step would be. "It's something we will discuss internally," he said. He called the prospect for getting petitions "certainly feasible."

Paragon has admitted that the original architect for the project miscalculated the height for the six stories with 30 condominiums that would sit above the parking garage, failing to include the 5 feet needed for five floor plates. Cohen has said the building must have 10-foot ceilings to be competitive in the luxury condo marketplace, requiring a minimum height of 65 feet, not 60.

"We have a problem that makes our project unmarketable in 2016," Kirschner said.

Cohen has partnered with DDG, a New York-based real estate investment group, to help sell the project. Prices start at about $2.3 million for a 2,900-square-foot unit with two bedrooms and three baths. The dispute between council members and Paragon also has caused friction with Town Attorney Brad Biggs.

Councilwoman Stella Gaddy Jordan proposed seeking outside applicants to take over the town's legal work, saying the council needed more advice and information than Biggs was providing. Councilman Woodrow Gorbach seconded her motion. He said Biggs "can be hard to get a hold of."

Flagello was solidly on Biggs' side: "He has my full confidence." After first abstaining, Councilman Robert Gottlieb voted with Flagello.

Mayor Bonnie Fischer, after a couple minutes' hesitation, rejected Jordan's motion, which failed 3-2. Fischer said the council was likely to take up the Biggs matter again at the June 28 meeting, however. ★

Gulf Stream

Author leaves young readers eager for more

By Ron Hayes

"The job of a writer is to entertain," the writer began. "If you can't tell a story and keep people turning a page, you're unemployed."

And then Carl Hiaasen entertained them.

For more than an hour, the best-selling novelist and Miami Herald columnist sat on the edge of a stage in the Gulf Stream School, telling tales and dispensing advice to about 100 upper school students.

"When I was your age," he recalled, "I used to keep journals. We called them diaries back then, and I would write down stuff that happened every day. Sports and fishing. It taught me every single day to type out a few paragraphs. Your writing gets better."

He gave them a peek at how his books are made. He cracked sly jokes and named his own favorite writers. He shared tales from his boyhood, growing up in suburban Fort Lauderdale back in the early '60s. He told them about the neighborhood bully who terrified him on the way home from school back then.

And like those witty and preposterous Florida yarns that have put his novels for both adults and kids on best-seller lists, Hiaasen seasoned the entertainment with a serious message, this time about the importance of reading and writing.

"The internet is all about content," he reminded the students, "and if you can't write, you can't contribute to the content of the internet. You have to know how to communicate, and the best way to learn how to write is to read like crazy. I know a lot of writers, and they were all readers as kids."

He began to write at the age of 6, Hiaasen recalled, when he was given a typewriter.

"A typewriter is a machine that looks a lot like a computer," he said with a straight face, "and I thought, What job can I get where I get to write every day?"

And so in time he became a reporter at The Miami Herald, where Christie Evans, a fifth-grade English teacher at the school, was once a colleague. Hiaasen's visit to the school was a personal favor.

Miami Herald columnist and novelist Carl Hiaasen gave students at Gulf Stream School advice on how best to become a writer. Jerry Lower/The Coastal Star

"Working at newspapers helped me in writing," he said. "Every day it's something different, and you have to write fast. You had deadlines, and editors who were brutally honest. There's no such thing as writer's block in a newsroom. If you have writer's block in the newsroom, you'll get unemployment block."

And then he entertained their questions.

Asking a writer to name his favorite book is like asking a dad which of his kids he loves best, he warned. "But for sentimental reasons, I like Hoot because it's the first book for kids and I didn't know if I could do it."

What Hiaasen calls his "kid books" have one-word titles — Hoot, Flush, Chomp — to distinguish them from his "grown-up books" — Tourist Season, Basket Case, Bad Monkey — so they won't be confused.

"I didn't want some kid picking them up by accident and reading them," he said. "Plus the cover artists like shorter titles."

His favorite writers? J.D. Salinger. Kurt Vonnegut. Thomas McGuane. Graham Greene. And of course, the late, great Florida storyteller, John D. MacDonald, whose Travis McGee mysteries took place right there in Fort Lauderdale. "That was the first time I'd read a published book where I knew all the streets," he said.

And if Hiaasen hadn't become a writer?

"I don't know," he mused. "At one point I wanted to be a vet, but then I found out you had to take science classes."

His old neighborhood in Plantation, out on the edge of the Everglades, inspired Hoot, the Newbery Medal-winning novel about kids who fight to save some burrowing owls from a developer.

"Now the whole area where I grew up is under concrete and asphalt," he said. "In real life, we weren't able to save the owls."

The owls are gone, but so is the neighborhood bully who used to make his life a nightmare: "After a while I got to be taller than her and she left me alone after that."

The students' hands were still raised high, questioners begging to be recognized, when Evans stepped forward to announce that time was up. A line formed in front of the stage, and Hiaasen started signing copies of his books.

Some of the students carried his kid books and a few the grown-up novels. Pierce Silver, 13, a seventh-grader from Boynton Beach, got his copy of Sick Puppy autographed.

"To Pierce," Hiaasen wrote, then scrawled his signature and a personal message.

Like the titles of his grown-up novels, the message was only two words: "Keep Reading." ★

Carl Hiaasen's new novel for grown-ups, Razor Girl, will be available Sept. 6.

Briny Breezes

Behringer joins town council

By Dan Moffett

New Yorker Allen "Chick" Behringer started coming to Briny Breezes for visits in 2002 and then bought a residence here in 2008.

When he heard about the recent opening on the Town Council created by the resignation of Ira Friedman, Behringer said he also heard a call to public service.

"I'm retired and living here full-time now," he said. "Other than doing some travel, I want to do something for the community which I happen to love. I want to keep it as it is. I want to keep it functional."

Council members unanimously approved Behringer for Friedman's open alderman's seat at the May 26 meeting. A former resident of Oak Beach, Long Island and New York City, Behringer said he worked for "20-some-odd years" in corporate sales and ran a small business that manufactured signs for another 20 years. The council filled another vacancy during the meeting when council members approved Councilwoman Christina Adams as the town's deputy bookkeeper.

In other business, Council President Sue Thaler said the Florida Department of Transportation told the town it is willing to approve an A1A golf cart crossing at Marina Drive and Ruthmary Avenue if the Briny Breezes corporation changes the direction of Marina Drive traffic to eastbound.

"I'm not sure if that's good news or bad news," Thaler said.

Ocean Ridge Police Chief Hal Hutchins, the town marshal, said the direction change would require switching the angle of the parking spaces on Marina. Hutchins said it might be possible to satisfy the state's condition by making Marina a two-way street that allows east and west flow across A1A. Thaler said the FDOT letter arrived shortly before the meeting, and the Town Council will wait to hear from the corporation before discussing the possible changes. ★

Along the Coast

License plate readers pass big test

By Rich Pollack

Plans to sprinkle license plate recognition cameras throughout the barrier island, derailed more than a year ago when the state refused to allow them on its rights of way, are getting new life thanks to advanced technology.

Now leaders of police departments in Delray Beach, Highland Beach and Ocean Ridge say they are close to bringing proposals for installation of systems — that can read license plates from as far away as 130 feet from a road's center — to their respective city or town commissions for approval.

Delray Beach police Capt. Tom Mitchell said he and representatives from other departments have been looking into alternative solutions to installing cameras on State Road A1A and bridges ever since the fall of 2014 when Florida Department of Transportation officials banned the cameras from state rights of way.

During a recent national police chiefs conference, Highland Beach Police Chief Craig Hartmann and Delray Beach Police Chief Jeff Goldman discovered a company, L-3 Mobile Vision, that offers cameras able to read tags from beyond the state rights of way.

Mitchell arranged for company representatives to come down recently to test the cameras.

"They worked," he said.

License plate recognition systems scan tags of passing cars and compare that information to tag numbers in law enforcement databases. If the system spots a tag registered to a stolen vehicle, for example, an alert is sent to a dispatcher who verifies the information and then notifies officers on patrol.

"It's like having someone standing on the side of the road writing down tag numbers all the time," said Ocean Ridge Police Chief Hal Hutchins.

Mitchell said he is tying up loose ends and hopes to bring a proposal for installation of the system to the City Commission within a couple of months.

If they're approved, Delray Beach would install cameras in five locations along the barrier island, including the intersections of A1A at both Atlantic Avenue and Linton Boulevard. Four of the five planned sites, Mitchell said, are on city-owned property.

He estimates the cost at between $150,000 and $200,000 and said money already has been budgeted for the project.

Hartmann said the Highland Beach department would share the cost of cameras at Linton Boulevard with Delray and share costs of a server to house the back end of the system. Highland Beach also would place a camera at the south end of the town.

In Ocean Ridge, Hutchins said he plans to update town commissioners on the status of his research into license plate recognition cameras at a workshop meeting this month and seek a green light to continue moving forward.

If commissioners approve, Ocean Ridge could have cameras at the northern and southern entrances to the town as well as at the intersections of A1A and both Woolbright Road and Ocean Avenue. Ocean Ridge would also house a server.

Currently Manalapan has cameras just north of the Boynton Inlet, grandfathered in by the DOT.

Law enforcement officials say that placing cameras at key intersections — and getting the word out that they're in use — can not only help in crime prevention but also in solving crimes. The cameras could, for example, help in investigations of thefts of unlocked cars that have plagued barrier island communities recently, by helping police track vehicles used in the crimes.

"The bottom line is that these cameras are an investigative tool," Hutchins said.

Mitchell says the systems can also serve to deter criminals.

"We want everyone to know we have cameras," he said. ★

Atlantic Crossing developers file fourth amended federal lawsuit

By Jane Smith

The legal bills continue to mount in the Atlantic Crossing case while the downtown project remains on hold during federal litigation.

In mid-May, the developers filed their fourth amended complaint in their federal lawsuit against Delray Beach. They allege they have spent more than $8 million to hire planners, architects, surveyors and lawyers needed for the complex, developed by a partnership between Ohio-based Edwards Cos. and Ocean Ridge resident

Carl DeSantis.

On 9.2 acres at the high-profile corner of Federal Highway and East Atlantic Avenue, Atlantic Crossing will comprise 343 luxury condos and apartments plus 39,394 square feet of restaurants, 37,642 square feet of shops and 83,462 square feet of office space.

The development team sued Delray Beach in June 2015, claiming the city has not certified its site plan that was approved in November 2013 and affirmed by a previous City Commission in January 2014. Last fall, the lawsuit was moved to federal court.

In its fourth amended complaint, the development team alleges the current City Commission is using “obstruction tactics” by not certifying the project site plan or approving its final plat and demanding the return of two alleys needed to build the project. All of the items are needed before the project can move forward, both parties agree.

The developers are asking the court to force the city to certify the site plan, approve the final plat, agree that the project owns the alleys, pay for the court costs and increased development costs because of the delay and extend the development agreement to Sept. 9, 2021.

In early April, the City Commission rejected a modified site plan for the project that added a driveway and redesigned the valet area into a circular path from a horseshoe-shaped version. The plan also called for improved contrast for the two loading docks and a pedestrian crosswalk moved north in the project to increase its safety.

The changes, though, were not enough to satisfy two Delray

Beach commissioners and the mayor. They want a real street with sidewalks and bike lanes instead of a driveway and extra turning space so that vehicles can leave the underground garage safely.

In mid-April the City Commission approved a request to ask for the return of the two alleys and followed with a motion to dismiss the developers’ lawsuit. Many of the counts belonged in state court or were not ready to be heard, the city’s motion said.

The case has an October jury trial date. ★

Delray Beach/Highland Beach

Deadline for fire negotiations extended for 90 days

By Rich Pollack

Another deadline for when Highland Beach has to let Delray Beach know if it plans to continue contracting with the city for fire and rescue services has come and gone — and still no decision has been reached.

Negotiations are continuing, however, with both municipalities agreeing to extend the deadline for 90 days.

“Extending the deadline gives us the opportunity to continue negotiating further,” Highland Beach Town Manager Beverly Brown said.

While town officials continue back-and-forth talks with Delray Beach representatives, Highland Beach is also exploring the possibility of contracting with Palm Beach County Fire Rescue.

Under the current agreement, Delray Beach staffs a Highland Beach-owned fire station adjacent to Highland Beach’s Town Hall. The town owns a 10-year-old rescue wagon and rents a fire truck from Delray Beach for $8,500 a month.

Brown said the town had discussions with Boynton Beach officials but ruled out contracting with that city’s Fire Rescue Department because of concerns over the time it would take for a backup rescue or fire truck to respond in an emergency.

Also still under consideration is the possibility of Highland Beach joining a proposed barrier island fire district being explored by several municipalities. Brown said, however, there are several issues that could prevent the town from partnering with other small towns.

“It’s not as viable an option as it once was,” she said, citing concerns about start-up expenses and backup response times.

Discussions regarding a new 10-year fire-rescue service agreement between Delray Beach and its smaller neighbor on the coast have been going on for months. At one point earlier this year, an agreement seemed unlikely after Delray Beach commissioners proposed adding a 20 percent administrative fee to the proposed $3.5 million annual contract.

Negotiations resumed, however, after representatives from both municipalities realized they could benefit from continuing the partnership.

“The notion that Highland

Beach gets more out of this than we do is not factually accurate,” Delray Beach Mayor Cary Glickstein said during discussions of the issue in March.

Brown said she does not think delays in reaching an agreement with either Delray Beach Fire Rescue or Palm Beach County Fire Rescue will affect Highland Beach’s ability to have an agreement with a fire rescue service provider in place by the time the current contract with Delray Beach expires in September 2017.

“We should have this resolved by the end of [June],” Brown said. ★

Higher cost estimates could scuttle fire district plan

By Dan Moffett

Prospects dimmed for a barrier island fire district as officials from six coastal communities dug deeper into a consultant’s feasibility study last month.

The preliminary report from Robert Finn, a senior manager with Texas-based Matrix Consulting Group, uncovered two significant problems that could derail the plan. Both are costly.

For one, contrary to earlier estimates, revised numbers suggest that it would be difficult for the six towns to save money on operational expenses if they provide their own fire-rescue services. In fact, forming a district likely would require them to pay more each year.

The other problem is delivering the service to an elongated district that stretches roughly 20 miles from South Palm Beach to Highland Beach and that is connected mostly by a single two-lane road, State Road A1A. Safety officials now believe it will take four fire stations to cover the zone, meaning two new facilities would have to be built somewhere between the existing stations in Manalapan and Highland Beach.

Even with four stations, the town representatives say they would still need mutual aid agreements with mainland service providers to ensure the proposed district is properly covered during the tourist season and periods of high recreational use.

The preliminary report suggests that the price tag for creating the district is significantly higher than previously thought.

“That’s the big gorilla in the room — cost,” said Bob Vitas, South Palm Beach town manager.

Finn said he would have the study revised and completed before the end of June. Then the report will go to the elected bodies in the six towns — South Palm Beach, Manalapan, Ocean Ridge, Briny Breezes, Gulf Stream and Highland Beach — for consideration. ★

Commissioners criticize Cooper but give him a 10 percent raise

By Jane Smith

Delray Beach's city manager received a 10 percent raise even though most of his bosses rated his performance during the past year as average.

Don Cooper, a longtime Port St. Lucie city manager who most recently served as chief financial officer for a biotech firm there, took the helm of Delray Beach in January 2015.

Cooper, 67, will make $196,700 for bringing stability to City Hall, creating a transparent government style, holding staff accountable for their decisions and basically being a dignified presence that city workers will want as their leader.

Mayor Cary Glickstein praised Cooper for his hard-working style and then began to list his shortcomings. The city manager has not surrounded himself "with exceptional people who have real skill sets," Glickstein said. Public safety, finance and purchasing are doing well, while planning and information technology are coming along, he said.

But the other departments need help, the mayor said.

A recent disagreement between

to comment that she was not fired but put on paid leave during the investigation. The city's human resources director was docked a day's pay for misusing city property and the whole matter was sent April 29 to the county's Commission on Ethics.

"You allowed a workable setback to metastasize into something that created the need for public comment tonight, which reflects poorly on all of us," Glickstein said. "In terms of how you handle senior staff, that was a fail."

He wants to see Cooper as the take-charge CEO he was when he wowed commissioners at their February 2015 goal-setting session. Then Cooper talked about the need to create Disney-like levels of service for the downtown and explained how the city could get there.

"I believe you have it in you to be the the parks and human resources directors festered for months. At the May 17 commission meeting, five of seven people who spoke said they supported the parks director, causing Cooper manager we need, but I want to see the change very soon," said Glickstein, who is unwilling to wait another year.

Commissioner Jordana Jarjura faulted Cooper for allowing the dog beach issue to linger nearly two years and said he should get out in front of issues more quickly. In addition, she said the commission should stop setting up the city manager for failure. She talked in general terms about commissioners reaching a consensus then each approaching Cooper after the meeting to give a different opinion.

She praised him for parts of his management style and said his salary should reflect those of surrounding communities. She proposed the 10 percent increase.

Commissioner Shelly Petrolia wasn't sure that an average year should translate into a raise.

Vice Mayor Al Jacquet told Cooper, "You have taken the ship from the bottom of the ocean and pieced it back together." Jacquet did not fill out the human resources department's form, preferring to speak to Cooper in person.

Jacquet went on to say that Delray

Beach is a tough place to work and serve. "You get beaten up from us up here and from others who hide behind computer screens," he said. "Some would see the process as a wake-up call, but I see it as a thank you for bringing the ship to the surface."

Commissioner Mitch Katz was absent from the meeting, but he did rate Cooper's performance as average.

Cooper gave a measured response, saying his job was to listen to the commissioners, and said he saw the comments as constructive criticism. He added that he is not motivated by money.

Petrolia agreed with her colleagues about the raise and said, "I'm not getting a raise. Because I'm giving you one, I'd like you to make our jobs up here easier."

Also at the May 17 meeting, City Attorney Noel Pfeffer agreed to stay until June 24, to help with a transition. He originally gave 60 days' notice with his last day as June 6. With Jarjura's suggestion, Pfeffer will receive a 5 percent raise, effective as of May 17, until he leaves city employment. He will start later in the summer as a partner at the Conrad & Scherer law firm in Fort Lauderdale. ★

Launch of new city website a work in progress

By Jane Smith

Visitors who went on the Delray Beach website during the third weekend in May saw a photo of a beach with a pier.

But the photo wasn't of the city beach.

The image was a stock photo holding a place until city staff could post suitable pictures, said Gwen Spencer, chief innovation and technology officer who inherited the website redesign project when she arrived in July.

City employees received an email at 5:30 p.m. May 20, a Friday, about the redesign going live.

The redesign dominated the talk on the Delray Raw Facebook page the following week.

"People were making fun of the city on Facebook, my natural reaction was to defend Delray," said Cindi Freeburn, who runs a golf cart rental business and has a passion for all things Delray Beach. She frequently visits the city website, serves on a city board and attends or watches each commission meeting. Even so, she was not aware of the redesign. She wondered why the redesign went live with obvious errors and broken links.

City Manager Don Cooper said the website exists for residents and businesses to use and allows them to report any problems with the redesigned site.

"I'm against using the citizens of Delray to proof the website. Staff should report the bugs," Freeburn said. "The website reflects poorly on the city."

A former marketing executive from the North, she thinks Delray Beach needs its own marketing department so that the city speaks with a single, consistent message.

Cooper agreed that a unified message was needed.

A marketing department is not a commission priority and the budget does not contain any money for it, he said. The city relies on two taxpayer-supported agencies, the Delray Beach Marketing Cooperative and the Downtown Development Authority, for its marketing efforts.

Mayor Cary Glickstein said the redesign was an improvement, "but it's a work in progress and has a long way to go.... I know our staff is seeking constructive criticism and ideas, which really can't occur until you roll it out as they did."

Revize Software Systems of

Troy, Mich., did the redesign for $17,150, below the $25,000 threshold for contracts needing commission approval. Other bidders were: 561Media.com from Boca Raton for $22,000 and Vision Internet of Santa Monica, Calif., for $42,755.

Spencer's department is now working to integrate software to allow users to pull down permit forms, pay fees for classes, submit comments and questions, and do anything that requires a special trip to City Hall.

What's the target date? Sometime in July. ★

City prepares for beach sidewalk and furnishings project

By Jane Smith

A Fort Lauderdale engineering firm will translate conceptual drawings into biddable documents and oversee construction for Delray Beach's redo of sidewalks and furnishings along its public beach.

EDSA Inc. initially had a not-to-exceed contract of $600,000 to do the work, which Mayor Cary Glickstein called "essentially a sidewalk project" in early May. The city is paying a premium price because it wants the work finished by the end of the year. Even so, the mayor wanted EDSA to work with the city's Environmental Services Department to lower the price.

At the second meeting in May, the EDSA contract came in at $429,350 plus $35,000 for expenses. That amount was more agreeable to the commission and received unanimous approval by four members. Commissioner Mitch Katz was absent.

"The $150,000 reduction makes it easier for us to approve," Commissioner Jordana Jarjura said.

The conceptual drawings were donated by architect Bob Currie. A vice president of the Beach Property Owners Association, he is a founding principal of the Currie Sowards Aguila Architects firm in Delray Beach.

The area from Casuarina Road north to the end of the public beach will be redone in this project, estimated to cost $3 million.

EDSA's schedule calls for 30 percent of the drawings completed by June 5 so the company can submit permits to the Florida Department of Environmental Protection and Florida Department of Transportation. The firm will make a presentation to the City Commission on June 21 when 60 percent of its drawings are done.

John Morgan, director of the Environmental Services Department, said the penalties for not completing the beach plan project on time will be detailed at that meeting.

The project has tight deadlines: Construction bids will be opened on July 5. The commission will select the construction contractor at its July 21 meeting. Construction will start on July 25 with a goal of Dec. 1 for substantial completion and Dec. 31 for final completion.

"They will be with us until the ribbon cutting," Morgan said. EDSA will ensure the needed permits are received from state and city entities, and present the plan to the city's Site Plan Review and Appearance Board.

The company will create drawings for two architectural gazebos, socializing areas, pedestrian scale lighting and a unified sign package. Its drawings also will cover expanded sidewalks, benches, waste/recycling containers and overhead showers.

At the May 17 meeting, the mayor provided clarification on what the commission wants for the design of the benches and the shower structures. Open designs for the benches are preferred over solid ones and shower structures must have a place to hang a towel and a beach chair, he said.

In other business May 17, the commission approved:

- Allowing the city manager to sign construction agreements with FDOT to turn two parking spaces on East Atlantic Avenue, between northbound and southbound Federal Highway, into spaces for use by scooters and golf carts. Another parking space on NE Sixth Avenue, near the Atlantic Avenue intersection, will be converted to golf cart parking. ★

Critics get commission to reconsider Greenway OK

By Jane Smith

A small but vocal group of beach property owners persuaded the City Commission to revisit a December resolution supporting the East Coast Greenway.

They reached out to state Rep. Bill Hager, who sent a letter to the Delray Beach mayor in early May.

"While the expansion of sidewalks and bike lanes may work in other areas, the corridors through Delray may not have much area to work with," Hager wrote. "A number of constituents have addressed their concerns to me on this issue and I hope that this project is handled with great care and the input of the residents who will potentially be impacted adversely by this matter."

As a result, the Greenway, approved in December on a consent agenda, will come back to the commission for discussion in July.

In Delray Beach, the northern path would begin on Federal Highway, travel south to George Bush Boulevard, turn east until A1A and then south to Highland Beach. Delray Beach has 1.3 miles of sidewalk that is 9.6 feet wide along the ocean and can be used as the trail.

The East Coast Greenway is designed for cyclists and walkers to use from Maine to Key West. In Boca Raton, 4.7 miles were dedicated in 2012 to the route, sometimes called the Urban Appalachian Trail.

"It would be a disaster," said John Cartier, a Greenway critic who is out of town for the summer. "People would be urinating in public, possibly sleeping on the beach. You never know what will happen with the drug addicts all over."

A fellow critic, Michael Owen, will be in town for the July meeting.

"We feel the traffic is terrible already, backing up into Highland Beach," he said. "If you push the pedestrian button to cross Linton Boulevard at A1A, you add another 30 seconds to the light."

A Delray Beach organization that advocates for cyclists and pedestrians supports the Greenway.

"The East Coast Greenway is for local people who like to ride bikes or walk," said Charlie Bonfield, president of Safety As Floridians Expect, known as SAFE. "We heard about it in November and decided that it was something SAFE should be involved in."

To counter Cartier and others, Bonfield said, "They are misinformed. It's nothing like the Appalachian Trail. It's not a hiking trail. We won't have people with backpacks coming through."

Delray Beach has laws that prohibit sleeping on the beach, in the pavilions or on the benches, he said.

The Greenway would coordinate with the Florida Department of Transportation, which owns most of the land that its path would take in Delray Beach.

FDOT played a key role in the creation of SAFE, Bonfield said.

In 2003 when FDOT wanted to add bike lanes and sidewalks along A1A, a small group of Delray Beach residents opposed their creation. They went to the mayor at the time and he intervened for the residents to stop the project, Bonfield said.

SAFE formed in 2004 to fight for the bike lanes and sidewalks. Seven residents collected 6,000 signatures at city events and took them to the then-mayor, who said the city doesn't honor petitions, according to Bonfield.

Next the group went to Fort Lauderdale, where the FDOT district office oversees Delray Beach. The group convinced the director to fight for pedestrian and cyclist access along A1A, Bonfield said. As a result, the state road has bike lanes and sidewalks in Delray Beach. ★

iPic gets five more months to work out parking

By Jane Smith

The owner of the proposed iPic luxury movie theater in downtown Delray Beach received a sixth extension to its contract to allow the firm time to work out a parking agreement with the city.

The deadline is now Oct. 31, instead of May 31, required by the city's Community Redevelopment Agency. The CRA owns the 1.59-acre site, which once housed the city library and chamber of commerce. The developer proposes to build a multilevel garage with 315 parking spaces, with 90 reserved for public use.

The CRA board passed the motion 5-0, with Chairman Reggie Cox and member Bill Branning absent at the May 12 meeting. The site sits just south of East Atlantic Avenue, between Southeast Fourth and Fifth avenues.

The discussion was minimal with only board member Paul Zacks asking whether the parking issue was going to be a sticking point between the city and iPic.

"We've already seen a lot of sticking points," he said.

CRA attorney David Tolces said that the city wanted to negotiate the parking garage agreement.

"It was a condition of the City Commission approval to work out the parking details," said Jeff Costello, CRA executive director. The city wants to make sure the hours, management, maintenance and public easement of the garage fit with its parking management program, he said.

In March, the iPic complex received city approval to build a mixed-use development with eight movie theaters having 497 seats and taking up 44,979 square feet of space, 43,880 square feet of office space and 7,487 square feet of retail space.

Another condition of approval requires iPic to move its corporate headquarters to Delray Beach and occupy 20,000 square feet for five years. The third condition covers traffic on southbound Federal Highway, requiring iPic to station a police officer near its pedestrian entrance to prevent vehicles from stopping to drop off passengers for the movies. ★

TAX VALUE

A preliminary tax roll will be submitted to the state on July 1, and governments then approve new budgets and tax rates — a process that ends in about mid-September before the start of the new fiscal year on Oct. 1.

An increase in taxable values means that the county, cities and towns will collect more money from property owners if they keep their tax rates the same as last year.

While elected officials can increase the tax rate, most typically are loath to do so and anger residents. They also can reduce the tax rate any amount or enough that the new rate will bring in the same amount of tax revenue as last year.

“It is a double-edged sword,” Nikolits said of the rise in taxable value. “It is good news for the property owner. It is bad news for the taxpayer, who is usually the same person, because it affords the taxing authorities the ability to take in even more tax revenue. It is a very rare taxing authority that won’t take advantage of that.”

Indeed, only seven of the county’s cities and towns lowered their property tax rates enough to avoid tax increases last year.

Boca Raton was among those that did not do that. But Mayor Susan Haynie notes that the city has the lowest tax rate of any “full service” city in the county, meaning a city that does not outsource any of its municipal services. The current property tax rate is $3.67 for every $1,000 of assessed property value.

“The important thing is we are able to provide world-class municipal services at the lowest tax rate in the entire county,” she said.

Delray Beach City Manager Don Cooper said his city’s gains in part reflect development in the central business district. The projects fall within the Community Redevelopment Agency area and, as a result, any additional tax revenue generated will remain within the CRA rather than benefiting the city as a whole.

Cooper said it’s too early to predict next year’s property tax rate since the 2016-17 budget is still being worked on. The current rate is $7.33 per $1,000 of assessed property value.

“We certainly are not going to go up,” he said. “We will stay the same or drop.”

Boynton Beach officials declined to talk about the tax rate. It currently is $7.90 per $1,000 of assessed value.

Taxable values increased by 7.3 percent in Briny Breezes, 5.5 percent in Gulf Stream, 6.5 percent in Highland Beach, 9.1 percent in Lantana, 9.9 percent in Manalapan, 7.5 percent in Ocean Ridge, and 7.9 percent in South Palm Beach.

While estimated taxable values have gone up, the property appraiser’s numbers show growth has slowed in recent years. Taxable values jumped 9.7 percent countywide last year. In just two other examples, Boynton Beach was up 10.1 percent while Boca Raton increased 7.6 percent from 2014 to 2015.

Before the real estate crash, a 4 percent to 7 percent increase “was considered a normal market,” Nikolits said. “What we are seeing over the last two years is that we are returning to a more normal market — not double digit (increases).”

The average increase for all cities was 8.22 percent.

Realtors have noted that increases are slowing.

“Sales prices for high-end properties in the coastal communities have regained ground lost during the recession and then some,” said Pascal Liguori, a broker associate with Premier Estate Properties. “Now prices are beginning to level off, reflecting a more normal rate of appreciation.”

Yet the market remains very active, he said. “It always goes back to the fact that there is more demand for property in the coastal areas than there is supply,” he said.

Jack Elkins, an agent with Fite Group, agrees demand remains strong in the coastal communities, although values now are edging up rather than skyrocketing.

One change he is seeing that bolsters business is that instead of buying vacation homes, more out-of-staters in the market for luxury homes are opting to become Florida residents. As a result, he said buyers are willing to pay more for a permanent home than a vacation property.

While not certain why this is happening, he posits that changes in tax laws up north are making it more expensive to live there. Florida has low taxes and owners can homestead for additional tax savings. ★

Atlantic Avenue business sales drive Delray’s value increase

By Jane Smith

Property values continue to increase by double-digit percentages in Delray Beach’s Community Redevelopment Agency area.

When the county property appraiser released its 2016 taxable value estimates on May 27, the numbers showed a 13.2 percent increase in Delray’s CRA district from 2015. That follows a 12.8 percent increase from 2014.

The uptick comes mainly from property sales on the bustling Atlantic Avenue, now a popular adult playground for tourists and county residents.

“It’s been a steady climb,” said Tom Prakas, a restaurant broker who said he placed 30 to 40 restaurants along the avenue. “The sales prices are 10 times what they were trading for 10 years ago. ... Everyone wants to be there.”

He predicts the prices will triple again in 5 years — “if restaurants and retailers continue to do well.”

But longtime merchants wonder how the character of the street will change when tenants have to pay increased rental rates to go along with the high-priced sales. Even if a tenant has a long-term lease, that business may face an increase in property taxes charged as part of the common area maintenance fees, said Bruce Gimmy, who owns the building for his store, The Trouser Shop & Shorts.

“I’m concerned about the health of the downtown,” Gimmy said. He predicts some merchants who pay the $100-square-foot rental rates will soon leave and the avenue will turn into a “food court by the sea.”

During 2015, 13 properties changed hands along the avenue according to the property appraiser.

The top sales price of $19.5 million raised eyebrows for even the jaded Atlantic Avenue watcher. Two buildings, 326 and 400 E. Atlantic, were sold by the George family to an affiliate of Menin Development, which built the Downtown at the Gardens in Palm Beach Gardens and owns the Regal Cinemas in Royal Palm Beach.

Menin has since moved its headquarters to Delray Beach. CEO Craig Menin paid $17 million in September for an oceanfront mansion in Delray Beach.

The Delray Beach commercial buildings straddle the SE Fourth Avenue intersection. On the west side, at 326 E. Atlantic, sits the Green Owl Restaurant. The diner has rented the space for 33 years. County property records show that building as having 7,572 square feet. Tenants on the east side, in the 14,704-square-foot building at 400 E. Atlantic Ave., include Huber Health Mart Drugs and Kilwins Delray Beach.

The company wanted a higher rental rate for 326 E. Atlantic and offered to move the Green Owl across the street to Southeast Fourth Avenue, behind Huber Drugs. Menin will build out the space to the Green Owl’s specifications. Terms of the lease still need to be worked out, said Dave Gensman, the diner’s owner. The restaurant will close in June and open in November in a slightly smaller space with 20 fewer seats, Gensman said. He will take most of the owl knickknacks — the ones he likes “because they have sentimental value,” he said. “Others may get lost in the move.”

In its space, Capital One Café, a bank division, will lease 5,840 square feet. Patrons will be able to try new digital banking tools and grab a cup of Peet’s coffee, its partner in the café business.

“You have to have corporate backing to remain on the avenue,” said Gensman, “unless you own your building. They are pushing the charm off the street.”

Real estate broker Jim Knight agrees. “The locals have reached that point. They can’t afford Atlantic Avenue rents,” he said.

The local businesses that want to remain in Delray Beach will have to move to Pineapple Grove or the new SOFA district, under construction south of Atlantic, Knight said.

Delray Beach has several programs to keep small retailers and restaurateurs in the city, said Joan Goodrich, economic development director.

The GEAR program — grow, expand and retain — works with partners at the Downtown Development Authority, Greater Delray Beach Chamber of Commerce, West Atlantic Redevelopment Coalition and CRA to find suitable spaces, Goodrich said.

The program has a commercial property database with connections to real estate brokers. Thirty small businesses, including merchants and restaurants, are using the GEAR program, Goodrich said.

The CRA also offers site development grants to help businesses on West Atlantic modernize their spaces, she said. In addition, the city plans to steer merchants to the Congress Avenue corridor.

For Gensman, the high-priced sales are a sign of the times. “When buildings are sold for high prices, the new owners have to increase rent,” he said. “Soon Atlantic Avenue will have national tenants only.” ★

Code change accommodates Publix sign request

By Dan Moffett

Manalapan commissioners unanimously approved a minor change to their sign code that could have a major impact on business development in the town.

The commission voted to allow commercial tenants with more than 15,000 square feet of floor space in Plaza del Mar to post trademark signs as large as 200 square feet.

Simply put, the change paves the way for Publix to build a supermarket in the heart of the plaza. Construction is slated to begin next year, with the store's opening targeted for 2018.

During negotiations with town officials and Kitson & Partners, the plaza's landlord, Publix has pushed for permission to install a larger version of the company's familiar trademark sign than the code allowed. The commission agreed to the request, but other signage issues remain.

Several commissioners say they want Publix not to use illumination, preferring instead something more understated such as the masonry logo that marks the company's store in Palm Beach.

"I would hate to see some big bright sign for Publix that we don't see for other tenants," Commissioner Basil Diamond said.

Mayor David Cheifetz said the ordinance change applies only to the size of signs and does not pertain to lighting or other details that the town hopes to resolve as negotiations with Publix move forward.

Tom Hoban, president and chief investment officer at Kitson, has confirmed that negotiations are underway to bring a supermarket to the plaza but has declined to name the company. Publix also has declined to comment.

"I am not in a position to speak about who we're working with at the moment," Hoban said, "other than to say we're working with a grocer."

Town officials have confirmed the grocer is Publix, and Kitson has confirmed plans for a major overhaul of the plaza, scheduled to be completed late next year. The addition of a 26,000-square-foot supermarket actually will shrink the plaza's total retail space by about 20 percent and require uprooting at least a half-dozen merchants.

Several commissioners, including Diamond, Ronald Barsanti and Simone Bonutti, have expressed concerns that the new supermarket might be too big and change the character of the plaza.

Cheifetz has said the town intends to work with Publix and Kitson to allay concerns about the new store, and that the town's architectural committee will review "the final aesthetics of the plaza" before construction can begin.

The town has received no formal design plans or permit requests from Publix, but officials say that could happen within the next month.

In other business at the May 20 meeting:

- The commission approved a policy change for donations to the town. Under the new guidelines, donations of cash to Manalapan that come with no conditions can be accepted by staff and commissioners. Cash donations with conditions or donations of goods, land or services must be approved by the commission.

The town is trying to avoid repeating situations in which donations came with unexpected requests for plaques or naming rights.

- Town Manager Linda Stumpf said that work to replace the south side of the Audubon Causeway bridge should be completed by June and weight restrictions on traffic removed. The project remains on schedule to be finished by mid-summer.

- Stumpf said a consultant hired to evaluate the potential sale of the Manalapan water system to Boynton Beach is finishing up his work and should have a report ready for the commission's June meeting. ★

Adkin was talking with Kitson & Partners, the plaza's landlord. He offered a plan to put a 13,000-square-foot store in the centrally located building where two other small groceries had failed.

Adkin brought in an engineer and drew up plans that included solar panels. "We want to do what's right for the environment," he said.

Prospects for a deal with Kitson seemed promising, according to Adkin, and then a corporate giant entered the picture: Publix, the Lakeland-based supermarket chain with some 1,100 stores, 180,000 employees and annual revenues of roughly $33 billion.

"We went from first in line to second in line very quickly," Adkin said.

Now Publix and Kitson are negotiating terms of a deal that would put a 26,000-square-foot supermarket in the plaza, town officials say, with construction beginning early next year and an opening set for 2018. Both Publix and Kitson declined requests to comment for this story.

Town commissioners find themselves caught somewhere in the middle of the sticky grocery drama. They have no authority to get involved in negotiations between Kitson and a prospective tenant.

But they have plenty of authority to dictate the building codes, permitting requirements and operational rules that regulate a large business in their town.

"The owners of the shopping center are certainly well within their rights to bring a major grocery store in there," Mayor David Cheifetz said, "and there's a limit to what we can do as a commission."

Town Attorney Keith Davis said the town has to stay out of the landlord's contractual relationships: "We have no business getting into whether it's a Publix, Winn-Dixie or some other, smaller grocery store."

Is Publix too big?

In May, town commissioners approved a change to their sign ordinance that would allow Publix to display a large version of the company logo. About a month ago, Cheifetz visited Howard's Market in Boca, as commissioners wrestled with worries that Publix might be too big for their town and plaza.

"The entire concept of allowing that (large) store basically is going to push out other tenants with that structure," said Commissioner

Ronald Barsanti. "You're losing the flavor of that plaza by pushing out restaurants. The jewelry store is going to have to move. A number of people are going to leave and we're going to have this big monolith there."

Pedro Maldonado, owner of Jewelry Artisans Inc., says the landlord has given him until Sept. 30 to vacate the store he's occupied for 27 years. "Right now, I don't know what we're going to do," Maldonado said.

Former Vice Mayor Robert Evans, who lives adjacent to the plaza at La Coquille Villas, told the commission it should consider Howard's Market as an option that might fit Manalapan better than Publix.

"Now we know that there are alternatives and that the market is viable, we don't have to trade our character for convenience," Evans said. "It's not just about La Coquille. It's about the entrance to our town and what people see when they enter our town."

John Lawson owns Stepping Out Shoe Salon in the plaza. His store will not be uprooted by the Publix plan.

"Barry's a nice guy and I like him as a small businessman," Lawson said. "But I'm for whatever brings more traffic and makes the center more lively. We desperately need an anchor. We need a place where somebody on Ocean Boulevard can roll out of bed in the morning and go buy a bottle of milk. I'm for whoever can bring that, and unfortunately for Barry it looks like it will be somebody else."

Adkin, with his older brother and business partner Howard Jr., believe their store's three-decade track record speaks for itself and shows the town stability that the previous small grocers lacked.

"We have three employees who have been with us 20-plus years because we're a family company," he said. "When they have hard times, we take care of them."

Howard's also brings special services to the table, he says. Last Thanksgiving, the Adkins cooked 150 whole turkeys and 200 breasts for Boca customers, a tradition that Howard Sr. started.

Bringing a store to Manalapan would be a fitting way to extend the legacy of the father and small businessman who died six years ago.

"Our holidays have always been when you have no holidays," Adkin said.

"My dad and I cooked together every year on Thanksgiving and Christmas. What else could a father and son want than to spend every holiday together?" ★

DOG BEACH

Mayor Cary Glickstein, is that the city has been lax in enforcing its no-dogs-on-the-beach policy, a responsibility that currently falls on the shoulders of police officers.

"We all look silly not enforcing our laws," the mayor said. "We also look silly having sworn police officers doing the dog patrol. The solution is educating volunteers and park rangers who may be given authority to write citations."

While attorneys are investigating the possibility of changing city ordinances to allow those other than police and code enforcement officers to write civil citations, the police department has already begun implementing a plan to keep dogs off the beach.

This month, according to a memo Police Chief Jeff Goldman wrote to Glickstein, the police department will begin an educational campaign with fliers, social media and traditional media designed to remind dog owners of the law.

Beginning in July, violators of the city ordinance will receive a written warning for a first offense and a citation for a second offense. The city's code enforcement department will assist police on the enforcement side.

Minimal enforcement

According to the police department, there has been little enforcement of the city ordinance by the department up to now.

Friends of Delray Dog Beach held a demonstration May 7 in hopes of raising awareness and gaining approval for dogs to be permitted on part of the public beach. The demonstrators gathered in front of the city's beachside pavilion. Among the signs: 'Surfers, paddleboards, volleyball, sunbathers ... Everyone can use our beach but dog owners.' Tim Stepien/The Coastal Star

Through the first four months of this year, no citations were written for dogs on the beach, according to police department records. In all of 2015 there were only nine citations issued. Police issued 30 citations for dogs on the beach in 2014 and 43 in 2013.

Of all the 82 citations written since 2013, about half were written to individuals with Delray Beach addresses. Four were written to out-of-state residents and the remainder were to South Florida residents living outside of the Delray Beach area.

Many residents who spoke during May's commission meeting cited the lack of enforcement as a problem.

"It's despicable the number of people who disregard the ordinance," said resident Steve Blum.

Several residents spoke about health concerns associated with dogs on the beach, reporting that not all owners clean up after their pets.

Others said that unleashed dogs have approached them when they were walking on the beach, leading to safety concerns.

"There are always dogs on the beach," said resident Alan Schwartz, who added that additional enforcement could lead to more revenue for the city.

Some, however, including Vice Mayor Al Jacquet and Commissioner Mitch Katz, said that creating a dog beach could actually help reduce the problem.

"It seems we have a problem enforcing the laws we have on the books," Jacquet said. "People are already having dogs on the beach. Let's put it all in one area where we can regulate it."

At the same time, however, Jacquet agreed with Commissioner Jordana Jarjura that the city is facing more pressing financial issues that need to be addressed.

Citing health and safety reasons as well as other priorities facing the city, Jarjura, Glickstein and Commissioner Shelly Petrolia said they were not in favor of creating a dog beach.

Proponents of the proposal noted that dog beaches work in many other communities, including Boca Raton. However, Glickstein and several others pointed out that those beaches are larger and configured differently than Delray's public beach.

"Boca's beach is twice the size of Delray's beach," he said. "Fort Lauderdale's beach is four times the size."

Delray Beach resident Harvey Starin, who represented the 1,000-member Friends of Delray Dog Beach, said he does not believe increased enforcement will work.

"It will make people really angry," he said. "It's going to force people to go to Boca or Jupiter."

"Other people will grin and bear it and be disappointed in City Hall." ★

Lantana

New playground gear for beach, rec center

By Mary Thurwachter

The Town Council turned its focus toward kids at its May 23 meeting, giving thumbs-up to a proposal to bring new playground equipment to Lantana Municipal Beach and to the town's recreation center.

The equipment for the beach replaces an old rusted-out set that had to be removed last year for safety reasons, said Town Manager Deborah Manzo. The two sets for the recreation center are designed for children ages 2-5 and 5-12.

The equipment will cost $32,676 for the beach and $59,999 for the recreation center.

"There is one set at the beach now," Manzo said. "A second set there had to be removed. But there's nothing at the recreation center now." All of the equipment was included in the town's 2015-2016 budget.

Other spending approved at the meeting included $32,690 for a new police car to replace a 2005 Ford Taurus, totaled during a crash in October.

The town's biggest purchase of the evening was $405,284 for electrical upgrades to four of the town's lift stations.

"This is one of those necessary things that has to be done," said Mayor Dave Stewart. "The lift stations keep sewage from backing up in your house." ★

Ocean One plan wins OK needed for city review

By Jane Smith

Boynton Beach city staff can begin reviewing plans for the Ocean One project after its Community Redevelopment Agency board gave the executive director approval in mid-May to sign off on needed land for the eight-story apartment complex.

"They submitted an application to the city (in early March), but it could not be processed without a signature for the CRA land," said Vivian Brooks, CRA executive director. "It's been sitting on the shelf, not being reviewed."

The agency owns .47 acres that investor Davis Camalier wants to combine with land he owns to create a 1.98-acre parcel to build the horseshoe-shaped apartment project at the southeast corner of Boynton Beach Boulevard and Federal Highway.

His land use attorney, Bonnie Miskel, wrote to the CRA in early March that land costs to assemble the property were higher than realized. Camalier is requesting the CRA piece at the nominal price of $10, Miskel wrote. A Dec. 30 appraisal valued that land at $460,000, below the county property appraiser's 2015 market value of $532,716.

The CRA advertised the land. When no one offered to buy it within 30 days, the property was designated to go to Camalier's group.

Ocean One plans to have 237 apartments, varying in size from 560-square-foot studios to 1,600-square-foot, two-bedroom, two-bath units. The most common configuration — one-bedroom, one-bath units with a den — has 875 square feet. Ocean One has 50 of these spread among all floors.

A six-story parking garage behind the building will have space for 311 vehicles, including 36 guest parking spaces, and another six spaces will be on the street. Boynton Beach code requires 391 parking spaces for the 237 apartments.

A separate parking study to justify the reduction was submitted in early March, said Bill Morris, development partner in Ocean One. The study is based on the Worthing Place project in Delray Beach. Morris, a developer on that project, says it has similar parking needs to Ocean One.

The delay in reviewing the plans won't hamper Ocean One's schedule, Morris said. The developer still hopes to break ground in October; construction will take about 18 months, with tenants moving in April 2018.

At the Boynton Beach City Commission meeting on May 3, the CRA board was added to an ordinance that allows its advisory board to review the CRA agenda and anything else the commission wants the advisory board to do. The commission set up the advisory board last fall to allow citizen input after two community members were ousted from the CRA board.

On May 4, advisory board member Brian Edwards resigned. In his memo to the City Commission, which sits as the CRA board, Edwards called the advisory board "a waste of CRA staff time and only a Band-Aid for citizens who want input." The CRA staff prepares the CRA agenda a week earlier so that the advisory board can review it the Thursday before the CRA board meeting. ★

Keep your guard up for hurricane season

As we head into the 2016 hurricane season, it's not too early to make preparations ... just in case. Southeast Florida has not experienced the effects of a serious tropical weather system in over 10 years, and some reminders may be in order.

Preparations

Most preparations fit into three categories: people, pets, and property. A few suggested preparations and items to keep on hand include:

People

- Bottled water, nonperishable food
- Prescriptions and personal hygiene supplies
- First-aid kit
- Cash
- Personal identification, insurance cards
- List of medications, doctors, emergency contacts, family
- Flashlights, batteries, solar/battery lights
- Identify shelter in case an evacuation order is issued.
- Know your evacuation route and destination.

Pets

- Bottled water, nonperishable food
- Medication
- Waste bags, cat litter
- Leashes, carriers, crates

 - Identify shelter or boarding facility in case of evacuation.
- #### Property
- Important documents, irreplaceable items
 - Cellphones, tablets, laptops, chargers
 - Back up computer records to flash drive, external hard drive, the "cloud."
 - Inspect, test, repair shutters.
 - Inspect and test generator.
 - Home and auto insurance policies, contact information

Storm definitions

Understanding the difference between National Weather Service watches and warnings is critical to being prepared for any dangerous weather hazard, including hurricanes.

A watch lets you know that weather conditions are favorable for a hazard to occur. It literally means "be on guard!" During a weather watch, gather awareness of the specific threat and prepare for action — monitor the weather to find out if severe weather conditions have deteriorated and discuss your protective action plans with your family.

A warning requires immediate action. This means a weather hazard is imminent — it is either occurring (a tornado has been spotted, for example) — or it is about to occur at any moment. During a weather warning, it is important to take action: Grab the emergency kit you have prepared in advance and head to safety immediately. Both watches and warnings are important, but warnings are more urgent.

Cellphones the latest threat to turtle nesting

By Steve Plunkett

State wildlife officials are calling cellphones the "new 21st century hazard" to nesting sea turtles and reminding people not to take photos with their phones. Someone snapping a flash photo with the handy device could frighten or disorient a mother turtle and send her back to the ocean without laying eggs.

Meghan Koperski, an environmental specialist with the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission, said wildlife officers used to worry about people carrying a camera, flashlight or fishing lantern when looking for sea turtles. Smartphones changed that.

"All these things are rolled into one, in something simple that fits in your pocket," Koperski said.

Fish and Wildlife staff and law enforcement officers encountered people on the beach with cellphones during nesting season last year, and the commission also received email complaints. But more troubling was the growing number of pictures posted on Instagram, Facebook and other social media sites, Koperski said. "The whole point of having the experience is not to document it, it's to experience it," she said.

The news media have also been asked not to take photos, said Dr. Kirt Rusenko, who manages Boca Raton's sea turtle conservation and research program at Gumbo Limbo Nature Center. The FWC wants people who simply must have a photo to use one the agency already has online, at www.flickr.com/photos/myfwcmedia.

Even a smartphone's lighted screen could disrupt egg-laying and, later on in the season, disorient hatchlings trying to find the ocean.

"Any sort of interruption of that process could be considered a violation of the Endangered Species Act," Koperski said.

Transient light sources may also violate local ordinances, she said. In 1986 Boca Raton became one of the first municipalities to enact a lighting ordinance to protect turtles.

People who must have a light should use a red LED flashlight, the FWC says. Such lights give off a very narrow portion of the visible light spectrum and are less intrusive to nesting turtles and hatchlings.

Nesting season started March 1 and runs through Oct. 31. As of Memorial Day weekend, Boca Raton had recorded 11 leatherback turtle nests and 170 loggerhead nests.

Gumbo Limbo has spots available for its turtle walk and hatchling release program. See www.gumbolimbo.org/Walk-Release. ★

Gulf Stream

Utilities project gets new head of steam

By Dan Moffett

A surge of fresh optimism is running through the Gulf Stream underground power project, after town officials have claimed a series of hard-fought gains in recent weeks.

Mayor Scott Morgan says Comcast and AT&T are completing the finishing touches on the project's first phase, and the town has hired a special counsel to negotiate with Florida Power & Light and the other utilities for the second phase.

Morgan said it took "a number of emails and letters with demands and/or veiled threats" to prod Comcast and AT&T into action, as the town reaches the sixth anniversary of the project's inception.

Commissioners have signed off on a contract with Wilco Electric that will cut the projected cost overrun by about half going forward, and Town Manager William Thrasher says there's enough money in the town's coffers to cover the roughly $510,000 in extra spending.

"No additional assessments will be asked for," Thrasher said.

Danny Brannon, the town's engineering consultant, was able to squeeze some $440,000 in savings out of the second phase, largely from redesigning conduit and connections. Morgan says that Comcast plans to install fiber optic cable in the second phase instead of coaxial, a change that should lower costs and improve performance.

At the town's May 13 meeting, commissioners unanimously approved a basket of measures and agreements for the second phase:

- A change order that reduces the Wilco contract from about $2.9 million to $2.4 million.
- A separate $460,000 contract with Wilco for new, energy-efficient street lighting.

- A change order for Comcast to make the switch from coaxial cable to fiber optic. And a $25,000 payment to AT&T for engineering and design work.

- An endorsement of Morgan's role in leading the negotiations and also the hiring of Gary Resnick as special counsel for the project.

Resnick, an attorney with Gray Robinson law firm in Fort Lauderdale, has served as mayor of Wilton Manors since 2008. Besides experience in utility negotiations, Resnick also has served on the Federal Communication Commission's intergovernmental advisory committee, a group of local officials that advises the government on communications policy. He also has held a seat on the National League of Cities' information technology steering committee.

"Mr. Resnick is an expert in public utilities law," Morgan said. "He has quite a bit of experience."

In other business, the Florida League of Cities honored Commissioner Joan Orthwein for her 21 years as an elected official and Vice Mayor Robert Ganger and Thrasher with "Home Rule Hero" awards.

Orthwein won election to the commission in 1995 and served as mayor from 2012 to 2014. She is the second-longest serving elected official in Palm Beach County, behind Cloud Lake Mayor Patrick Slatery, who has held his seat for 38 years.

Ganger and Thrasher were honored for their efforts in trying to persuade the Legislature to do more to protect small communities from abuses of the state's public records laws.

In April, the Government Finance Officers Association recognized the commission and accountant Rebecca Tew for their budget work. ★

10 Questions

MEET YOUR NEIGHBOR: George Kelvin

It is the wall in George Kelvin's Highland Beach home office that provides the best glimpse into the passion and creativity that drove him for more than 40 years and led him to earn an international reputation as a science and medical illustrator.

That wall of the home he shares with his wife, Deanna, is filled with a wide range of framed pieces, ranging from a view of Saturn and its rings to the first-ever illustration of what the AIDS virus looks like.

Though diverse in nature, they share a common denominator: All are the hand-drawn works of Kelvin, who for more than four decades was a go-to illustrator for magazines such as Scientific American, Fortune, Science Digest and Hospital Practice, as well as many other publications. He also illustrated dozens of textbooks, some that are still in use today.

"I always enjoyed the challenge of solving problems," says Kelvin, 88. "That's what I do, I'm a problem solver."

He recalls the words of a senior editor at Scientific American who once told an art director: "Give the assignment to George, he doesn't know it can't be done."

Having moved to South Florida 18 years ago from Long Island, where he had a full studio in his attic, Kelvin recently took on a new challenge and came up with an idea that reflects his artistic touch.

With the blessing of town commissioners, Kelvin created a flag for Highland Beach that recognizes veterans and their contributions to the country as a whole.

The flag, which reads "Highland Beach Salutes our Veterans" and is red, white and blue with a depiction of the national seal, is displayed prominently in Town Hall in the commission chambers.

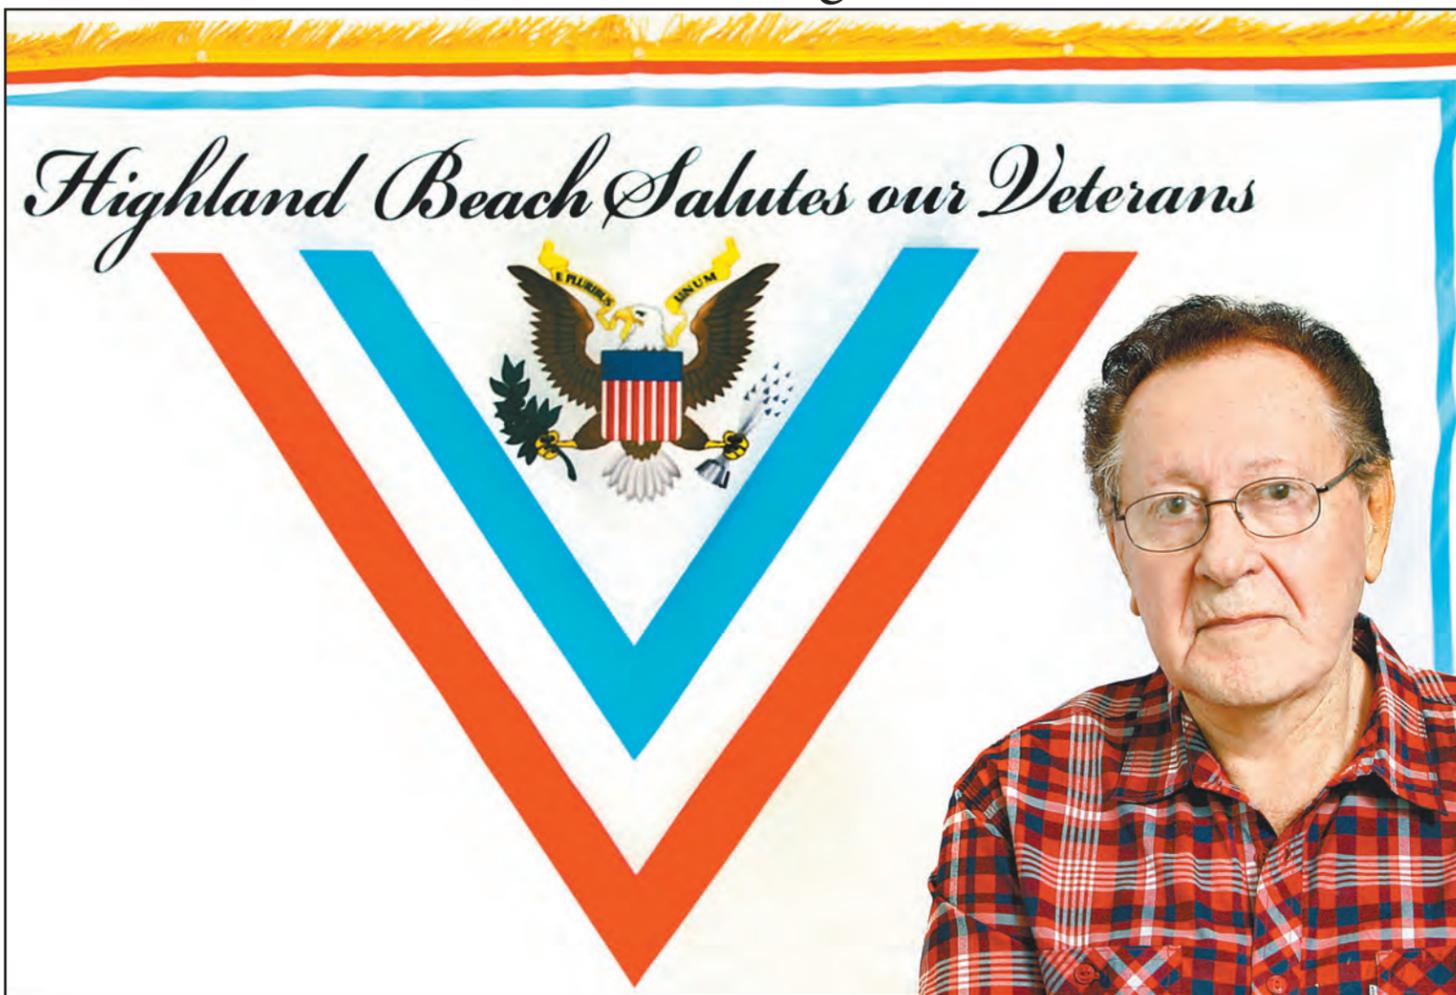

"This is my way of recognizing the value and sacrifices of our veterans," says Kelvin, a veteran himself drafted in 1945 at the tail end of WWII.

The idea for the flag came to him last year on Veterans Day when Kelvin drove past Highland Beach Town Hall and noticed the American flag and a flag honoring prisoners of war and troops missing in action in Vietnam.

"There was no flag representing veterans as a whole," he said. "It got me thinking and I decided I would design a flag."

Now working on a computer, instead of with pencil and airbrush, Kelvin created the flag, which he later presented to town leaders.

"I felt that as a community, it's important for us to recognize the sacrifices of veterans every day, not just on holidays," said Kelvin, who donated his time and expertise to the project.

World War II veteran George Kelvin designed this flag for the Town Hall in Highland Beach. Tim Stepien/The Coastal Star

It was his military service, Kelvin says, that helped him decide to make a career out of his artistic ability. While in the U.S. Army, he was asked by the division newspaper to do a few cartoon drawings and illustrations.

"That's when I got serious about art," he said.

After leaving the service, and armed with the GI Bill, Kelvin honed his skills while at the Pratt Institute in Brooklyn, not far from his home.

His first assignment after graduation was illustrating training manuals for the U.S. Navy. Eventually, he launched a freelance business and landed a job with Time Life, which was doing a series on science and the Earth.

From there, his reputation grew and Kelvin became sought after by art directors and authors alike.

Kelvin is an author himself, having a written a book, Illustrating for Science. He is also the creator of several fine art pieces, including abstracts using a variety of media.

Still, it was his work with scientists and doctors that helped him get up every morning with a smile, ready to work on illustrations.

"For me, it was like going to college every day of my career," he said, adding that he was always learning.

— Rich Pollack

Q. Where did you grow up and go to school? How do you think that has influenced you?

A. I grew up in Brooklyn. I went to Pratt Institute and studied art.

Q. What professions have you worked in? What professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

A. I became a scientific and medical illustrator. I worked with Dr. James Watson, the discoverer of the double helix, and illustrated his book. I'm proud of having worked with Dr. Robert Gallo. I did the first illustration of the AIDS virus for Scientific American magazine. I have illustrated many college textbooks — biology, astronomy, physics and chemistry. Helping to explain complex ideas and make them understandable is very rewarding.

Q. What advice do you have for a young person selecting a career today?

A. Pursue something you love and make it your life's work.

Q. How did you choose to make your home in Highland Beach?

A. We had friends who lived here and loved it.

Q. What is your favorite part about living in Highland Beach?

A. We have the most beautiful main street in America. I have gotten to know our mayor and commissioners on a first-name basis.

Q. What music do you listen to when you need inspiration, when you want to relax?

A. Broadway show tunes.

Q. Do you have a favorite quote that inspires your decisions?

A. "Nothing in the world can take the place of persistence. Talent will not; nothing is more common than unsuccessful men with talent. Genius will not; unrewarded genius is almost a proverb. Education will not; the world is full of educated derelicts. Persistence and determination alone are omnipotent." — Calvin Coolidge

Q. Have you had mentors in your life? Individuals who have inspired your life decisions?

A. I had an anatomy professor in Pratt, Hoshrov Ajoonian. He held up a scapula bone and said "Ain't nature grand?" There's no debating that.

Q. Who/what makes you laugh?

A. Seinfeld, Jackie Mason and the Three Stooges.

Q. If you could spend an hour with anyone throughout history, who would it be and why?

A. Leonardo da Vinci. He was pure genius, many years ahead of his time.

Marilyn David

By Ron Hayes

BRINY BREEZES — Marilyn David saw Briny Breezes for the first time from a 32-foot travel trailer in July 1946.

She became a permanent resident in 1953 and raised a son and three daughters here.

She was here on June 19, 1963, when her husband, Hugh, was sworn in as the newly incorporated town's first mayor. She was here through the 33 years he served as its only mayor, and after his death in February 1997, she stayed on in their home on Mallard Drive.

At 7:30 a.m. on May 19, she died there. She was 93.

"My parents were crazy about each other, and loved each other so much," her son, David David, said a day after her death. "They never argued in front of the children. If they had an argument, they went out for a walk and came back pacified."

Her career, her son said, was her family.

"My mother did all the raising of the kids, and we were raised on the beach in the summertime."

Up early, they'd hit the sand by 9 a.m. and spend the day.

"My mother taught us how to swim," he recalled. "She had two long black ponytails, and she would tow my sister and myself down the reefs all day long."

The future Marilyn David was born July 24, 1922, in St. Louis, Mo., and adopted by Milton and Eunice Bellis. On New Year's Eve 1940, she and her high school sweetheart, Hugh Edward David, eloped, but kept the marriage a secret from their parents for more than a year until she had graduated.

The Davids and their two small children, Judy and Diane, came to Briny Breezes in July 1946 because their St. Louis home had burned down.

"It was wintertime, and of course that's no time to build back in Missouri," Hugh David told The Palm Beach Post. "We got the idea of getting a trailer and going to a warmer climate."

His mother had friends in Delray Beach, "and they'd seen a trailer park on the ocean."

Once here, Marilyn David quickly settled in, and stayed.

"I wouldn't be happy in a home," she told The Post in a 1965 profile. By then, Judy had married and moved to Boynton Beach, but the Davids and their three youngest children were still sharing a two-bedroom mobile home.

"The girls have one bedroom, David the other and my husband and I the living room couch, which is easily converted into a bed," she explained without complaint.

"She was a very outgoing person, always willing to help with what we called the park back then," said Rita Taylor, the longtime Briny Breezes town clerk (now Gulf Stream's clerk) and a friend for nearly 50 years. "She was very loyal to Briny and the people there."

While her husband sold real estate with Dutch Realty in Boynton Beach, Mrs. David volunteered with the county health program, driving needy children to the dentist. But her first priority was her own children.

"She was an excellent cook, and every night it was something different. I wouldn't say she was strict, but when we got punished it was a hard punishment: Go play on the beach," David David said.

Her hobbies included snorkeling, skin diving, bike riding, shell collecting and sewing, he said.

"She made all her own clothes and never bought anything at the store," David David said. "And she sewed for everybody in the neighborhood. If somebody got a little plump and ripped their pants out, she'd fix them for her."

In addition to her son and his wife, Edith Behm, also of Briny Breezes, she is survived by her three daughters, Judy Wood of Boynton Beach; Diane Potter of Atlantis; and Denise Berg of San Diego; and four grandchildren.

The family plans a small private service in her home, followed by a larger memorial in the town's clubhouse during the season.

Donations in her memory may be made to Hospice of Palm Beach County.

GULF STREAM — If there's one thing Alice Dye wants people to know about her brother, Perry Holliday O'Neal, it was that he had a deep sense of caring for his fellow man.

"He was in the Trust Department at the bank, so he always took care of people, got them whatever it was that they needed," said Dye, who along with husband, Pete, form one of the best-known golf design tandems in the world.

"Whether it was something significant or even something as simple as a pair of slippers, he would take care of it.

"I've received more than 50 letters from people whose lives he helped and encouraged, who helped them through many, many crises in their lives. Most people didn't realize how wonderful he was to so many. He was a loving gentleman at all times."

Mr. O'Neal, a resident of Gulf Stream since 1980, died May 14. He was 86.

Perry Holliday O'Neal

Mr. O'Neal was graduated from Yale University in 1952 and from the University of Virginia Law School in 1957. After a two-year stint in the Army he began his banking career at Indiana National Bank (now Chase) in Indianapolis and served as executive vice president and trust officer until his retirement in 1980.

Mr. O'Neal always enjoyed being close to family, which brought him to Gulf Stream long after Alice and Pete had moved to South Florida in 1959. He also enjoyed his summers at the family vacation home in Lake Maxinkuckee in northern Indiana.

"He would play tennis there, but sailing was his favorite thing," Alice Dye said. "He would compete in all kinds of sailing races and really loved boats: motorboats, sailboats, whatever. He would spend as much time on the water as he could.

"Even though he enjoyed that, competition was not his favorite thing. He liked to participate but winning was not his primary goal."

While both Pete and Alice Dye have both been champion golfers, Alice's brother more or less dabbled at the sport.

"He had a yearly game with us at Christmas," Alice said. "He had a lovely swing, and could play nicely, but he really had no interest beyond that."

He was, however, extremely active in civic organizations throughout his life. He was an active member of the Maxinkuckee Yacht Club and Maxinkuckee Country Club and was also a founding member of the Indianapolis Racquet Club.

His caring nature also led to involvement with the Fairbanks Alcohol and Drug Treatment Center, also in Indianapolis, which helps individuals and families in their battles with those addictions. He continued those efforts in South Florida with Wayside House, which helps women struggling with substance abuse.

Above all, Dye said, it was Mr. O'Neal's caring nature that she will remember best.

"Not long ago he said to me, 'If anything goes wrong I want you to know you've been a wonderful sister.' That's the way he was with people. He was a loving gentleman."

Heather Turner Frazer

By Mary Thurwachter

OCEAN RIDGE — At Florida Atlantic University, where Heather Turner Frazer taught for 35 years, she was known as the history department's moral compass — the woman who always knew the right thing to do and how to do it. Even 10 years after she retired in 2006, her colleagues, when faced with difficult decisions, frequently asked themselves, "What would Heather do?" They even had "WWHD" T-shirts made in her honor when she retired.

Mrs. Frazer was the only woman in FAU's history department for 17 years and took it upon herself to mentor every woman who joined the department after her. The first was Sandy Norman, who arrived in 1988.

"She was my mentor and my best friend," said Norman, who was with Mrs. Frazer, 75, when she died at her Ocean Ridge home on May 15 after a long battle with breast cancer.

"We traveled together. We researched together, and I am the godmother to her third child. She and her husband practically adopted me. I've been a close member of the family for 28 years."

Norman said her friend loved laughter. "She was this 5-foot-2 woman with twinkly blue eyes that could turn stone gray in a heartbeat, although that didn't happen often. She had a way of getting her way. If she went into a meeting and there was a jerk in the room, by the time the meeting was over she would have him agreeing with her. Heather made everybody a better person."

Mrs. Frazer, who also had a home in Northeast Harbor, Maine, was born on Nov. 25, 1940, in Honolulu.

Her parents were James Sinclair Turner and Virginia Heathcote Turner. Her father was in Hawaii to work on installations at Pearl Harbor for his father's firm, Turner Construction Co. When Pearl Harbor was attacked, she was building sand castles on the beach in northern Oahu.

When her father joined the Marine Corps in 1943, the family moved back to Massachusetts, where Mrs. Frazer graduated from the Cambridge School of Weston and Connecticut College before receiving an MA and Ph.D. in South Asian history from Duke University.

In an obituary Mrs. Frazer wrote herself, she said that her "early exposure to a significant historical event influenced my decision to become a history professor."

After Duke, she spent three years in England, where she had two children and completed research for her doctoral dissertation. She had her third child after moving to Florida to take a job in the history department at FAU. She was one of the founders of the women's studies program at FAU.

Her research and publications were about India, women's history and oral history. But she took the greatest pleasure, she wrote, in "teaching and trying to inspire a love of learning in my students."

Besides teaching, Mrs. Frazer was on the boards of Gulf Stream School, Old School Square in Delray Beach, the Ocean Club of Florida and the vestry of St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Delray Beach. She was a trustee of the Northeast Harbor Library, a member and president of The Garden Club of Mount Desert, and a vestry member of the Parish of St. Mary and St. Jude on Mount Desert Island, Maine.

"She never said no to giving back," Norman said.

Mrs. Frazer enjoyed traveling and being with her extended family, especially her grandchildren.

She was married for 12 years to Patrick Coughlan. They had three children — Kimberly Gilmour, Devon Coughlan and Carter Coughlan. After their divorce, she was married for 32 years to Persifor "Perky" Frazer, who died in 2008.

Besides her children and their spouses, Mrs. Frazer is survived by five stepchildren, Persifor "Pokey," David, Randal, Lucius and Sloan, as well as their spouses, six grandchildren, 12 stepgrandchildren, her brother, Jeffrey H. Turner, and her sister, Lisa Phillips Turner.

On the day she died, Mrs. Frazer, an avid Boston Red Sox fan, was listening to a baseball game on an iPhone with Norman. She died right after Xander Bogaerts hit a three-run homer, Norman said. "I think she rode that baseball right out of Fenway Park."

A memorial service was held at St. Paul's Episcopal Church on May 23.

In lieu of flowers, contributions may be made to Gulf Stream School, St. Paul's Episcopal Church, the scholarship committee of the Northeast Harbor Library or the Parish of St. Mary and St. Jude in Northeast Harbor, Maine.

Rod & Gun Club members find Run for Roses a great reason to party

By Ron Hayes

On the evening of Saturday, May 7, while the jockeys at Churchill Downs prepared for the 142nd Run for the Roses, Jane Souaid ran around her Gulf Stream home, preparing for her third annual Kentucky Derby Party & Spring Fling.

Out on the patio, caterers readied a lavish spread of hors d'oeuvres and drinks by the pool. In the kitchen, chef Michael Suchlicki tended roast turkey and tenderloin. In the corner, a big chocolate cake layered with strawberries waited, celebrating in frosted script the Run for the Roses 142, beneath a crossed hunting rifle and fishing rod, logo of the Rod & Gun Club of Florida.

An hour later, about 80 club members and guests filled Souaid's home and patio, chattering clusters of khaki slacks and floral hats, while four strategically placed televisions broadcast the countdown to post time.

"I like the club because it's very family-oriented," Souaid said in a rare spare moment. "And there's an emphasis on safety. I've hosted a CPR class here, and we support boating safety and concealed carry training classes. I grew up military and we support education, not fear."

In 2013, Souaid's husband, Bob, was among the 10 men who joined Steve Jara at the Tryst restaurant in Delray Beach to organize what became the Rod & Gun Club of Florida.

"I grew up here and used to hunt down where the Boca Raton Country Club is now, across from Costco," says Jara, 52, a senior vice president with Golden Bear Realty and the club's founder. "My idea was to have sportsmen come together and enjoy the outdoors and social functions with like-minded individuals."

The club is a private, nonprofit entity and potential members must be sponsored by a member, have a co-sponsor and then be approved by the membership committee. Jara declined to reveal the membership fee or annual dues, but an added benefit for members is the partnership program, which offers discounts at hunting and fishing resorts such as Chiggerchaw Lodge in Lake Burton, Ga., where several spent an April weekend trout fishing.

Today, the club boasts about 70 members, and while they are indeed "like-minded," they are hardly all alike. Some hunt, some fish, and some do both. Some shoot birds that live and breathe, some shoot only clay pigeons. Some catch fish and mount them, and some just toss them back. Some kill animals, and some can't bear to.

"I fish," Souaid said. Her biggest catch was a 5-foot, 6-inch, 58-pound bull dolphin off the Bahamas. "It took me 43 minutes to reel it in. I go clay shooting, but I don't have the heart to hunt."

On the other hand, founding member Hop Kennemer of Delray Beach has a ready retort.

"You gotta eat!" he reasons. "I hunt birds primarily — duck, dove, quail, turkey, pheasant. I like to eat the things I hunt. I don't kill animals just to kill them."

Whatever the fishing and/or hunting passions, the club members' common denominator seems to be socializing. "Once a member is approved, the entire family is the member," Jara emphasizes. Both spouses and children are welcome to join the club's activities, which include a sailfish tournament every January, a fall sporting class tournament at Quail Creek Plantation in Okeechobee and a Christmas party.

At the Souaids' Kentucky Derby party, members were encouraged to bring guests and potential members, which is how Dr. John Westine, a Delray Beach plastic surgeon, happened to be there. An avid fisherman, Westine was eager to share his iPhone photos from a trip to the Pacific coast of Guatemala, where he and fellow sportsmen caught 230 blue marlin, striped marlin, sailfish, etc., etc. And let them go.

"You want it to be a sustainable sport," he explained. "If guys kept purging the sea, it wouldn't be sustainable. So it's the thrill of the hunt. It's going out there and not knowing what you'll find — communing with friends, the smell of the air, the undulating motion of the boat, the sunrise as you head out to the fishing grounds dreaming of that marlin you're going to catch — and let go."

"I'm not a hunter," he said. "I don't want to shoot anything and watch it suffer." He smiled.

"But we did eat about 30 mahi-mahi."

At post time, the partiers gathered before the Souaids' four TVs, drinks in hand, to watch jockey Mario Gutierrez ride Nyquist to race "the fastest two minutes in sports" faster than the other thoroughbreds. Some cheered, some sighed. If any casual wagers had been made, losses and winnings were paid and collected. A line formed for turkey and tenderloin, drinks were refreshed.

The Run for the Roses had been run, the Run for the Roses cake was served, and the Rod & Gun Club's members and guests went on socializing.

Record sale in the making in Highland Beach

It's already a show-stopper, but when it sells, it will be a record breaker. This 23,625-total-square-foot Highland Beach French-inspired eight-bedroom estate at 2455 S. Ocean Blvd., is offered by Ocean Estate Properties agent Beverly Knight, for $31.9 million.

Designed by Madey Architects New York and built by Mark Timothy Luxury Homes, with interiors by Marc Michaels, it's in the Byrd Beach estate section on almost 2 acres with 150 feet of beachfront. Features include a club room and bar, epicurean's kitchen, two-story library den, wine room, stone fireplaces, gym, guest house, caretaker's cottage and high-tech theater.

According to public records, Bruce Leeds bought the property for $5.8 million in 2011 from the Henry D. Martin Trust, Safford Denise V Trustee and Victoria J. Martin Trust. Leeds is a vice chairman of Systemax.

The highest sale for Highland Beach to date was $16.53 million for 3901 S. Ocean Blvd., which sold this year. Previously, the highest sale was $15.3 million in 2003 for 2445 S. Ocean Blvd.

Frank McKinney's "green" mansion, Acqua Liana, 620 S. Ocean Blvd., Manalapan, is back on the market for $26.5 million, listed by Cristina Condon, an agent with Sotheby's International Realty. Condon said the owners have many vacation homes and aren't spending enough time here to keep it.

Marny Glasser, chairwoman of Florida Atlantic University's Dorothy F. Schmidt College of Arts and Letters Advisory Board, recently was awarded the University's Board of Trustees Service Award.

After donating her late husband, Harold Glasser's, World War II collection to the university's Wimberly Library, she established the Harold Glasser Endowment Fund, which she continues to enhance annually.

In 2013, she helped form the Dorothy F. Schmidt College of Arts and Letters Advisory Board, and last year she donated one of her sculptures, Moon Escape, to the university. Through her leadership, the board has raised more than $340,000 in support of programs.

classrooms and labs for students up to third grade.

The two buildings on site will be demolished over the summer, with construction scheduled during the 2016-17 school year.

In recent years, the school raised $17 million to upgrade its two campuses. In Phase 1, it acquired land for the West Palm Beach campus, improved its Palm Beach campus and built its Smith Family Theater and Matthews Performing Arts Center.

In April, Harbour's Edge, a senior living community at 401 E. Linton Blvd. in Delray Beach, celebrated the opening of its three new dining venues: a casual eatery, a formal steakhouse and grill, and a private dining room. These were part of a $20 million project, with the final renovation phase, featuring a media center, library and performing arts center, to be completed later this year.

CC Hodgson Architectural Group is the designer for the project and Plaza Construction is the contractor.

In May, Artis Senior Living celebrated its grand opening. The memory care community is at 5910 N. Federal Highway, Boca Raton.

Tanya Abreu, founder of WOW Health Group, has created a new women's health concierge service at 1682 N. Federal Highway, Boca Raton, headed by Dr. Immacula Michel, in conjunction with the WOW Arts Warehouse, which serves as an exercise, dance, music and event community center.

Coming up at an introductory evening at the WOW community center, guests are invited to stretch their physical and mental boundaries with yoga teacher Marilyn DeMartini, at "In Your Dreams Yoga" to live piano music by Niki Parker at 6:30 p.m. on June 7. At a wine-and-cheese reception following the class, Dr. Joel Klass will present insights on how to learn from dreams.

In April, Feeding South Florida, a regional domestic hunger-relief organization that has a new warehouse in east Boynton Beach, was awarded the Nonprofit Business of the Year distinction by South Florida Business Journal for its innovative practices, diversity initiatives, community service, employee programs, workplace environment and strong financial performance.

Through a local network of nonprofit partner agencies, Feeding South Florida distributes almost 40 million pounds of food annually, serving 785,040 individuals throughout Palm Beach, Broward, Miami-Dade and Monroe counties.

In April, Boynton Beach resident Tina Philips, president and CEO of the Palm Beach

Habilitation Center, received The Commonwealth Institute's Top 10 Women-Led Businesses in Florida Award in the not-for-profit category for the third year in a row. Philips' center provides employment, job placement, residential and retirement services to men and women with mental, emotional and physical disabilities.

Clinics Can Help, which seeks donations of medical equipment and supplies, is looking for used wheelchairs. It provided $820,000 in reusable medical supplies and equipment last year, said Owen O'Neill, the nonprofit's executive director and founder.

"Thanks to generous donations of equipment and funds, we are able to provide hundreds of wheelchairs to children and adults who are in critical need every year. However, the demand is growing."

To donate, call 640-2995 or visit www.clinicscanhelp.org.

In May, local nonprofit organizations raised more than $3 million during the third annual Great Give, sponsored by the Community Foundation for Palm Beach and Martin Counties and the United Way of Palm Beach County.

Of that amount, the Kretzer Piano Music Foundation received $3,200 in donations, which earlier gave a musical send-off to Great Give at a mini-concert. At that event, five talented young people played painted pianos at CityPlace, West Palm Beach. Boca Raton resident and artist Silvana Delbo painted one of pianos: "Melodic Liberation" for the Quantum House.

Daniel Brassloff, a senior at Atlantic High School in Delray Beach, Victor Espidol, a senior at Boynton Beach High School, and Melanie Camejo Coffigny, a senior at Lake Worth High School, were selected by the Palm Beach County Human Rights Council to receive this year's Daniel S. Hall Social Justice Award scholarships.

Brassloff, founder and president of We the People, an equality club, will be attending Babson College to study social entrepreneurship. Espidol, founder of the Boynton Beach High School Gay-Straight Alliance, will be attending the University of Florida to study biology. Coffigny, founder and president of her school's Gay-Straight Alliance, will be attending Duke University in the fall to study neuroscience.

In May, the National Endowment for the Arts approved an Art Works award of $10,000 to the Palm Beach Poetry Festival to support the organization's 13th annual festival, to be held next January

Father's Day

Next, sauce covers the top of the raw pizza dough for a pie.

A drizzle of olive oil finishes the pie, topped with basil and mozzarella, before it goes into the oven.

Eat, drink and make pizza in Delray Beach restaurant class

By Sallie James

The faint smell of burning oakwood wafted through the air at SoLita & Mastino as the setting sun streamed through the west windows in the busy downtown Pineapple Grove district in Delray Beach.

As students chatted and sipped wine at raised tables, waiters served up gourmet eggplant stacks. The murmur of lively conversation began to rise.

But not for long.

Enter Steven Dapuzzo, restaurateur and teacher for the night: It was time to talk tomatoes. Pizza 101 was in session, and every student was going to make a 12-inch Neapolitan pie.

"It's just something different, something that is engaging, to get people interacting," said Dapuzzo, who offers the two-hour interactive class from 6 to 8 p.m. on Tuesdays and Wednesdays at the eatery at 25 NE Second Ave., Delray Beach. "You have a drink, you have a little snack, you have a drink, we make some pizza and then you go home."

Cost for the class is $69 and includes a wine or beer and a 12-inch pizza you make yourself.

The pizza-making experience is fun, educational and a great way to get to know your tablemates. Participants get started with a white-bibbed apron, a 7-ounce ball of mastino dough and a lot of Father's Day. What to do? By comparison, Mother's Day is a piece of cake, or maybe croissants, eggs Benedict and Champagne at a special brunch at a beachfront hotel or along Atlantic Avenue, plus flowers and a nice card.

Dads, however, aren't big on mushy stuff. As long as they don't have to mow the lawn, most are content to just sit back and relax.

SaltWater Brewery co-founder Peter Agardy artfully pours some Screamin' Reels IPA.

Thom Smith/The Coastal Star

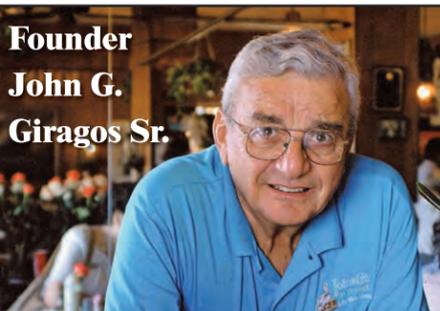

Sure, he could launch the boat, but if comfort is the order of the day, how about something simple, something primal, something like ... beer.

No, we're not talking get-up-from-the-sofa-and-walk-to-the-refrigerator kind of beer. No Bud, Coors or Miller Lite. Nope, Father's Day deserves something special, a day out to sample any of the magical, mystical concoctions brewed at one of the area's seven craft breweries.

They have lots of choices with perennial favorites, seasonal treats and frequent out-of-the-tank surprises. For the uninitiated, most offer tastings, such as Copperpoint's sample pour of four 5-ounce glasses for $7.

Jewel of a deal means county has fewer places to play (or watch) polo

Polo. Money. Land. Money. Florida. Money. No polo. Few relationships are more beautiful than man and horse racing as one across a manicured pasture in pursuit of that little white ball. Polo is a sport played mostly by rich men (and a few women), some of whom die on the field. Others lose their shirts.

Perhaps envy adds to the beauty: Games with horses are almost as costly as games involving horsepower. Schoolteachers and truck drivers could only dream — $15,000 for a so-so horse (and one is not enough); well over $1,000 a month for the stable; mallets $500. Figure $50,000 a year just for basic essentials.

But the real money is in the land, and its value ultimately seduces the men who own the fields. It's a story as old as Florida, first in Jacksonville early in the 20th century, then Orlando, Miami Beach, Gulf Stream, Boca Raton and now Lake Worth.

The Phipps family, synonymous with steel, real estate and eventually horses, owned a third of Palm Beach, 28 miles of oceanfront between Palm Beach and Fort Lauderdale and prime bayfront land in Miami. As early as 1922, the Phippses began buying land along newly opened A1A just north of Delray Beach in the town of Gulf Stream.

The scrub was cleared and Addison Mizner dreamed up a private club. Donald Ross designed the golf course. Three polo fields stretched along the Intracoastal. A tropical utopia for northern friends and business associates, it was named the Gulfstream Club.

The world's wealthiest men played there. Socialites, celebrities such as Cary Grant and Ava Gardner and hoi polloi cruised or motored from Palm Beach to watch the Sunday matches. Even as the nation recovered from the Depression and the war approached from East and West, a team from Gulfstream anchored by Ben and Michael Phipps — such upstarts! — stunned the polo world by winning the 1941 U.S.

Open.

Polo took a hiatus during the war as the club was converted to a military installation and the stables housed mounts for Coast Guard sentries on beach patrol.

The glamour and the game returned in 1946, but property values were skyrocketing. Down in Boca Raton in 1955, developer Arthur Vining Davis, as in Arvida, opened Royal Palm Polo just south of the Boca Raton Resort & Club, but those fields soon gave way to Royal Palm Yacht & Country Club, and Royal Palm Polo moved to Glades Road just west of Military Trail.

The Phippses decided to sell the polo property, so the Gulfstream players and team patrons looked instead to wide open spaces west of Lake Worth.

The new Gulfstream Polo opened in 1965 on 100 acres just beyond the turnpike. Private estates and stables filled another 450 acres on the periphery. Fewer professionals filled rosters. A few wealthy low- and medium-goal amateurs would fly in for weekend matches, but polo could be played on a budget and Gulfstream was more community than exclusive club.

The social whirl engulfed Royal Palm in Boca and Palm Beach Polo in Wellington. High-goal action and couture parties attracted such celebrities as Sylvester Stallone and Wilt Chamberlain (picture him on a horse) and royalty, such as Charles and Diana. Gulfstream cruised in its own little polo universe. Instead of champagne and caviar, Gulfstream players and grooms joined families at the clubhouse for burgers and beer.

But every chukker seemed to attract another speculator.

What'll it take? What'll it take to buy the largest undeveloped acreage between Boca and Jupiter? In 2006 Westbrooke Homes offered $66.5 million for 221 acres. But the market went flat, Westbrooke backed out and the 39 shareholders kept playing.

Still, it was only a matter of time. Reports circulated last fall that Pulte Homes was planning to build nearly 1,000 homes and townhomes on 225 acres. Cost: $49 million.

The deal closed a month ago and a grand opening is expected next spring.

The plus: If prices can hold in the $300,000 to $500,000 range, many potential buyers who have been squeezed out of the market will be able to afford homes. The minuses: The Browardization of western Palm Beach County and less polo.

Palm Beach County is home to more than 6,000 horses. In addition to polo, they are involved in trotting, thoroughbred racing, show jumping, dressage, barrel racing and recreational riding.

After 93 years, the club made its last stand April 15 with the championship match in the South Florida 4-Goal League, between Rancho Alegre and aptly named Custer Capital. Alegre three-goaler Omar Cepeda earned MVP honors, but Custer prevailed, 6-5. Ash, Cepeda's mount in the second chukker, was named best playing pony. But the awards ceremony was not without melancholy.

As George DuPont, executive director of the nearby Museum of Polo and Hall of Fame, said, "It was user-friendly. Nobody yelling 'Don't go here,' 'You can't sit there.' It was a fun place to be. The beauty of it was, the stables were right there. All you had to do was walk your horse to the field."

"Without Gulfstream, teams will have to load those horses in trailers and drive to a field miles away. We'll need some time to figure out what the overall effect will be."

But as the deal maker for the club owners, Brad Scherer, a 2-goal player, said, "This sale was the crown jewel."

The Delray restaurant scene continues to attract attention. Sundy House remains on the OpenTable website's "100 Best Brunch Restaurants in America" list, one of only three in Florida. More than 5 million diners submitted reviews for more than 20,000 U.S.

restaurants, looking for, among other offerings, "unforgettable French toast and spicy bloody marys."

Also returning to the list is the Oxford Exchange in Tampa (under $30) while a new addition is the Yardbird Southern Table & Bar in Miami Beach ($31-$50). Dropped from the list, however, was the Circle Room at The Breakers in Palm Beach.

A bit more informal is FloridaBeachBar.com's ranking of top beach bars. The site's criterion: proximity to the state's 852 miles of beaches. Boston's on the Beach is separated from the beach by A1A. But it does have its own "Sandbar" — no carpet, no tile, no floor, just sand — plus all the atmosphere necessary to make the website's top 10 list for the second year.

The top 10 is a popularity contest: The bars work hard to get out the vote. St. Pete barflies apparently vote early and often. The gulfside city claims 17 beach bars, the most in Florida, with Jimmy B's, Bongos and Harry's ranking Nos. 1, 2 and 4. Even though Key West and Fort Myers have 16 bars each, none made the top 10.

However, the website also has a program that rates the beach bars from 1 to 5 based on four criteria: proximity to the beach, food and drinks, live entertainment and beach bar factors such as parking, boat access, tiki huts, staff, friendly patrons and sunsets.

East Coast bars start with a disadvantage — no sunsets. Of the 28 top-rated bars, St. Pete claimed five — Jimmy B's, Bongos, Harry's, Rumrunners and Toasted Monkey. Only nine on the East Coast managed a 5, including JB's in Deerfield Beach, the closest to Boca. Boston's scored a 4, as did Old Key Lime House in Lantana and Guanabanas and Square Grouper in Jupiter. Scoring 3s: Banana Boat and Two Georges in Boynton, Benny's in Lake Worth and Deck 84 in Delray Beach.

If you can't stand the kitchen, head for the heat. Josie's Ristorante, right next to the Intracoastal bridge on Woolbright in Boynton, has cut all menus prices by 25 percent through September.

In Boca, Max's Grille will heat up with a Q & Brew summer menu from 5 to 10 p.m. every Wednesday with pulled pork, chicken, brisket and shrimp in a variety of configurations, endless craft beer for $15 with dinner purchase and live music by Weekend Therapy.

In Delray, Max's Harvest has added half-inch-thick bacon, pork bellies, Southern fried chicken, spiked teas and Indian street corn with naan bread, pickled lime and paneer, and every Thursday a 1½-pound lobster, salad and dessert for $35.

But the big news is the return of Chef vs. Chef, a 16-week competition to find the area's best chef. Pairings will be drawn June 15 at Max's Harvest in Delray. Eight chefs from last year's inaugural series will be joined by an equal number of new competitors.

Not in the competition is last year's winner, Jim Strine of Cafe Boulud, who edged Tryst's John Thomas.

"I wanted to give somebody else a chance," Strine said, "but I will be involved."

That involvement will be an ultimate showdown with this year's winner.

Returning chefs include Victor Franco (Oceans 234), Jarod Higgins (Cut 432), John Thomas (Tryst), Blake Malatesta (50 Ocean), Eric Grutka (Ian's Tropical Grille), Bruce Feingold (Dada), Aaron Goldberg (Bogart's) and Adam Brown (The Cooper).

New to the fry, er, fray, are Anthony Fiorini (13 American), Louie Bossi (Louie Bossi's),

The weekly competitions will be held at Max's Harvest "after hours" — 9:30 p.m. For a $10 donation, spectators receive a complimentary beer, glass of wine or cocktail. Proceeds benefit the Milagro Center.

Even if he sells two properties, entertainer Billy Joel still has a place here.

Hmmm. Let's see. What punny title can we hang on the latest news?

Movin' Out? You May Be Right? Don't Ask Me Why?

Regardless, Billy Joel is in a selling mood. In the spring of 2013, the piano man bought a home and adjacent vacant lot just north of Boynton Inlet for $19.3 million. He fixed up the place while reportedly attempting to buy the next estate to the south owned by former Manalapan Mayor William (Tom) Gerrard. That deal never worked out.

In early November, Joel put the two properties on the market for $29 million but found no buyers, so in April he cut the price for the package by $2 million. Agent Jack Elkins also has them listed as separate parcels — $19.5 million for the "single-family home," $9.5 million for the lot.

But Joel isn't packing up his keyboard and heading north, unless 1.2 miles up A1A is considered north. Because he also owns a little bungalow there — a fact that some real estate publications and gossip writers have missed.

In January 2015, he paid Donald Adam, a Texas banker, $22.1 million for the 18,886-square-foot Mediterranean style house built in 2004. The 1.6-acre lot was once part of the Vanderbilt estate. And it's on the ocean, not across the street.

Meanwhile, Billy's busy: Harrah's Ak-Chin (as in ak-shun) in Maricopa, Ariz., June 8, the Arizona Broadway Theatre in Peoria, June 13, his monthly show at Madison Square Garden, June 17, Newcastle upon Tyne in England, June 19, and three shows in Reykjavik, Iceland, in a schedule that carries him into March.

Where there's a will there's a way. In 2013, the Wick Theatre and Costume Museum opened in Boca, hoping to succeed where the Caldwell Theatre Company had failed. Marilynn Wick cut a deal with Legacy Bank, which held the mortgage, to rent the building with an option to buy.

Three years later, the foundation is a bit more stable because The Wick has bought the building, taking out a $5 million mortgage with Newell Small Finance. The challenges ahead include expanding and enhancing the building, upgrading sound and lighting systems, adding a partial fly loft and an orchestra pit beneath the stage and, of course, making the payments.

To do that, the theater has set several goals: a $5 million fundraising campaign ($100,000 already pledged), increase its subscriber base from 2,800 to 5,000, develop a children's theater and most important, begin producing touring shows.

For starters, how about The Unsinkable Molly Brown, with Marilynn Wick in the lead!

Elegant but never haughty, Cafe L'Europe in Palm Beach just celebrated its 36th anniversary. Owners Norbert and Lidia Goldner have brought back their summer three-course prix fixe menu for an un-Palm Beachy $49.50. Plus David Crohan on piano.

The new kid on the block in Palm Beach is Meat Market, an upscale steakhouse at 191 Bradley Place. Its history as a restaurant goes back 70 years to 1946, when Maurice's opened as "a bit of old Italy." The typical Italian menu — pasta and pizza — no doubt appealed to guests at the Biltmore Hotel across the street and students at Palm Beach High across the bridge.

Needless to say, the area has changed: The Biltmore is now a luxury condo and Palm Beach High is Dreyfoos School of the Arts. High-rises abound; the bridge was rebuilt.

The two-story stucco building, originally a Spanish-style house built in 1925, has gone through more rejuvenations than a Palm Beach dowager. It remained Maurice's until 1989 and for a brief period in the '80s and '90s was owned by Franklyn DeMarco, the master of Ta-boo on Worth Avenue.

Maurice's, which once featured strolling guitarists, begat Lulu's and noisy pop sounds, which begat Janeiro with Brazilian jazz, which begat Club Y — a nightclub once described as the "best place to meet single men who own yachts," which gave way to Palm Beach Steakhouse, until ... Meat Market.

Out are the stucco and low ceilings; in are rich leather, gleaming woods, slivers of mirrors and mammoth chandeliers hanging from vaulted ceilings. Lots of familiar faces — golf pros, TV and film stars, baseball players, race car drivers ... and occasionally, with friends, the tall guy (yes, Michael Jordan!), about 6-6, walking on air, who sits down and with a wide smile says, "Bring me a drink," although the staff does not know what he likes. He orders a steak and then directs attention to his smartphone in order to keep track of his bets.

Incidentally, unconfirmed reports identify that favorite drink as 8 ounces of Gatorade, a shot of Jack Daniels and four packs of Pop Rocks.

Just do it!

While in Palm Beach ... this may be the off-season, but the music never stops at The Colony Hotel's Royal Room. Members of the Young Broadway Stars Summer Residency Program will do Friday and Saturday shows for a minimum of two weeks.

Singer, musician, comedian, actor and composer Wayne Hosford plays June 3, 4, 10 and 11, followed by Birdland and Tanglewood favorite Spencer Day (June 17, 18, 24 and 25). Ariana Savalas (yes, one of those Savalases) takes over for all of July and Carole J. Bufford through Labor Day.

Bufford, a Georgia girl turned Manhattan cabaret sensation, has an unusual repertoire that runs from All Shook Up to Can't Help Lovin' Dat Man of Mine to Folsom Prison Blues.

Tying in with the shows, The Colony has launched "Music, Music, Music," a special two-night weekend stay including Motown Friday night dance party, Royal Room dinner and show, full English breakfast, free parking and Netflix — $650 per couple.

Across the bridge, the Norton is closed — but only for five weeks.

To prepare for the upcoming renovation and expansion that will continue into 2018, the museum has shut down in order to reconfigure so it can remain accessible to the public.

With the reopening, set for July 5, visitors will be provided free shuttle from the parking lot on South Dixie to the east entrance. And admission will be free until the expansion is complete.

Art After Dark, blending art, music, film and food, resumes July 7. Major exhibitions will include the biennial Rudin Prize for Emerging Photographers in October and the sixth annual Recognition of Art by Women next January.

Tender mercies at Pearl's

The Plate: Chicken tenders sandwich

The Place: Pearl's Next Generation, 618 Lantana Road, Lantana; 582-4366 or www.pearlshomecooking.com.

The Price: $8.49

The Skinny: My daddy had a soft spot for Pearl's. This Lantana mainstay has been in business for more than 50 years and had a personal touch he couldn't resist during many a breakfast at the counter.

It's now called Pearl's Next Generation after its founder, Pearl, retired and her children and grandchildren took over.

The day we stopped for lunch, a group of Red Hat

Society members was meeting and having a blast. Locals also were dropping in for a meal.

The company is good, but they wouldn't come were it not for the food.

This chicken tenders sandwich boasted hand-cut and breaded tenders that were fried until crispy and juicy. Pearl's Buffalo sauce lent the chicken a nice touch of fire.

The roll was perfectly toasted too — a treat when so many restaurants do not understand the depth that a toasted roll lends to a sandwich.

guidance. They learn how to stretch pizza dough and add toppings. Then they watch their own pie cook at more than 800 degrees in a wood-fired oven.

Coral Springs resident Doreen Diaferio and her boyfriend Frank Braile, self-described foodies, said the class was a perfect fit for them. Diaferio enrolled them in the class as a Christmas surprise.

"We make pizza at home and we wanted to experience a different type of making pizza. We make a Chicago-style pizza," said Braile, of Coral Springs, as he began to shape his crust on the flour-sprinkled table where he sat.

Dapuzzo regaled the crowd with stories about the history of pizza, the different types of pizza, and how the ingredients evolved. He explained what specific ingredients are used and why, where the ingredients are from, and demonstrated how to stretch pizza dough: Two fingers, up and down in a circular motion, then flip the dough and do the same on the other side. Hand-stretch the dough lightly. And never roll the dough out because it takes out all the air. Some of the details students learn:

- The dough is made from "00" flour, considered the finest stone-milled flour in the world, from Naples. It's fine and light like baking powder.

Irene Revelas of Delray Beach (foreground) and cookbook author Barbara Seelig-Brown of Highland Beach form dough for pizzas at SoLita & Mastino in Delray Beach. Sallie James/The Coastal Star

- The pizza dough is formed into 7-ounce balls and allowed to rise three times. Each rise makes the dough lighter.

- The marinara sauce is made from San Marzano tomatoes grown in the rich volcanic soil of Mount Vesuvius. The sauce was named "marinara" after the mariners' wives who originally made it.

- Other ingredients include organic basil, fresh mozzarella, extra virgin olive oil and sea salt.

- The pizzas are fired in a low-dome, wood-fired stove at 800 to 1,000 degrees. The oven cooks the pizzas in less than two minutes using convection on the top, radiant heat from the side, and baking from the bottom.

- The pizza crust bakes with black spots, called "leopard spotting," which give it a distinct taste.

Highland Beach resident Barbara Seelig-Brown, a cookbook author who writes for the Italian Trade Commission, loved the class.

"I thought they did a very nice job with it," she said. "It was very fun. There was a nice mix of die-hard cooking enthusiasts and people who just came to socialize."

West Palm Beach resident Amanda Rypkema, an event planner, attended the pizza-making class to see if it might work as a team-building activity. She left impressed.

"I love it. (Dapuzzo) was really easy to follow when he described what techniques to use," Rypkema said. "I would bring my family here when they are in town to do this, or a girls'

Anniversary bash highlights growing Lake Park arts district

By Bill Meredith
ArtsPaper Arts Writer

As anniversaries go, the one-year milestone reached by the Brewhouse Gallery in Lake Park in May of 2015 proved to be just an appetizer for the two-year bash held last month.

And that's despite the fact that the art gallery, live music emporium, and craft beer, wine and coffeehouse had just started its expanding food menu after taking over a former convenience store directly to its west side in 2015.

And despite that very room having just become home to the main bar, walk-in cooler, and most of the venue's table seating; the stage featuring banner performances by the Whiskey Wasps, Fireside Prophets, Speaking Volumes, and seven other performers, and the one-year celebration burgeoning to the point of spilling into the alley out back.

On May 14, the Brewhouse's two-year anniversary, with live sets by the likes of Deal James, Summer Gill, and Garrett Fog, was essentially the centerpiece to a comparative three-ring circus that ran from noon to midnight and featured 20 different acts on two different stages.

Several months ago, the defunct Mos'Art Theatre

Wayne Felber emcees the Kelsey Theater's second anniversary block party extravaganza from the stage of the Brewhouse Gallery in Lake Park on May 14. Photo by Jaime Kujala

(formerly the Kelsey Club), directly next door to the east, had been taken over by Brewhouse owner and gallery curator A.J. Brockman and his mother and business partner, Jo Brockman. The rechristened Kelsey Theater was celebrating its grand opening simultaneously, displaying a larger live music alternative to its intimate neighboring gallery. Fog's solo evening appearance at the Brewhouse had been preceded by an afternoon set by his pop band, The Inverted, at the Kelsey. As darkness fell, The Helmsmen ended a raucous run of originals with a cover of the Surfari's Wipe Out, leading to sets on the large stage by the melodic Sweet Bronco, the rootsy Gravel Kings, and theatrical closers Raggy Monster.

Yet for anyone who hadn't already heard, the Kelsey takeover had proven to be just the beginning of the Brockmans' master plan.

"The Brewhouse owners bought this entire plaza," said Wayne Felber, emcee of the venue's Thursday open mic night, two nights before the anniversary party. "So please come out on Saturday for our celebration. They have a lot of bills to pay."

With several additional storefronts accessible from both front doors and the back alleyway during the event, the date proved a loud and clear announcement of Lake Park's growing arts district. On the west end, the brand-new Kelsey Vintage Goods store was also bustling with patrons eager to see the unique collection of books, signs, toys, games, artwork and beyond offered by owners Jesse Furman and Michael Silberman. In between, the Ivy & Oak Tattoo Artist Studio and the Palm Beach School of Dance also celebrated grand openings.

"I'm ecstatic," Furman said amid the throng around 7 p.m. "I got here at 10 a.m., and I'll probably be here well past midnight, but we've been killing it all day. I could close now and still be happy with our bottom line."

In the alley behind the vintage goods store, the Lagunitas Brewing Company (one of the countless craft beer lines served at the Brewhouse) offered freebies. As folks strolled by, there was food provided by Diner Dogs, arts & crafts, and a vintage bicycle show on the way to the Kelsey at the opposite end.

Cornell Museum in Delray Beach is all 'Lit' up for summer

By Lucy Lazarony
ArtsPaper Art Writer

Everything about Lit — well, lights up.

From playful neon lights, to big bold works with bright bold words, to art created on Plexiglas and illuminated with LED lights, to art made from packaging tape on acrylic panels, to art with motion detectors that changes colors when a viewer steps into view.

The exhibition showcasing the unique art and light works of 16 contemporary and international artists is on display at the Cornell Museum in Delray Beach's Old School Square through Aug. 28.

London-born Chris Bracey, whose father was a neon signmaker, incorporates salvaged lights and signs and other objects into his work, proclaiming Sail Away With Me, Honey in one piece, and The Artificial Fascinates Me, The Bright & The Shiny, an Andy Warhol quote, in another.

The neon letters blaze bright against a handpainted wooden background, each word a distinct color and style of lettering.

Sam Tufnell taps into today's pop culture in his works made of resin.

"His work is very pop-art inspired. He has sculptures with very recognizable images; he has used the pop art in our popular culture of today and created art around it," says curator Melanie Johanson.

There are gnomes and Darth Vader masks, children's lettered blocks, even art made up from trash from around a neighborhood block.

"His works are so much fun.

West Palm spinning with summer art fun

By Sandra Schulman
ArtsPaper Art Writer

A new multimedia gallery space and a wildly imaginative and interactive installation will rev up the summer arts in West Palm Beach beginning this month:

The Box Gallery: Rolando Chang Barrero, who has galleries in Lake Worth and Boynton Beach, will open his third space, The Box, at 811 Belvedere Road this month.

Chang Barrero is a longtime South Florida figure in the arts and is the president of the Florida Arts Association and the co-founder of Art Synergy.

He created The Box Gallery “to enhance the burgeoning art scene of Palm Beach County. The 4,000-square-foot space is designed to be flexible to allow, 2D, 3D performance art, installation art, and time-based arts,” Chang Barrero says.

The Box Gallery is slated to open June 3-5. Chang Barrero says the grand opening “is being very carefully organized to show the potential of space.” The gallery also will serve as headquarters of Art Synergy and the Florida Arts Association.

with a playful and colorful art installation that has been turning heads — and bodies — around the country.

Los Trompos — 20 three-dimensional, brightly colored structures inspired by a famous spinning top toy — arrived June 2 and will run through Aug. 28 to continue the fun interactive public art installations the city and Art in Public Places have been providing.

Contemporary Mexican designers Héctor Esrawe and Ignacio Cadena created this interactive installation, which lets kids and adults jump on the individual spinning tops and collaborate to spin the works and bring Los Trompos to life. Each top has a unique shape inspired by both nature and traditional Latin American design, weaving, architecture and Mexican folk art.

“Only through this interaction and collaboration will the work come to life and be complete,” said Cadena.

“We wanted to talk about the traditions and skills of the craftsmen in Mexico, as an inheritance of our culture. We like the idea of translating these techniques into new symbols,” Esrawe said.

“It’s a fun, really joyful installation,” said Sybille Welter, who coordinates the Art in Public Places program. The tops will be dispersed to public parks throughout the city after their stint on the waterfront, she said.

Los Trompos will be available from 10 a.m. to 11 p.m. daily at the waterfront.

As its name suggests, visual art has been central to the Brewhouse Gallery since its inception. Pieces by area artists adorn its walls in three-month installments, with the lure of craft beers and quality live music creating extra exposure and foot traffic for the works by those locals.

A.J. Brockman is one of those artists, despite the fact that he has to work immeasurably harder as a creator. Only 27 years old, he’s spent 25 of those years confined to a wheelchair as the result of spinal muscular atrophy, a progressive neuromuscular disease.

Through creativity and perseverance, plus the tireless efforts of Jo over the years, the 2009 graduate of Digital Media Arts College in Boca Raton has ascended to the position of the unofficial artistic sheriff of Lake Park.

Friends and well-wishers surrounded Jo throughout the May 14 celebration, and as usual, A.J. drew a well-deserved congratulatory crowd.

Local artists contributing to Lit include Vincent J. Cacace of Delray Beach and Carol Prusa, an associate professor of art at Florida Atlantic University in Boca Raton. In Cacace’s oil paintings, the light of the moon and the sun serenade the ocean and majestic palms.

Prusa’s art pieces are created with silverpoint, graphite, and fiber optics. Each piece is shaped as a sphere or hemisphere with plenty of room for fiber optics or video inside.

“Each piece is a world of sorts,” Prusa says. “They were selected by Melanie because they all light up in some way either through video or fiber optics.”

Reviews

A chameleon Satchmo, a masterful Chorale and impressive tattoo art

Here are excerpts of reviews from current and recent shows. For full reviews, see palmbeachartspaper.com:

Satchmo at the Waldorf (Palm Beach Dramaworks, through June 12)

Actors like one-man shows because they allow them to display their performance versatility and stamina. Producers like one-man shows because they have low payrolls. If only there weren't those darned reviewers, for whom one-man shows are the bane of their existence, being dramatically inert and theatrically artificial.

The latest case in point is Satchmo at the Waldorf, a one-man biographical sketch of renowned jazz trumpeter Louis Armstrong. Curiously enough, it is written by Terry Teachout, longtime drama critic for The Wall Street Journal, who falls into most of the traps of the genre. Teachout is also making his directorial debut at Dramaworks, a worthy enough effort but not one that glosses over any of the play's shortcomings.

Satchmo at the Waldorf is certainly well researched and full of interesting information on Armstrong's life and career.

Often during Satchmo's 90 minutes, the charismatic Barry Shabaka Henley sits, microphone in hand, and dictates his memories, from his childhood in the rough-and-tumble Storyville section of New Orleans, to the many racial impediments he faced, to stardom on the concert stage, on television and in the movies.

Henley is the reason to see Satchmo at the Waldorf. In fact — in Teachout's most inspired touch — Henley plays three characters. In addition to Armstrong, he occasionally slips into the skin of his agent, Joe Glaser, who helped his client open racial doors but never invited him into his home. And he also briefly plays horn playing great Miles Davis, who clashes with Armstrong over his happy-go-lucky stage persona.

Henley moves among the three characters, changing voices and carriage, with chameleon ease.

In this production, you are bound to learn a great deal about Armstrong's inner struggles, and see a remarkable performance you will not soon forget. — Hap Erstein

Master Chorale of South Florida (Lynn University, May 1)

The Master Chorale closed its current season with a remarkably energetic and gritty Haydn mass that said positive things about the chorus and augured good things for its future.

Joined by a chamber orchestra from the Lynn Philharmonia, the Master Chorale and four fine soloists gave a bracing account of the Lord Nelson Mass, handling its many passages of contrapuntal complexity with confidence and vigor.

In addition, the concert opened with a surprise: the first movement of the Symphony No. 25 (in G minor, K. 183) of Mozart, played very ably by the Lynn student musicians.

Master Chorale director Brett Karlin led the Mozart with great energy as he moved the music along through its dramatic high points. The horns, which play such a key role in the echo of the second half of the main theme, sounded good and strong, and the oboist was equally fine.

The four soloists in the Lord Nelson Mass, all of excellent caliber, included soprano Meredith Ruduski, mezzo Misty Bermudez, tenor Steven Soph and bass-baritone Douglas Williams.

Ruduski has a high-floating, very pretty and rounded soprano that took the high As and B-flats of the first movement easily, and navigated the virtuosic runs of the movement with accuracy and flair.

Bermudez's dark mezzo added some beautiful color to the Benedictus and the Agnus Dei, where in her solo work she demonstrated an admirable smoothness of line and sensitivity. Tenor Soph's clear and clarion voice matched well with bass

Williams, and when the whole quartet sang, you could hear the depth and potency of all four singers.

Williams was the find of the day, with an absolutely beautiful reading of the Qui tollis that showcased a voice of dark-honey color and substantial presence. This solo covers about two octaves, and Williams's voice had an evenness that was effective at the top and bottom as much as in the middle.

The most important thing about the concert was the singing of the Master Chorale overall. The Lord Nelson Mass is not easy in any sense of the word; it has a great deal of counterpoint and difficult fugal writing. This Mass must have been presented to them by Karlin as a massive challenge that they would have to meet, because this large group rose to the occasion, and rose impressively. — Greg Stepanich

Perseverance: Japanese Tattoo Tradition in a Modern World (Morikami Museum, Delray Beach, closed May 8)

Imagine a colorful bird with a fish's tail, a snake's neck, and a turtle's shell expanding from the neck all the way to the ankles.

Perseverance features photographs of full body tattoos bursting with skill, history and symbolism. The intricate works by seven tattoo artists, including Horitaka, Junii and Yokohama Horiken, perfectly demonstrate why irezumi (Japanese tattoo) commands respect. It's not just its association with the yakuza. Along with the geisha, the tea ceremony and the samurai, irezumi preserves a certain enigma, an air of mystery. No other country's tattoos are feared and admired at the same time.

The photographs, shot by Kip Fulbeck, who also designed the show, are grouped according to the traditional symbols and motifs starring in the tattoos. In their presence, we get the feeling of looking at something forbidden. Dragons, tigers, lions, carp and cherry blossoms appear in vivid colors spreading over arms, thighs, calves and butt cheeks. Each group brags about the skill displayed, and we get to learn about the myth or legend driving it.

The phoenix-like creature is both male and female and stands as a symbol of happiness and good luck. Two koi together represent a happy marriage, while a single koi battling waves and swimming up a waterfall, represents success and strength. To the samurai, the sakura symbolized the renewal of life. Meanwhile, the dragon was worshipped by farmers who viewed it as the sea god that could ensure rainfall.

The strongest proof that Japanese tattoos are indeed an art form is the fact that they have not only endured, but also inspired new interpretations. Many non-Japanese tattoo artists have found them worthy of being studied and copied and reimagined. Among them is Chris Horishiki Brand, who is featured in the show.

Compared to its sibling traditions, irezumi still enjoys significantly less praise. But locked in the silhouettes of these dragons, screaming warriors, and lively fins is fierce determination.

This is a beautiful and stubborn practice determined to outlive the criticism and the negative connotations in order to be celebrated one day as an art form, which is why Perseverance is really the perfect name for the show. It captures the one thing its goal depends on. — Gretel Sarmiento

National writing award is a boost his old forklift can't deliver

By Ron Hayes

For 10 long years, J.W. Alden worked the graveyard shift at one of those mammoth retail warehouses. Maybe Costco, maybe Sam's Club, he'd rather not say.

He was the guy who spent his nights driving the forklift, stacking giant pallets of bottled water and toilet paper over the aisles.

He got home about 6 a.m. His wife, Allison Goff, left for work at 8. During the day, he tried to write science fiction stories.

And then one morning she looked at him and asked, "James, when are you going to just be a writer? Why don't you just get quit and write full-time?"

For his wife, it wasn't a tough call.

"He was a gray version of himself," she remembers, "unhappy, stuck in the grind with no time to be creative."

As the director of member and visitor services at the Flagler Museum in Palm Beach, she made a decent salary. She was climbing, happy in her career, but her husband clearly wasn't.

"I wanted us both to achieve our goals and couldn't stand to bear witness to him wasting his talent or his time," she said.

That was three years ago.

In April, the Hypoluxo resident was flown to Los Angeles, put up in a fancy hotel for a week and given a check for $1,000 and a trophy for his story, The Sun Falls Apart, at the 32nd L. Ron Hubbard Writers of the Future awards.

"The only thing I had to pay for was my food," he said. "It was a very cool experience walking down Hollywood Boulevard to the writers workshop every morning."

Founded in 1983 by Hubbard, the prolific sci-fi writer and founder of Scientology, the award celebrates only a dozen writers out of thousands of submissions. Alden spent the week learning from such science fiction luminaries as Orson Scott Card, Tim Powers and Larry Niven, and came home with a copy of L. Ron Hubbard Presents Writers of the Future, Vol. 32, containing his work.

The Sun Falls Apart is the story of Caleb, a boy who has never seen the sun. Raised behind boarded windows and a fortified door, his only hope of freedom is by passing strange tests his parents give him and for which he must use a power he doesn't understand.

"I've been writing off and on since I was a kid," Alden said, "but my love of science fiction has changed over the years. As a kid, it was all about the sense of wonder and possibility, space travel and magic. Now I see science fiction and fantasy also have the potential for metaphor and allegory. You're not confined to reality, so you can make a statement without being obvious."

After stepping off the forklift in 2013, Alden was accepted almost immediately into the six-week Odyssey Writing Workshop at St. Anselm College in Manchester, N.H. Then he came home and turned the family condo's spare bedroom into a writing cave.

"OK," he told himself, "I want to see how far I can go and make this dream a reality."

The dream is still more dream than reality, but it's gotten more real. He's sold 10 stories, about five to professional markets, and always been paid.

"I've never sunk to the unpaid level to get published," he said, "even if I'm only paid a penny a word."

Having a husband who sits home conjuring fantasy worlds after she heads off to work is fine with his wife.

"I wanted him to focus on his writing so I could see a different version of him," Goff said, "one with a genuine passion and perseverance. Neither of us has looked back once."

At the awards ceremony April 10, Alden thanked his wife.

"I can't communicate in words how vital she is to my growth as a writer," he said, "and a person."

Now, with published stories and a recognized writing award, his next challenge is to find an agent and boldly go where so many struggling writers have gone before — a first novel.

"I do have an idea for a novel," he said. "I'm a little nervous about it but also excited. It feels a little like reaching into the unknown."

Artist draws on history for first novel

By Steve Pike

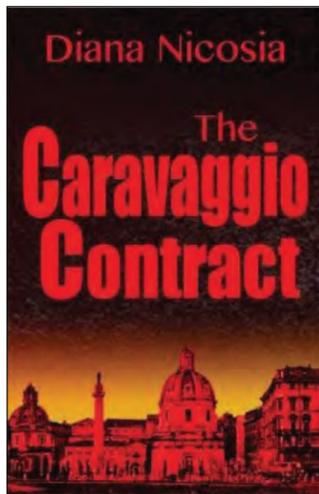

Unlike most artists of the Renaissance, Michelangelo Merisi da Caravaggio was famous during his lifetime. It was a brief, tumultuous life. Born in Milan, Italy, in 1571, Caravaggio — the father of Baroque art — died in poverty and mystery in 1610 in Porto Ercole, Italy.

Now, more than 400 years after he was found on a beach and died in a hospital run by monks, part-time Delray Beach resident Diana Nicosia weaves a tale in the same vein as The Da Vinci Code in her first novel.

Nicosia, an accomplished and well-known painter with studios in Boston and Delray Beach, used her knowledge of Italy and Italian art history as well as her eye for detail and research to produce a great piece of storytelling that's part art history, part travelogue and part historical fiction.

The Caravaggio Contract (Merrimack Media) is available on Amazon.com for $17.95. It's a sweeping story that involves a Rome antiques dealer, two Caravaggio paintings missing since the artist's death, murder and Italian crime syndicates.

"I've lived in all the places I write about — Naples, Capri, Rome," said Nicosia, whose paintings of Italian landscapes have been shown at galleries worldwide.

Nicosia's former home in Ansedonia, in southern Tuscany, was just above the beach where Caravaggio's body was found, so she has a personal relationship with his history and the area.

"The land where he walked, I've walked," said Nicosia, who began writing the self-published book more than eight years ago when the recession forced the closing of galleries that displayed her art. "It was like participating in my own funeral. I thought, is this the end of my career?"

It turned out not to be the end of her art career, but the seedling of her writing career. Nicosia answered an ad in an art club newsletter that was searching for writers.

"I told them I hadn't done any creative writing since college, but they accepted me," Nicosia said.

One day when Nicosia was painting in the Vatican Gardens — a rare treat for artists — she began talking to priests who were visiting on a day trip. The conversation naturally turned to Caravaggio and his mysterious demise near Nicosia's residence.

"They said, 'You don't know the story?' So they told me the story."

What the priests told Nicosia became the inspiration for The Caravaggio Contract.

"It was fun to have that premise and fun to see how the story unwound," Nicosia said. "It's been a steep learning curve, but I've really enjoyed it."★

It takes the community to strengthen our nonprofits

Strong nonprofits are vital to the health of our community. Executive director Rich Anderson knows Peggy Adams Animal Rescue League's endowment fund at the Community Foundation helps sustain their mission of caring for and protecting animals - forever.

Endowment funds at the Community Foundation create a permanent annual income stream for an organization and grow over time. Individual donors can also give directly to the fund today or through their will, helping their favorite nonprofit strengthen their future.

The Community Foundation for Palm Beach and Marlin Counties has protected and grown charitable assets for more than 40 years. Let us connect you to your favorite cause.

Hannah Herbst, at an FAU lab, shows her floatable prototype designed to provide a power source by using untapped energy from ocean currents. She won the Discovery Education 3M Young Scientist Challenge for her work. Tim Stepien/The Coastal Star

MAKING waves

Boca teen's prototype harnesses ocean energy and wins her a ticket to the White House

By Lucy Lazarony

Two years ago, Hannah Herbst was on a boat in the Boca inlet that was rocking back and forth due to the power of the ocean's currents.

She wondered at the time why no one had collected this power.

So she decided to do it.

"I started to develop my prototypes late in my seventh-grade year," says Hannah, 15, who just finished her freshman year at Florida Atlantic University High School.

With help from a 3M scientist, whose company sponsors the annual science challenge, Hannah created an ocean energy prototype that aims to provide a stable power source to developing countries by using untapped energy from ocean currents. The scientist she was paired with is Jeffrey Emslander, a chemical engineer at 3M who works at a Minneapolis lab. The two communicated via Skype.

The prototype they came up with is suited toward those who live near the ocean, as Hannah's family does.

"It's for anybody who lives near moving water," she says.

Hannah explains her prototype this way:

"The ocean currents spin

the Pelton wheels that are attached to a generator.

Comic performers teach God's word through laughter

The Skit Guys — Tommy Woodard of Edmond, Okla., and Eddie James of Sachse, Texas — have been using comedy and drama to teach God's word for more than 20 years. Best friends since high school, they're the class clowns but with an important message.

The duo performs around the world and also creates videos and scripts that are used by thousands of churches. Both are husbands and fathers and, when not touring, are active in their community churches.

They return to Cason United Methodist Church at 7:30 p.m. June 10 as part of the church's Run & Fun event. Tickets are $15; $25 for VIP, which includes early admission and preferred seating. The church is at 342 N. Swinton Ave. in Delray Beach. 276-5302; www.casonumc.org.

The Interfaith Cafe meets from 7 to 9 p.m. the third Thursday of the month at South County Civic Center, 16700 Jog Road, Delray Beach. Coffee, tea and light desserts are served. Suggested donation is $5. Email jane@aurorasvoice.org.

JAM & the All Broward County Interfaith Group

meets from 7 to 8:30 p.m. the third Monday at the Istanbul Cultural Center, 2500 W. Sample Road in Pompano Beach. The group, which has been meeting since the 9/11 attacks, promotes an interfaith dialogue and understanding by uniting people of different faiths in conversation. A different topic is discussed each month over coffee and tea. Admission is free. 954-600-6848 or email kathleenleonard@bellsouth.net.

Dinner helps campers

At 5:30 p.m. June 4, join the congregation of First United Methodist Church, 625 NE Mizner Blvd., Boca Raton, for dinner and games in support of the church's Children and Student Ministries. Dinner: $15 adults, $8 ages 10 and younger. Proceeds will help send campers to Warren Willis Camp and for the high school summer mission trip to Tennessee. www.fumcbocaraton.org.

Dr. John Strasswimmer is helping bring skin cancer screenings and treatments to the local migrant community. Behind Dr. Strasswimmer at Caridad Center are Dr. Sherry McQuown and Wilfido, a patient of Dr. Strasswimmer's. Tim Stepien/The Coastal Star

Spreading the word about skin cancer

Between his private practice in Delray Beach and his volunteer work at Caridad Center in western Boynton Beach, dermatologist John Strasswimmer treats people of every way of life and every skin tone. What they often have in common is their lack of knowledge about melanomas, the skin cancer that is Strasswimmer's specialty.

Strasswimmer, a nationally recognized skin cancer expert and surgeon, is using a $68,000 grant from the American Academy of Dermatology, the Pfizer Foundation and the Palm Beach County Dermatology Society to build a skin cancer education program for Caridad's clients.

At the end of this year, Strasswimmer and his team are scheduled to produce a report detailing their results.

"What's really exciting is that this will be a platform to train community health educators, a way for them to get the knowledge they need to educate the public," said Strasswimmer.

The study is the first of its kind for a low-income population in South Florida, who have not been involved in a melanoma study despite the fact that many of them work outdoors.

The largest free clinic in Florida, staffed by volunteer medical professionals, Caridad Center serves the working poor and recently uninsured clients. This summer Caridad is scheduled to open a melanoma center, including free screenings and treatment, just one part of the $5 million expansion of its facility from 7,500 to 15,000 square feet.

Caridad CEO Laura Kallus has a long wish list of equipment to fill the expanded center, including items as basic as a standard operating table. The doctors have so far made do with a gurney they adapted for surgery, shared by several doctors.

Educated at Tufts, Harvard and Yale, Strasswimmer served on the faculty of Harvard Medical School and the staff at Massachusetts General Hospital before moving to Palm Beach 10 years ago with his wife, Karin, an economist. He's been volunteering at Caridad since then.

Strasswimmer is the medical director of the melanoma and cutaneous oncology program at the Lynn Cancer Institute at Boca Raton Regional Hospital. He also serves on the faculty at FAU Medical School in the surgery and biochemistry departments.

The couple has gone on several medical missions to Africa, the Caribbean and Latin America.

On a recent day at the clinic, he greeted staff and checked on patients, flowing easily from English to Spanish, which he learned in high school.

"It's a very satisfying way to remember why you became a doctor," he said.

Skin cancer facts

Whether sun exposure comes from work or play, snorkeling or landscaping, many South Floridians are at risk.

Here are a few points Strasswimmer makes to dispel misconceptions he encounters:

- Melanoma is the No. 1 cancer for people ages 25-29. Fair-skinned people are not the only ones vulnerable to skin cancers. Dark-skinned people who never get sunburns can have melanoma and other deadly skin cancers.

- Among the results he is soon to publish is that 20 percent of people in minority communities think they can never get skin cancer.

"My wife's boss at MIT, an Armenian American professor, refused to wear a hat when he went fishing," says Strasswimmer.

- Sun exposure increases risk, but cancers can appear "anywhere you have skin, even areas not exposed to the sun," Strasswimmer says.

One of his patients at Caridad is a 30-year-old mother of three who had a skin cancer on her foot, which had to be amputated. Strasswimmer and his colleagues were able to provide her free treatment, including a prosthetic foot.

"Expect the dermatologist to look for them in places you never thought anybody would look," Strasswimmer says.

- Not wearing sunblock in order to absorb Vitamin D? "The level of Vitamin D that an internal medicine specialist would like us to have in our bodies is almost impossible to get by sun exposure," he says.

In addition to skin cancer, long-term sun exposure can lead to pterygium, sometimes called "surfer's eye," a cancer that can cover the surface of the eye and cause blindness.

- Melanoma is not always a dark splotch on the skin. It could be pink, red or clear. And it does not have to be large to be deadly.

Books

Rough lives laid bare in story of recovery

By Steve Pike

"I was born addicted to heroin."

That Garcia Marquez-esque line opens The Painting and the Piano, co-authored by Ocean Ridge residents John Lipscomb and Adrienne Lugo. The self-published book follows Lipscomb and Lugo from seemingly well-adjusted childhoods through the rock bottom of addiction and finally to lives of discovery, redemption and recovery.

As the opening line of the first chapter implies, The Painting and the Piano is not meant to be an altogether pleasant read. It is, however, a "must read" for anyone whose life — directly or indirectly — has been touched by addiction, a broken family, abandonment and isolation.

In other words, The Painting and the Piano (available on Amazon.com for $16.95, and e-book, Kindle, Nook and Apple I-Books for $6.95) is well-written but not an easy read.

Neither Lipscomb, a recovering alcoholic, nor Lugo, who was addicted to pills, pulls punches nor makes any excuses about laying bare their lives. One family friend of Lipscomb, in fact, discouraged him from writing the book as it would divulge secrets of Lipscomb's family life in the well-to-do community of Ladue, Mo., near St. Louis.

"All I knew was barbecue with beer," Lipscomb said. "I was a mess getting on a plane."

Lugo's story drew headlines more than four decades ago when a judge removed her from her middle-class foster parents on Long Island in favor of a heroin-addicted mother and father who lived in a dirty

Brooklyn apartment. The book includes pictures of headlines from the highly publicized custody trial between Lugo's foster parents and her biological mother, whom she described as a "monster."

"Even now it's hard for me to look at those pictures the day she came and got me," Lugo said. "I don't think she really wanted me."

Lipscomb and Lugo tell their stories as a tandem, but each of their stories blends into a fine piece of writing rarely seen in first-time authors.

"My story isn't very unique, but Adrienne's is," Lipscomb said. "Its combination of our stories and our coming together turns it into a love story."

But before the love, there were drugs and booze. It's not pretty, but it's compelling.

"We're doing this to help other people," said Lipscomb, who now lectures on addiction and together with Lugo, sponsors people with addictions. "It's kind of a gritty book — an emotional roller coaster. We don't look great in it, either. But it's our lives."

And in the end, their love story. ★

On the Water

Boynton artist says that fish will snap up his sea turtle-shaped lures

Many Palm Beach County anglers know that mutton snapper linger in shallow water during the summer months, waiting for baby sea turtles to enter the water from the beach.

Dana Cook of Boynton Beach, a lifelong angler and fly-tier who holds a degree in fine arts from Florida Atlantic University, knows that many ocean fish eat sea turtle hatchlings.

Watching a documentary on the hatchling sea turtle feeding frenzy led Cook to develop the Sea Turtle Hatcher, an imitation sea turtle lure made from a "leather-like" material tied to a 9/0 circle hook.

Cook says his lures will catch snook, tarpon, snappers and groupers along with pelagic fish that feed along the offshore mats of floating sargassum, where hatchling sea turtles spend the first year or more of their lives.

"Grouper have been caught on them. Sailfish have been caught on them. Pelagics love them," Cook said.

Cook said the imitation sea turtle lures feature legs that move independent of the body, giving the Hatchers a realistic appearance in the water. Once saturated, the sea turtle lure suspends in the water and moves up when the angler's rod tip is lifted.

Cook grew up tying flies in Philadelphia. After moving to Boca Raton, where he attended high school, he started fishing more and continued to create fish-catching lures on his fly-tying vise.

At one point in the early 1990s, Cook worked as a mate on the Two Georges drift boat, where he sold his buck-tail streamers, a drifting jig made with double hooks designed for catching kingfish with dead sardines.

Cook's marketing plan for the Sea Turtle Hatcher goes beyond selling to American tackle shops. He says the lure can prevent poaching of real sea turtle hatchlings that are used as bait.

"My ultimate success is going to be selling to countries like Trinidad that are in dire need of an alternative to prevent poaching," Cook said, adding that he's contacting government officials in the Bahamas, Belize and the Dominican Republic about his imitation sea turtle lure.

Daniel Evans, research specialist for the Gainesville-based Sea Turtle Conservancy, said people catching sea turtles for bait might pose a threat to hatchlings in some areas, but "it is certainly not a major threat to sea turtles on a regional or global scale."

But Evans noted that tarpon, dolphinfish, jacks, snook and "pretty much any large predatory fish found in tropical and subtropical waters" will eat sea turtle hatchlings.

The Sea Turtle Hatchers are available through Cook's website, www.dclures.com, along with trolling darts, snapper lures, two imitation shrimp, buck-tail streamers and an imitation field mouse for freshwater anglers trying to fool largemouth bass.

Lake Worth Lagoon Fishing Challenge set for June

Fishing and fisheries science will come together in June during the Lake Worth Lagoon Fishing Challenge — a fishing tournament that will help scientists better understand Palm Beach County's largest estuary.

Participants in the challenge will submit photos and other information about fish caught in the Lake Worth Lagoon, the estuary that extends 20 miles from North Palm Beach to Ocean Ridge.

Deadline for submissions is midnight June 30.

"By sharing details about the fish being caught in the lagoon, participants will help us better understand this local treasure that we are working hard to protect, restore and enhance," said Rob Robbins, director of Palm Beach County's Department of Environmental Resources Management.

To receive points in the Fishing Challenge, anglers must submit the date and time of their catch, the type and length of the fish caught as well as the location, which can be done through the tournament app.

For more details, go to www.LWLI.org/FishingChallenge or call 233-2400.

Team Woody's kingfish wins two tournaments

Michael Wood of West Palm Beach, fishing with his father, James, and two sisters, won heaviest fish awards in two fishing tournaments May 14 with a kingfish caught off Jupiter.

Wood said the big kingfish hit a live goggle-eye rigged with titanium leader and a stinger hook in 100 feet of water around 9:45 a.m.

Bull sharks were in the area, so the Wood family made sure to move their 25-foot boat Woody to the fish and gaff it as soon as possible.

"We were really fortunate we got him in the boat," Michael Wood said.

The kingfish weighed 50.5 pounds on the scales at the Old Key Lime House in the Lantana Derby and 50.6 on the Sail Inn's tournament scales at Boynton Harbor Marina.

The Wood family registered for both tournaments. Their hefty kingfish won them the $2,500 top prize in the Lantana Fishing Derby and $7,220 from the Sail Inn Tavern.

The first prototype batch came out in April and was offered to customers at the SaltWater Brewery's tasting room in Delray Beach, brewery spokeswoman Katelyn Perkins said.

"Over the next three months, we plan to perfect the product and produce 400,000 of them," Perkins said. Beer should be available in the rings later this summer, she said.

Tip of the month

Want a chance to win a boat, a truck or scholarship money by fishing this summer?

Check out CCA/Florida's STAR tournament.

The statewide fishing tournament began May 28 and continues through Sept. 5.

Anglers must be CCA/Florida members (or junior members) and registered for the STAR tournament to be eligible for prizes in several divisions.

The first seven registered anglers who catch one of 160 tagged redfish released around the state will be eligible for prizes, including a truck.

Anglers can also win prizes, including boats and college scholarships, by catching and submitting photos of a variety of other fish: snook, seatrout, cobia, sheepshead, dolphin, kingfish and lionfish.

An adult CCA/Florida membership costs $30. The entry fee for the STAR tournament is $35.

Paws Up for Pets

Have a plan for beloved pets after you are gone

Inside The Carlisle Palm Beach senior living community in Lantana, you expect to see activities like people playing cards, swimming laps in the pool and learning to paint with oils. But also inside generating smiles, sparking conversation and providing loyal companionship are the dogs and cats belonging to residents such as Agnes Simon.

Simon feels much younger than her 83 years, and she gives much of this credit to her poodle-Pekinese mix, Benji.

"I love everything about him and he is very spoiled," she says. "He listens to everything I say and I definitely think my health is better because of him and Harmony, my black cat. If you love your dog or cat, this is the place to be, for sure."

Recently, Simon celebrated Benji's 11th birthday by inviting residents with dogs to attend a paw-ty (that's how it was spelled on the invitations) complete with dog-safe cookies, ice cream and, of course, party hats for the seven or so canines in attendance.

Karen Delgado, director of resident programming, says that pet parades, doggy fashion shows, play dates and visits from certified therapy dogs also occur on a regular basis inside The Carlisle. Cats and dogs less than 20 pounds are welcomed four-legged residents.

"Residents who have dogs have seemed to network with one other," says Delgado. "Pets are so therapeutic. They give unconditional love and also give our seniors a reason to care for another — their pet. Some here who are alone get a lot of comfort from their pets."

It's true. Dogs, cats and other companion animals bonded to you don't care if you're tall or short, young or old. They unleash love easily and consistently.

One of my favorite ageless friends is Flo Frum. She helped deliver a litter of five healthy miniature schnauzer pups four months shy of her recent 92nd birthday. She lives in Oceanside, Calif., with a senior friend and together they thrive, sharing their home with the momma dog, Tyler, and one of the pups they kept, the spirited and friendly Tiny.

"I've had dogs all my life and don't intend to stop now that I'm 92," declares Frum. "Tyler and Tiny give me so much love and they make me laugh and smile. That is priceless."

Seniors like Agnes and Flo recognize that the secret to longevity and maintaining good health may be just a tail wag or a purr away.

Clinical studies sponsored by prestigious places such as the Mayo Clinic and Johns Hopkins University confirm what pet lovers have always known: Companion animals boost their people emotionally, physically and mentally. Studies indicate pets have the ability to elevate our levels of serotonin, endorphins and other feel-good body chemicals.

One vital way to return this unconditional love is to have a plan in place in the event your pet outlives you. Spearheading this effort on a national scale is Amy Shever, founder and director of 2nd Chance for Pets (www.2ndchance4pets.org), a nonprofit, all-volunteer group that provides information and solutions — including pet trusts — to help ensure pet owners have "lifetime care" in place for their pets.

The group's goal is to reduce the number of beloved pets relinquished and euthanized each year due to the death or disability of their owners.

"If every responsible pet owner had a written plan in place with a named caregiver, we could save 500,000 pets a year," says Shever. "Regardless of age, every responsible pet owner needs to have a plan of care, should their pets outlive them."

Key points in including pets in your will and estate planning include:

- Choose the best plan. Your choices include a pet trust or naming care instructions for your pet in your will or estate documents.
- Choose caregivers now who agree to care for your pet if you die or are not physically able. Carry an emergency pet ID card with you that contains the names and contact numbers for these designated caregivers.
- Create a written plan that states exactly how you want your pet to be cared for, including the type of food, grooming and other activities.

- Provide money for your pet's care. And if your pet dies with money left in the fund, select where that money should go — say an individual or a pet charity.

- Talk about it. Let trusted friends and family members know where your trust or other document is and let them know your care plans for your surviving pets.

"Having these care instructions makes it so much easier for whoever is taking care of the pet if the owner is in the hospital or nursing home," says Shever. "This makes this transition so much easier, especially on the pets."

"We even encourage giving copies of your pet estate plans to your veterinarian. Consider laminating a copy and keep it in a place where people can easily find it in your home."

I urge you to "sniff" around the www.2ndchance4pets.org site; it has plenty of resources to help you protect your pets should they outlive you.

energy. It doesn't create it. It transfers it because energy doesn't get created or destroyed."

In October, Hannah's project won the 2015 Discovery Education 3M Young Scientist Challenge.

Her idea and hard work took her all the way to the White House.

On April 13, she participated in President Barack Obama's sixth annual White House Science Fair, with other top science, technology, engineering and math students from around the country.

How was her trip to the White House?

"It was so cool," Hannah says. "We saw all the rooms I watch on TV. It was pretty amazing."

And she was the very first student the president talked to at the science fair.

"There were 40 kids displaying but he came to six," Hannah says. "He said, 'How are you?'" They spoke for about 10 minutes.

What did the president think of her ocean energy prototype?

"He said it was cool," Hannah recalls. "And he said he thought it would be a pretty good solution to the energy crisis."

Did she take a selfie with the president after their chat?

"I did not take a selfie with him, but I got a selfie with Bill Nye the Science Guy," Hannah admits.

The next stop for the budding inventor is the Intel International Science and Engineering Fair in Arizona.

"It's the largest pre-collegiate science fair in the world," she says.

Where did Hannah get her great love of science and innovation?

"In the seventh grade, my parents (Julie and Joel Herbst of coastal Boca Raton) took me to a science camp here at FAU. That's where my love of science was born," Hannah says. (Her dad is assistant dean of the pre-college schools and educational programs at FAU.)

"It was a camp where we built robots.

"It was really empowering, and I began to do more stuff that I couldn't do before."

She has a younger brother, Max, 13, who is also interested in science. ★

House of the Month

Each month, The Coastal Star features a house for sale in our community. The House of the Month is presented as a service to our advertisers and provides readers with a peek inside one of our houses.

This British Colonial-style oceanfront house has 9,870 square feet of living space under air, along Old Ocean Boulevard.

An elegant stairway and custom millwork are features of the living room and grand hall. Windows offer sweeping ocean views.

Beachside oasis in Ocean Ridge

This magnificent estate is walled and gated for privacy. A Chicago brick driveway leads to the motor court entrance of this six-bedroom, 8.5-bathroom residence with a four-car garage. There is also a one-bedroom, one-bath private guest house on site.

All the major rooms have endless ocean vistas with balconies and verandas to catch the southeast breezes.

Additionally the home has a library/study, gym, poolside bar and billiard room, theater and a climate-controlled wine cellar. It is lushly landscaped and includes a full-house generator.

Offered for $12 million by The Fite Group. Call Val Coz at (561) 655-6570 (office) or (561) 386-8011 (cell) or email vcoz@fitegroup.com.

ABOVE: An elegant kitchen with all the requisite goods for the professional chef. The formal dining room nearby is accessed by antique leaded glass doors from France.

LEFT: Pool area offers plenty of private space to unwind and to entertain.

Wine cellar holds 2,000 bottles.
